The other seven letters of the New Testament that follow the Pauline corpus are collectively referred to as the "Catholic Epistles." This term, which means "universal," refers to the fact that most of them are directed not to a single Christian community, as are most of the Pauline letters, but to a wider audience; see the Introduction to the catholic letters. Three of them (1-2-3 John) are closely related to the fourth gospel and thus belong to the Johannine corpus. The catholic letters, like those of the Pauline corpus, are also arranged in roughly descending order of length, but the three Johannine letters are kept together and Jude is placed at the end.

The genuine letters of Paul are earlier in date than any of our written gospels. The dates of the other New Testament letters are more difficult to determine, but for the most part they belong to the second and third Christian generations rather than to the first.

The Letter to the

ROMANS

Of all the letters of Paul, that to the Christians at Rome has long held pride of place. It is the longest and most systematic unfolding of the apostle's thought, expounding the gospel of God's righteousness that saves all who believe (1, 16-17); it reflects a universal outlook, with special implications for Israel's relation to the church (chs 9-11). Yet, like all Paul's letters, Romans too arose out of a specific situation, when the apostle wrote from Greece, likely Corinth, between A.D. 56 and 58 (cf Acts 20, 2-3).

Paul at that time was about to leave for Jerusalem with a collection of funds for the impoverished Jewish Christian believers there, taken up from his predominantly Gentile congregations (15, 25-27). He planned then to travel on to Rome and to enlist support there for a mission to Spain (15, 24.28). Such a journey had long been on his mind (1, 9-13; 15, 23). Now, with much missionary preaching successfully accomplished in the East (15, 19), he sought new opportunities in the West (15, 20-21), in order to complete the divine plan of evangelization in the Roman world. Yet he recognized that the visit to Jerusalem would be hazardous (15, 30-32), and we know from Acts that Paul was arrested there and came to Rome only in chains, as a prisoner (Acts 21-28, especially 21, 30-33 and 28, 14.30-31).

The existence of a Christian community in Rome antedates Paul's letter there. When it arose, likely within the sizable Jewish population at Rome, and how, we do not know. The Roman historian Suetonius mentions an edict of the Emperor Claudius about A.D. 49 ordering the expulsion of Jews from Rome in connection with a certain "Chrestus," probably involving a dispute in the Jewish community over Jesus as the Messiah ("Christus"). According to Acts 18, 2, Aquila and Priscilla (or Prisca, as in Rom 16, 3) were among those driven out; from them, in Corinth, Paul may have learned about conditions in the church at Rome.

Opinions vary as to whether Jewish or Gentile Christians predominated in the house churches (cf 16, 5) in the capital city of the empire at the time Paul wrote. Perhaps already by then Gentile Christians were in the majority. Paul speaks in Romans of both Jews and Gentiles (3, 9.29; see the note on 1, 14). The letter also refers to those "weak in faith" (14, 1) and those "who are strong" (15, 1); this terminology may reflect not so much differences between believers of Jewish and of Gentile background, respectively, as an ascetic tendency in some converts (14, 2) combined with Jewish laws about clean and unclean foods (14, 14.20). The issues were similar to problems that Paul had faced in Corinth (1 Cor 8). If Romans 16 is part of the letter to Rome (see the note on 16, 1-23), then Paul had considerable information about conditions in Rome through all these people there whom he knew, and our letter does not just reflect a generalized picture of an earlier situation in Corinth.

In any case, Paul writes to introduce himself and his message to the Christians at Rome, seeking to enlist their support for the proposed mission to Spain. He therefore employs formulations likely familiar to the Christians at Rome; see the note on the confessional material at 1, 3-4 and compare 3, 25-26 and 4, 25. He cites the Old Testament frequently (1, 17; 3, 10-18; ch 4; 9, 7.12-13.15.17.25-29.33; 10, 5-13.15-21; 15, 9-12). The gospel Paul presents is meant to be a familiar one to those in Rome, even though they heard it first from other preachers.

As the outline below shows, this gospel of Paul (see 16, 25) finds its center in salvation and justification through faith in Christ (1, 16-17). While God's wrath is revealed against all sin and wickedness of Gentile and Jew alike (1, 18—3, 20), God's power to save by divine righteous or justifying action in Christ is also revealed (1, 16-17; 3, 21—5, 21). The consequences and implications for those who believe are set forth (6, 1—8, 39), as are results for those in Israel (chs 9-11) who, to Paul's great sorrow (9, 1-5), disbelieve. The apostle's hope is that, just as rejection of the gospel by some in Israel has led to a ministry of salvation for non-Jews, so one day, in God's mercy, "all Israel" will be saved (11, 11-15.25-29.30-32). The fuller ethical response of believers is also drawn out, both with reference to life in Christ's body (ch 12) and with regard to the world (13, 1-7), on the basis of the eschatological situation (13, 11-14) and conditions in the community (14, 1—15, 13).

Others have viewed Romans more in the light of Paul's earlier, quite polemical Letter to the Galatians and so see the theme as the relationship between Judaism and Christianity, a topic judged to be much in the minds of the Roman Christians. Each of these religious faiths claimed to be the way of salvation based upon a covenant between God and a people chosen and made the beneficiary of divine gifts. But Christianity regarded itself as the prophetic development and fulfillment of the faith of the Old Testament, declaring that the preparatory Mosaic covenant must now give way to the new and more perfect covenant in Jesus Christ. Paul himself had been the implacable advocate of freedom of Gentiles from the laws of the Mosaic covenant and, especially in Galatia, had refused to allow attempts to impose them on Gentile converts to the gospel. He had witnessed the personal hostilities that developed between the adherents of the two faiths and had written his strongly worded letter to the Galatians against those Jewish Christians who were seeking to persuade Gentile Christians to adopt the religious practices of Judaism. For him, the purity of the religious understanding of Jesus as the source of salvation would be seriously impaired if Gentile Christians were obligated to amalgamate the two religious faiths.

Still others find the theme of Israel and the church as expressed in Romans 9-11 to be the heart of Romans. Then the implication of Paul's exposition of justification by faith rather than by means of law is that the divine plan of salvation works itself out on a broad theological plane to include the whole of humanity, despite the differences in the content of the given religious system to which a human culture is heir. Romans presents a plan of salvation stretching from Adam through Abraham and Moses to Christ (chs 4 and 5) and on to the future revelation at Christ's parousia (8, 18-25). Its outlook is universal.

Paul's Letter to the Romans is a powerful exposition of the doctrine of the supremacy of Christ and of faith in Christ as the source of salvation. It is an implicit plea to the Christians at Rome, and to all Christians, to hold fast to that faith. They are to resist any pressure put on them to accept a doctrine of salvation through works of the law (see the note on 10, 4). At the same time they are not to exaggerate Christian freedom as an abdication of responsibility for others (12, 1-2) or as a repudiation of God's law and will (see the notes on 3, 9-26; 3, 31; 7, 7-12.13-25).

The principal divisions of the Letter to the Romans are the following:

- I: Address (1, 1-15)
- II: Humanity Lost without the Gospel (1, 16—3, 20)
- III: Justification through Faith in Christ (3, 21—5, 21)
- IV: Justification and the Christian Life (6, 1—8, 39)
- V: Jews and Gentiles in God's Plan (9, 1—11, 36)
- VI: The Duties of Christians (12, 1—15, 13)
- VII: Conclusion (15, 14—16, 27)

I: ADDRESS

CHAPTER 1

Greeting.† [1]† Paul, a slave of Christ Jesus, called to be an apostle and set apart for the gospel of God, [2]* which he promised previously through his prophets in the holy scriptures, [3]† the gospel about his Son, descended from David according to the flesh, [4] but established as Son of God in power according to the spirit of holiness through resurrection from the dead, Jesus Christ our Lord. [5]† Through him we have received the grace of apostleship, to bring about the obedience of faith, for the sake of his name, among all the Gentiles, [6] among whom are you also, who are called to belong to Jesus Christ; [7]*† to all the beloved of God in Rome, called to be holy. Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Thanksgiving. [8]† First, I give thanks to my God through Jesus Christ for all of you, because your faith is heralded throughout the world. [9] God is my witness, whom I serve with my spirit in proclaiming the gospel of his Son, that I remember you constantly, [10]† always asking in my prayers that somehow by God's will I may at last find my way clear to come to you. [11] For I long to see you, that I may share with you some spiritual gift so that you may be strengthened, [12] that is, that you and I may be mutually encouraged by one another's faith, yours and mine. [13]† I do not want you to be unaware, brothers, that I often planned to come to you, though I was prevented until now, that I might harvest some fruit among you, too, as among the rest of the Gentiles. [14]† To Greeks and non-Greeks alike, to the wise and the ignorant, I am under obligation; [15] that is why I am eager to preach the gospel also to you in Rome.

1, 1-7: In Paul's letters the greeting or praescriptio follows a standard form, though with variations. It is based upon the common Greco-Roman epistolary practice, but with the addition of Semitic and specifically Christian elements. The three basic components are: name of sender; name of addressee; greeting. In identifying himself, Paul often adds phrases to describe his apostolic mission; this element is more developed in Rom than in any other letter. Elsewhere he associates co-workers with himself in the greeting: Sosthenes (1 Cor), Timothy (2 Cor; Phil; Phlm), Silvanus (1-2 Thes). The standard secular greeting was the infinitive chairein, "greetings." Paul uses instead the similar-sounding charis, "grace," together with the Semitic greeting šālōm (Greek eirēnē), "peace." These gifts, foreshadowed in God's dealings with Israel (see Nm 6, 24-26), have been poured out abundantly in Christ, and Paul wishes them to his readers. In Rom the Pauline praescriptio is expanded and expressed in a formal tone; it emphasizes Paul's office as apostle to the Gentiles. Verses 3-4 stress the gospel or kerygma, v 2 the fulfillment of God's promise, and vv 1 and 5 Paul's office. On his call, see Gal 1, 15-16; 1 Cor 9, 1; 15, 8-10; Acts 9, 1-22; 22, 3-16; 26, 4-18.

1, 1: Slave of Christ Jesus: Paul applies the term slave to himself in order to express his undivided allegiance to the Lord of the church, the Master of all, including slaves and masters. "No one can serve (i.e., be a slave to) two masters," said Jesus (Mt 6, 24). It is this aspect of the slave-master relationship rather than its degrading implications that Paul emphasizes when he discusses Christian commitment.

1, 3-4: Paul here cites an early confession that proclaims Jesus' sonship as messianic descendant of David (cf Mt 22, 42; 2 Tm 2, 8; Rv 22, 16) and as Son of God by the resurrection. As "life-giving spirit" (1 Cor 15, 45), Jesus Christ is able to communicate the Spirit to those who believe in him.

1, 5: Paul recalls his apostolic office, implying that the Romans know something of his history. The obedience of faith: as Paul will show at length in chs 6-8 and 12-15, faith in God's justifying action in Jesus Christ relates one to God's gift of the new life that is made possible through the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ and the activity of the holy Spirit (see especially 8, 1-11).

1, 7: Called to be holy: Paul often refers to Christians as "the holy ones" or "the saints." The Israelite community was called a "holy assembly" because they had been separated for the worship and service of the Lord (see Lv 11, 44; 23, 1-44). The Christian community regarded its members as sanctified by baptism (6, 22; 15, 16; 1 Cor 6, 11; Eph 5, 26-27). Christians are called to holiness (1 Cor 1, 2; 1 Thes 4, 7), that is, they are called to make their lives conform to the gift they have already received.

1, 8: In Greco-Roman letters, the greeting was customarily followed by a prayer. The Pauline letters usually include this element (except Gal and Ti), expressed in Christian thanksgiving formulas and usually stating the principal theme of the letter. In 2 Cor the thanksgiving becomes a blessing, and in Eph it is preceded by a lengthy blessing. Sometimes the thanksgiving is blended into the body of the letter, especially in 1 Thes. In Rom it is stated briefly.

1, 10-12: Paul lays the groundwork for his more detailed statement in 15, 22-24 about his projected visit to Rome.

1, 13: Brothers is idiomatic for all Paul's "kin in Christ," all those who believe in the gospel; it includes women as well as men (cf 4, 3).

1, 14: Greeks and non-Greeks: literally, "Greeks and barbarians." As a result of Alexander's conquests, Greek became the standard international language of the Mediterranean world. Greeks in Paul's statement therefore means people who know Greek or who have been influenced by Greek culture. Non-Greeks were people whose cultures remained substantially unaffected by Greek influences. Greeks called such people "barbarians" (cf Acts 28, 2), meaning people whose speech was foreign. Roman citizens would scarcely classify themselves as such, and Nero, who was reigning when Paul wrote this letter, prided himself on his admiration for Greek culture. Under obligation: Paul will expand on the theme of obligation in 13, 8; 15, 1.27.

God's Power for Salvation.† [16] For I am not ashamed of the gospel. It is the power of God for the salvation of everyone who believes: for Jew first, and then Greek. [17]*† For in it is revealed the righteousness of God from faith to faith; as it is written, "The one who is righteous by faith will live."

Punishment of Idolators.† [18]† The wrath of God is indeed being revealed from heaven against every impiety and wickedness of those who suppress the truth by their wickedness. [19]* For what can be known about God is evident to them, because God made it evident to them. [20]* Ever since the creation of the world, his invisible attributes of eternal power and divinity have been able to be understood and perceived in what he has made. As a result, they have no excuse; [21]* for although they knew God they did not accord him glory as God or give him thanks. Instead, they became vain in their reasoning, and their senseless minds were darkened. [22]* While claiming to be wise, they became fools [23]* and exchanged the glory of the immortal God for the likeness of an image of mortal man or of birds or of four-legged animals or of snakes.

[24]† Therefore, God handed them over to impurity through the lusts of their hearts for the mutual degradation of their bodies. [25] They exchanged the truth of God for a lie and revered and worshiped the creature rather than the creator, who is blessed forever. Amen. [26] Therefore, God handed them over to degrading passions. Their females exchanged natural relations for unnatural, [27]* and the males likewise gave up natural relations with females and burned with lust for one another. Males did shameful things with males and thus received in their own persons the due penalty for their perversity. [28] And since they did not see fit to acknowledge God, God handed them over to their undiscerning mind to do what is improper. [29]* They are filled with every form of wickedness, evil, greed, and malice; full of envy, murder, rivalry, treachery, and spite. They are gossips [30] and scandalmongers and they hate God. They are insolent, haughty, boastful, ingenious in their wickedness, and rebellious toward their parents. [31] They are senseless, faithless, heartless, ruthless. [32]* Although they know the just decree of God that all who practice such things deserve death, they not only do them but give approval to those who practice them.

† 1, 16-17: The principal theme of the letter is salvation through faith. I am not ashamed of the gospel: Paul is not ashamed to proclaim the gospel, despite the criticism that Jews and Gentiles leveled against the proclamation of the crucified savior; cf 1 Cor 1, 23-24. Paul affirms, however, that it is precisely through the crucifixion and resurrection of Jesus that God's saving will and power become manifest. Jew first (cf 2, 9-10) means that Jews especially, in view of the example of Abraham (ch 4), ought to be the leaders in the response of faith.

1, 17: In it is revealed the righteousness of God from faith to faith: the gospel centers in Jesus Christ, in whom God's saving presence and righteousness in history have been made known. Faith is affirmation of the basic purpose and meaning of the Old Testament as proclamation of divine promise (2; 4, 13) and exposure of the inability of humanity to effect its salvation even through covenant law. Faith is the gift of the holy Spirit and denotes acceptance of salvation as God's righteousness, that is, God's gift of a renewed relationship in forgiveness and power for a new life. Faith is response to God's total claim on people and their destiny. The one who is righteous by faith will live: see the note on Hb 2, 4.

1, 18—3, 20: Paul aims to show that all humanity is in a desperate plight and requires God's special intervention if it is to be saved.

1, 18-32: In this passage Paul uses themes and rhetoric common in Jewish-Hellenistic mission proclamation (cf Wis 13, 1—14, 31) to indict especially the non-Jewish world. The close association of idolatry and immorality is basic, but the generalization needs in all fairness to be balanced against the fact that non-Jewish Christian society on many levels displayed moral attitudes and performance whose quality would challenge much of contemporary Christian culture. Romans themselves expressed abhorrence over devotion accorded to animals in Egypt. Paul's main point is that the wrath of God does not await the end of the world but goes into action at each present moment in humanity's history when misdirected piety serves as a facade for self-interest.

1, 18: The wrath of God: God's reaction to human sinfulness, an Old Testament phrase that expresses the irreconcilable opposition between God and evil (see Is 9, 11.16.18.20; 10, 4; 30, 27). It is not contrary to God's universal love for his creatures, but condemns Israel's turning aside from the covenant obligations. Hosea depicts Yahweh as suffering intensely at the thought of having to punish Israel (Hos 11, 8-9). God's wrath was to be poured forth especially on the "Day of Yahweh" and thus took on an eschatological connotation (see Zep 1, 15).

1, 24: In order to expose the depth of humanity's rebellion against the Creator, God handed them over to impurity through the lusts of their hearts. Instead of curbing people's evil interests, God abandoned them to self-indulgence, thereby removing the facade of apparent conformity to the divine will. Subsequently Paul will show that the Mosaic law produces the same effect; cf 5, 20; 7, 13-24. The divine judgment expressed here is related to the theme of hardness of heart described in 9, 17-18.

God's Just Judgment.† [1]† Therefore, you are without excuse, every one of you who passes judgment. For by the standard by which you judge another you condemn yourself, since you, the judge, do the very same things. [2] We know that the judgment of God on those who do such things is true. [3] Do you suppose, then, you who judge those who engage in such things and yet do them yourself, that you will escape the judgment of God? [4]* Or do you hold his priceless kindness, forbearance, and patience in low esteem, unaware that the kindness of God would lead you to repentance? [5]* By your stubbornness and impenitent heart, you are storing up wrath for yourself for the day of wrath and revelation of the just judgment of God, [6]† who will repay everyone according to his works: [7] eternal life to those who seek glory, honor, and immortality through perseverance in good works, [8] but wrath and fury to those who selfishly disobey the truth and obey wickedness. [9] Yes, affliction and distress will come upon every human being who does evil, Jew first and then Greek. [10]* But there will be glory, honor, and peace for everyone who does good, Jew first and then Greek. [11]*† There is no partiality with God.

Judgment by the Interior Law.† [12]* All who sin outside the law will also perish without reference to it, and all who sin under the law will be judged in accordance with it. [13]* For it is not those who hear the law who are just in the sight of God; rather, those who observe the law will be justified. [14]* For when the Gentiles who do not have the law by nature observe the prescriptions of the law, they are a law for themselves even though they do not have the law. [15]† They show that the demands of the law are written in their hearts, while their conscience also bears witness and their conflicting thoughts accuse or even defend them [16]* on the day when, according to my gospel, God will judge people's hidden works through Christ Jesus.

Judgment by the Mosaic Law.† [17]* Now if you call yourself a Jew and rely on the law and boast of God [18]* and know his will and are able to discern what is important since you are instructed from the law, [19]* and if you are confident that you are a guide for the blind and a light for those in darkness, [20]* that you are a trainer of the foolish and teacher of the simple, because in the law you have the formulation of knowledge and truth—[21]* then you who teach another, are you failing to teach yourself? You who preach against stealing, do you steal? [22] You who forbid adultery, do you commit adultery? You who detest idols, do you rob temples? [23] You who boast of the law, do you dishonor God by breaking the law? [24]*† For, as it is written, "Because of you the name of God is reviled among the Gentiles."

[25]* Circumcision, to be sure, has value if you observe the law; but if you break the law, your circumcision has become uncircumcision. [26]* Again, if an uncircumcised man keeps the precepts of the law, will he not be considered circumcised? [27] Indeed, those who are physi-

2, 1—3, 20: After his general indictment of the Gentile, Paul shows that in spite of special revelation Jews enjoy no advantage in moral status before God (3, 1-8). With the entire human race now declared guilty before God (3, 9-20), Paul will then be able to display the solution for the total problem: salvation through God's redemptive work that is revealed in Christ Jesus for all who believe (3, 21-31).

2, 1-11: As a first step in his demonstration that Jews enjoy no real moral supremacy over Gentiles, Paul explains that the final judgment will be a review of performance, not of privilege. From this perspective Gentiles stand on an equal footing with Jews, and Jews cannot condemn the sins of Gentiles without condemning themselves.

2, 6: Will repay everyone according to his works: Paul reproduces the Septuagint text of Ps 62, 12 and Prv 24, 12.

2, 11: No partiality with God: this sentence is not at variance with the statements in vv 9-10. Since Jews are the first to go under indictment, it is only fair that they be given first consideration in the distribution of blessings. Basic, of course, is the understanding that God accepts no bribes (Dt 10, 17).

2, 12-16: Jews cannot reasonably demand from Gentiles the standard of conduct inculcated in the Old Testament since God did not address its revelation to them. Rather, God made it possible for Gentiles to know instinctively the difference between right and wrong. But, as Paul explained in 1, 18-32, humanity misread the evidence of God's existence, power, and divinity, and "while claiming to be wise, they became fools" (1, 22).

2, 15: Paul expands on the thought of Jer 31, 33; Wis 17, 11.

2, 17-29: Mere possession of laws is no evidence of virtue. By eliminating circumcision as an elitist moral sign, Paul clears away the last obstacle to his presentation of justification through faith without claims based on the receipt of circumcision and its attendant legal obligations.

2, 24: According to Is 52, 5 the suffering of Israel prompts her enemies to revile God. Paul uses the passage in support of his point that the present immorality of Israelites is the cause of such defamation.

cally uncircumcised but carry out the law will pass judgment on you, with your written law and circumcision, who break the law. [28]* One is not a Jew outwardly. True circumcision is not outward, in the flesh. [29]* Rather, one is a Jew inwardly, and circumcision is of the heart, in the spirit, not the letter; his praise is not from human beings but from God.

Answers to Objections.† [1] What advantage is there then in being a Jew? Or what is the value of circumcision? [2]* Much, in every respect. [For] in the first place, they were entrusted with the utterances of God. [3]* What if some were unfaithful? Will their infidelity nullify the fidelity of God? [4]*† Of course not! God must be true, though every human being is a liar, as it is written:

> "That you may be justified in your words,
> and conquer when you are judged."

[5]* But if our wickedness provides proof of God's righteousness, what can we say? Is God unjust, humanly speaking, to inflict his wrath? [6] Of course not! For how else is God to judge the world? [7] But if God's truth redounds to his glory through my falsehood, why am I still being condemned as a sinner? [8]* And why not say—as we are accused and as some claim we say—that we should do evil that good may come of it? Their penalty is what they deserve.

Universal Bondage to Sin.† [9]* Well, then, are we better off? Not entirely, for we have already brought the charge against Jews and Greeks alike that they are all under the domination of sin, [10]* as it is written:

> "There is no one just, not one, > [11] there is no one who understands,
> there is no one who seeks God.
> [12] All have gone astray; all alike are worthless;
> there is not one who does good,
> [there is not] even one.
> [13]* Their throats are open graves;
> they deceive with their tongues;
> the venom of asps is on their lips;
> [14]* their mouths are full of bitter cursing.
> [15]* Their feet are quick to shed blood;
> [16] ruin and misery are in their ways,
> [17] and the way of peace they know not.
> [18]* There is no fear of God before their eyes."

[19]† Now we know that what the law says is addressed to those under the law, so that every mouth may be silenced and the whole world stand accountable to God, [20]† since no human being will be justified in his sight by observing the law; for through the law comes consciousness of sin.

Justification apart from the Law.† [21]† But now the righteousness of God has been manifested apart from the law, though testified to by the law and the prophets, [22] the righteousness of God through faith in Jesus Christ for all who believe. For there is no distinction; [23]* all have sinned and are deprived of the glory of God. [24]* They are

3, 1-4: In keeping with the popular style of diatribe, Paul responds to the objection that his teaching on the sinfulness of all humanity detracts from the religious prerogatives of Israel. He stresses that Jews have remained the vehicle of God's revelation despite their sins, though this depends on the fidelity of God.

3, 4: Though every human being is a liar: these words reproduce the Greek text of Ps 116, 11. The rest of the verse is from Ps 51, 6.

3, 9-20: Well, then, are we better off?: this phrase can also be translated "Are we at a disadvantage?" but the latter version does not substantially change the overall meaning of the passage. Having explained that Israel's privileged status is guaranteed by God's fidelity, Paul now demonstrates the infidelity of the Jews by a catena of citations from scripture, possibly derived from an existing collection of testimonia. These texts show that all human beings share the common burden of sin. They are linked together by mention of organs of the body: throat, tongue, lips, mouth, feet, eyes.

3, 19: The law: Paul here uses the term in its broadest sense to mean all of the scriptures; none of the preceding texts is from the Torah or Pentateuch.

3, 20: No human being will be justified in his sight: these words are freely cited from Ps 143, 2. In place of the psalmist's "no living person," Paul substitutes "no human being" (literally "no flesh," a Hebraism), and he adds "by observing the law."

3, 21-31: These verses provide a clear statement of Paul's "gospel," i.e., the principle of justification by faith in Christ. God has found a means of rescuing humanity from its desperate plight: Paul's general term for this divine initiative is the righteousness of God (21). Divine mercy declares the guilty innocent and makes them so. God does this not as a result of the law but apart from it (21), and not because of any merit in human beings but through forgiveness of their sins (24), in virtue of the redemption wrought in Christ Jesus for all who believe (22.24-25). God has manifested his righteousness in the coming of Jesus Christ, whose saving activity inaugurates a new era in human history.

3, 21: But now: Paul adopts a common phrase used by Greek authors to describe movement from disaster to prosperity. The expressions indicate that vv 21-26 are the consolatory answer to vv 9-20.

justified freely by his grace through the redemption in Christ Jesus, [25]*† whom God set forth as an expiation, through faith, by his blood, to prove his righteousness because of the forgiveness of sins previously committed, [26] through the forbearance of God—to prove his righteousness in the present time, that he might be righteous and justify the one who has faith in Jesus.

[27]† What occasion is there then for boasting? It is ruled out. On what principle, that of works? No, rather on the principle of faith. [28] For we consider that a person is justified by faith apart from works of the law. [29]* Does God belong to Jews alone? Does he not belong to Gentiles, too? Yes, also to Gentiles, [30]* for God is one and will justify the circumcised on the basis of faith and the uncircumcised through faith. [31]*† Are we then annulling the law by this faith? Of course not! On the contrary, we are supporting the law.

Abraham Justified by Faith.† [1]* What then can we say that Abraham found, our ancestor according to the flesh? [2]† Indeed, if Abraham was justified on the basis of his works, he has reason to boast; but this was not so in the sight of God. [3]† For what does the scripture say? "Abraham believed God, and it was credited to him as righteousness." [4] A worker's wage is credited not as a gift, but as something due. [5] But when one does not work, yet believes in the one who justifies the ungodly, his faith is credited as righteousness. [6] So also David declares the blessedness of the person to whom God credits righteousness apart from works:

[7]* "Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven and whose sins are covered.

[9]† Does this blessedness apply only to the circumcised, or to the uncircumcised as well? Now we assert that "faith was credited to Abraham as righteousness." [10] Under what circumstances was it credited? Was he circumcised or not? He was not circumcised, but uncircumcised. [11] And he received the sign of circumcision as a seal on the righteousness received through faith while he was uncircumcised. Thus he was to be the father of all the uncircumcised who believe, so that to them [also] righteousness might be credited, [12] as well as the father of the circumcised who not only are circumcised, but also follow the path of faith that our father Abraham walked while still uncircumcised.

Inheritance through Faith. [13]* It was not through the law that the promise was made to Abraham and his descendants that he would inherit the world, but through the righteousness that comes from faith. [14]* For if those who adhere to the law are the heirs, faith is null and the promise is void. [15]*† For the law produces wrath; but where there is no law, neither is there viola-

3, 25: Expiation: this rendering is preferable to "propitiation," which suggests hostility on the part of God toward sinners. As Paul will be at pains to point out (5, 8-10), it is humanity that is hostile to God.

3, 27-31: People cannot boast of their own holiness, since it is God's free gift (27), both to the Jew who practices circumcision out of faith and to the Gentile who accepts faith without the Old Testament religious culture symbolized by circumcision (29-30).

3, 27: Principle of faith: literally, "law of faith." Paul is fond of wordplay involving the term "law"; cf 7, 21.23; 8, 2. Since "law" in Greek may also connote "custom" or "principle," his readers and hearers would have sensed no contradiction in the use of the term after the negative statement concerning law in v 20.

3, 31: We are supporting the law: giving priority to God's intentions. God is the ultimate source of law, and the essence of law is fairness. On the basis of the Mosaic covenant, God's justice is in question if those who sinned against the law are permitted to go free (see 23-26). In order to rescue all humanity rather than condemn it, God thinks of an alternative: the law or "principle" of faith (27). What can be more fair than to admit everyone into the divine presence on the basis of forgiveness grasped by faith? Indeed, this principle of faith antedates the Mosaic law, as Paul will demonstrate in ch 4, and does not therefore mark a change in divine policy.

4, 1-25: This is an expanded treatment of the significance of Abraham's faith, which Paul discusses in Gal 3, 6-18; see the notes there.

4, 2-5: Verse 2 corresponds to v 4, and v 3 to v 5. The Greek term here rendered credited means "made an entry." The context determines whether it is credit or debit. Verse 8 speaks of "recording sin" as a debit. Paul's repeated use of accountants' terminology in this and other passages can be traced both to the Old Testament texts he quotes and to his business activity as a tentmaker. The commercial term in Gn 15, 6, "credited it to him," reminds Paul in vv 7-8 of Ps 32, 2, in which the same term is used and applied to forgiveness of sins. Thus Paul is able to argue that Abraham's faith involved receipt of forgiveness of sins and that all believers benefit as he did through faith.

4, 3: Jas 2, 24 appears to conflict with Paul's statement. However, James combats the error of extremists who used the doctrine of justification through faith as a screen for moral self- determination. Paul discusses the subject of holiness in greater detail than does James and beginning with ch 6 shows how justification through faith introduces one to the gift of a new life in Christ through the power of the holy Spirit.

4, 9: Blessedness: evidence of divine favor.

4, 15: Law has the negative function of bringing the deep-seated rebellion against God to the surface in specific sins; see the note on 1, 18-32.

tion. [16]* For this reason, it depends on faith, so that it may be a gift, and the promise may be guaranteed to all his descendants, not to those who only adhere to the law but to those who follow the faith of Abraham, who is the father of all of us, [17]* as it is written, "I have made you father of many nations." He is our father in the sight of God, in whom he believed, who gives life to the dead and calls into being what does not exist. [18]* He believed, hoping against hope, that he would become "the father of many nations," according to what was said, "Thus shall your descendants be." [19]* He did not weaken in faith when he considered his own body as [already] dead (for he was almost a hundred years old) and the dead womb of Sarah. [20]† He did not doubt God's promise in unbelief; rather, he was empowered by faith and gave glory to God [21]* and was fully convinced that what he had promised he was also able to do. [22]* That is why "it was credited to him as righteousness." [23] But it was not for him alone that it was written that "it was credited to him"; [24]* it was also for us, to whom it will be credited, who believe in the one who raised Jesus our Lord from the dead, [25]* who was handed over for our transgressions and was raised for our justification.

Faith, Hope, and Love.† [1]† Therefore, since we have been justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ, [2] through whom we have gained access [by faith] to this grace in which we stand, and we boast in hope of the glory of God. [3] Not only that, but we even boast of our afflictions, knowing that affliction produces endurance, [4]* and endurance, proven character, and proven character, hope, [5]* and hope does not disappoint, because the love of God has been poured out into our hearts through the holy Spirit that has been given to us. [6] For Christ, while we were still helpless, yet died at the appointed time for the ungodly. [7]† Indeed, only with difficulty does one die for a just person, though perhaps for a good person one might even find courage to die. [8]* But God proves his love for us in that while we were still sinners Christ died for us. [9]* How much more then, since we are now justified by his blood, will we be saved through him from the wrath. [10]* Indeed, if, while we were enemies, we were reconciled to God through the death of his Son, how much more, once reconciled, will we be saved by his life. [11] Not only that, but we also boast of God through our Lord Jesus Christ, through whom we have now received reconciliation.

Humanity's Sin through Adam.† [12]† Therefore, just as through one person sin entered the world, and through sin, death, and thus death came to all, inasmuch as all sinned—[13] for up to the time of the law, sin was in the world, though sin is not accounted when there is no law. [14]* But death reigned from

4, 20: He did not doubt God's promise in unbelief: any doubts Abraham might have had were resolved in commitment to God's promise. Heb 11, 8-12 emphasizes the faith of Abraham and Sarah.

5, 1-11: Popular piety frequently construed reverses and troubles as punishment for sin; cf Jn 9, 2. Paul therefore assures believers that God's justifying action in Jesus Christ is a declaration of peace. The crucifixion of Jesus Christ displays God's initiative in certifying humanity for unimpeded access into the divine presence. Reconciliation is God's gift of pardon to the entire human race. Through faith one benefits personally from this pardon or, in Paul's term, is justified. The ultimate aim of God is to liberate believers from the pre-Christian self as described in chs 1-3. Since this liberation will first find completion in the believer's resurrection, salvation is described as future in 5, 10. Because this fullness of salvation belongs to the future it is called the Christian hope. Paul's Greek term for hope does not, however, suggest a note of uncertainty, to the effect: "I wonder whether God really means it." Rather, God's promise in the gospel fills believers with expectation and anticipation for the climactic gift of unalloyed commitment in the holy Spirit to the performance of the will of God. The persecutions that attend Christian commitment are to teach believers patience and to strengthen this hope, which will not disappoint them because the holy Spirit dwells in their hearts and imbues them with God's love (5).

5, 1: We have peace: a number of manuscripts, versions, and church Fathers read "Let us have peace"; cf 14, 19.

5, 7: In the world of Paul's time the good person is especially one who is magnanimous to others.

5, 12-21: Paul reflects on the sin of Adam (Gn 3, 1-13) in the light of the redemptive mystery of Christ. Sin, as used in the singular by Paul, refers to the dreadful power that has gripped humanity, which is now in revolt against the Creator and engaged in the exaltation of its own desires and interests. But no one has a right to say, "Adam made me do it," for all are culpable (12): Gentiles under the demands of the law written in their hearts (2, 14-15), and Jews under the Mosaic covenant. Through the Old Testament law, the sinfulness of humanity that was operative from the beginning (13) found further stimulation, with the result that sins were generated in even greater abundance. According to vv 15-21, God's act in Christ is in total contrast to the disastrous effects of the virus of sin that invaded humanity through Adam's crime.

5, 12: Inasmuch as all sinned: others translate "because all sinned," and understand v 13 as a parenthetical remark. Unlike Wis 2, 24, Paul does not ascribe the entry of death to the devil.

Adam to Moses, even over those who did not sin after the pattern of the trespass of Adam, who is the type of the one who was to come.

Grace and Life through Christ. 15 But the gift is not like the transgression. For if by that one person's transgression the many died, how much more did the grace of God and the gracious gift of the one person Jesus Christ overflow for the many. 16 And the gift is not like the result of the one person's sinning. For after one sin there was the judgment that brought condemnation; but the gift, after many transgressions, brought acquittal. 17 For if, by the transgression of one person, death came to reign through that one, how much more will those who receive the abundance of grace and of the gift of justification come to reign in life through the one person Jesus Christ. 18* In conclusion, just as through one transgression condemnation came upon all, so through one righteous act acquittal and life came to all. 19* For just as through the disobedience of one person the many were made sinners, so through the obedience of one the many will be made righteous. 20*† The law entered in so that transgression might increase but, where sin increased, grace overflowed all the more, 21* so that, as sin reigned in death, grace also might reign through justification for eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.

IV: JUSTIFICATION AND THE CHRISTIAN LIFE

Freedom from Sin; Life in God.† 1* What then shall we say? Shall we persist in sin that grace may abound? Of course not! 2* How can we who died to sin yet live in it? 3* Or are you unaware that we who were baptized into Christ Jesus were baptized into his death? 4* We were indeed buried with him through baptism into death, so that, just as Christ was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father, we too might live in newness of life.

5* For if we have grown into union with him through a death like his, we shall also be united with him in the resurrection. 6* We know that our old self was crucified with him, so that our sinful body might be done away with, that we might no longer be in slavery to sin. 7 For a dead person has been absolved from sin. 8* If, then, we have died with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him. 9* We know that Christ, raised from the dead, dies no more; death no longer has power over him. 10* As to his death, he died to sin once and for all; as to his life, he lives for God. 11* Consequently, you too must think of yourselves as [being] dead to sin and living for God in Christ Jesus.

12*† Therefore, sin must not reign over your mortal bodies so that you obey their desires. 13* And do not present the parts of your bodies to sin as weapons for wickedness, but present yourselves to God as raised from the dead to life and the parts of your bodies to God as weapons for righteousness. 14* For sin is not to have any power over you, since you are not under the law but under grace.

15* What then? Shall we sin because we are not under the law but under grace? Of course not! 16* Do you not know that if you present yourselves to someone as obedient slaves, you are slaves of the one you obey, either of sin, which leads to death, or of obedience, which leads to righteousness? 17† But

5, 20: The law entered in: sin had made its entrance (12); now the law comes in alongside sin. See the notes on 1, 18-32; 5, 12-21. Where sin increased, grace overflowed all the more: Paul declares that grace outmatches the productivity of sin.

6, 1-11: To defend the gospel against the charge that it promotes moral laxity (cf 3, 5-8), Paul expresses himself in the typical style of spirited diatribe. God's display of generosity or grace is not evoked by sin but, as stated in 5, 8, is the expression of God's love, and this love pledges eternal life to all believers (5, 21). Paul views the present conduct of the believers from the perspective of God's completed salvation when the body is resurrected and directed totally by the holy Spirit. Through baptism believers share the death of Christ and thereby escape from the grip of sin. Through the resurrection of Christ the power to live anew becomes reality for them, but the fullness of participation in Christ's resurrection still lies in the future. But life that is lived in dedication to God now is part and parcel of that future. Hence anyone who sincerely claims to be interested in that future will scarcely be able to say, "Let us sin so that grace may prosper" (cf 1).

6, 12-19: Christians have been released from the grip of sin, but sin endeavors to reclaim its victims. The antidote is constant remembrance that divine grace has claimed them and identifies them as people who are alive only for God's interests.

6, 17: In contrast to humanity, which was handed over to self-indulgence (1, 24-32), believers are entrusted ("handed over") to God's pattern of teaching, that is, the new life God aims to develop in Christians through the productivity of the holy Spirit. Throughout this passage Paul uses the slave-master model in order to emphasize the fact that one cannot give allegiance to both God and sin.

thanks be to God that, although you were once slaves of sin, you have become obedient from the heart to the pattern of teaching to which you were entrusted. [18] Freed from sin, you have become slaves of righteousness. [19] I am speaking in human terms because of the weakness of your nature. For just as you presented the parts of your bodies as slaves to impurity and to lawlessness for lawlessness, so now present them as slaves to righteousness for sanctification. [20*†] For when you were slaves of sin, you were free from righteousness. [21*] But what profit did you get then from the things of which you are now ashamed? For the end of those things is death. [22*†] But now that you have been freed from sin and have become slaves of God, the benefit that you have leads to sanctification, and its end is eternal life. [23*] For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord.

Freedom from the Law.† [1] Are you unaware, brothers (for I am speaking to people who know the law), that the law has jurisdiction over one as long as one lives? [2*] Thus a married woman is bound by law to her living husband; but if her husband dies, she is released from the law in respect to her husband. [3] Consequently, while her husband is alive she will be called an adulteress if she consorts with another man. But if her husband dies she is free from that law, and she is not an adulteress if she consorts with another man.

[4] In the same way, my brothers, you also were put to death to the law through the body of Christ, so that you might belong to another, to the one who was raised from the dead in order that we might bear fruit for God. [5*] For when we were in the flesh, our sinful passions, awakened by the law, worked in our members to bear fruit for death. [6*] But now we are released from the law, dead to what held us captive, so that we may serve in the newness of the spirit and not under the obsolete letter.

Acquaintance with Sin through the Law.† [7*†] What then can we say? That the law is sin? Of course not! Yet I did not know sin except through the law, and I did not know what it is to covet except that the law said, "You shall not covet." [8*] But sin, finding an opportunity in the commandment, produced in me every kind of covetousness. Apart from the law sin is dead. [9] I once lived outside the law, but when the commandment came, sin became alive; [10*] then I died, and the commandment that was for life turned out to be death for me. [11*] For sin, seizing an opportunity in the commandment, deceived me and through it put me to death. [12*] So then the law is holy, and the commandment is holy and righteous and good.

Sin and Death.† [13*] Did the good, then, become death for me? Of course not! Sin, in order that it might be shown to be sin, worked death in me through the good, so that sin might become sinful beyond measure through the commandment. [14*] We know that the law is spiritual; but I am carnal, sold into slavery to sin. [15] What I do, I do not understand. For I do not do what I want, but I do what I hate. [16] Now if I do what I do not want, I concur that the law is good. [17] So now it is no longer I who do it, but sin that dwells in me. [18*] For I know that good does not dwell in me, that is, in my flesh. The willing is ready at hand, but doing the good is not. [19] For I do not do the good I want, but I do the evil I do not want. [20] Now if [I] do what I do not want, it is no longer I who do it, but sin that dwells in me. [21] So, then, I discover the principle that 6, 20: You were free from righteousness: expressed ironically, for such freedom is really tyranny. The commercial metaphors in vv 21-23 add up only one way: sin is a bad bargain.

6, 22: Sanctification: or holiness.

7, 1-6: Paul reflects on the fact that Christians have a different understanding of the law because of their faith in Christ. Law binds the living, not the dead, as exemplified in marriage, which binds in life but is dissolved through death. Similarly, Christians who through baptism have died with Christ to sin (cf 6, 2-4) are freed from the law that occasioned transgressions, which in turn were productive of death. Now that Christians are joined to Christ, the power of Christ's resurrection makes it possible for them to bear the fruit of newness of life for God.

7, 7-25: In this passage Paul uses the first person singular in the style of diatribe for the sake of argument. He aims to depict the disastrous consequences when a Christian reintroduces the law as a means to attain the objective of holiness pronounced in 6, 22.

7, 7-12: The apostle defends himself against the charge of identifying the law with sin. Sin does not exist in law but in human beings, whose sinful inclinations are not overcome by the proclamation of law.

7, 13-25: Far from improving the sinner, law encourages sin to expose itself in transgressions or violations of specific commandments (see 1, 24; 5, 20). Thus persons who do not experience the justifying grace of God, and Christians who revert to dependence on law as the criterion for their relationship with God, will recognize a rift between their reasoned desire for the goodness of the law and their actual performance that is contrary to the law. Unable to free themselves from the slavery of sin and the power of death, they can only be rescued from defeat in the conflict by the power of God's grace working through Jesus Christ.

when I want to do right, evil is at hand.
22 For I take delight in the law of God,
in my inner self, 23*† but I see in my members another principle at war with the law of my mind, taking me captive to the law of sin that dwells in my members. 24 Miserable one that I am! Who will deliver me from this mortal body?
25* Thanks be to God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Therefore, I myself, with my mind, serve the law of God but,
with my flesh, the law of sin.

CHAPTER 8

The Flesh and the Spirit.† 1 Hence, now there is no condemnation for those who are in Christ Jesus. 2* For the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus has freed you from the law of sin and death.
3* For what the law, weakened by the flesh, was powerless to do, this God has done: by sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh and for the sake of sin, he condemned sin in the flesh, 4* so that the righteous decree of the law might be fulfilled in us, who live not according to the flesh but according to the spirit. 5 For those who live according to the flesh are concerned with the things of the flesh, but those who live according to the spirit with the things of the spirit. 6* The concern of the flesh is death, but the concern of the spirit is life and peace. 7* For the concern of the flesh is hostility toward God; it does not submit to the law of God, nor can it; 8* and those who are in the flesh cannot please God. 9* But you are not in the flesh; on the contrary, you are in the spirit, if only the Spirit of God dwells in you. Whoever does not have the Spirit of Christ does not belong to him. 10* But if Christ is in you, although the body is dead because of sin, the spirit is alive
because of righteousness. 11 If the Spirit of the one who raised Jesus from the dead dwells in you, the one who raised Christ from the dead will give life to your mortal bodies also, through his Spirit that dwells in you.
12 Consequently, brothers, we are not debtors to the flesh, to live according to the flesh. 13* For if you live according to the flesh, you will die, but if by the spirit you put to death the deeds of the body, you will live.

Children of God through Adoption.†
14* For those who are led by the Spirit of God are children of God. 15*† For you did not receive a spirit of slavery to fall back into fear, but you received a spirit of adoption, through which we cry,
"Abba, Father!" 16* The Spirit itself bears witness with our spirit that we are children of God, 17* and if children, then heirs, heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ, if only we suffer with him so that we may also be glorified with him.

Destiny of Glory.† 18* I consider that the sufferings of this present time are as nothing compared with the glory to be revealed for us. 19 For creation awaits with eager expectation the revelation of the children of God; 20* for creation was made subject to futility, not of its own accord but because of the one who subjected it, in hope 21* that creation itself would be set free from slavery to corruption and share in the glorious freedom of the children of God.
22* We know that all creation is groaning in labor pains even until now; 23* and not only that, but we ourselves, who have the firstfruits of the Spirit, we also groan within ourselves as we wait for adoption, the redemption of our bod-

7, 23: As in 3, 27, Paul plays on the term law, which in Greek can connote custom, system, or principle.

8, 1-13: After his warning in ch 7 against the wrong route to fulfillment of the objective of holiness expressed in 6, 22, Paul points his addressees to the correct way. Through the redemptive work of Christ, Christians have been liberated from the terrible forces of sin and death. Holiness was impossible so long as the flesh (or our "old self"), that is, self-interested hostility toward God (7), frustrated the divine objectives expressed in the law. What is worse, sin used the law to break forth into all manner of lawlessness (8). All this is now changed. At the cross God broke the power of sin and pronounced sentence on it (3). Christians still retain the flesh, but it is alien to their new being, which is life in the spirit, namely the new self, governed by the holy Spirit. Under the direction of the holy Spirit Christians are able to fulfill the divine will that formerly found expression in the law (4). The same Spirit who enlivens Christians for holiness will also resurrect their bodies at the last day (11). Christian life is therefore the experience of a constant challenge to put to death the evil deeds of the body through life of the spirit (13).

8, 14-17: Christians, by reason of the Spirit's presence within them, enjoy not only new life but also a new relationship to God, that of adopted children and heirs through Christ, whose sufferings and glory they share.

8, 15: Abba: see the note on Mk 14, 36.

8, 18-27: The glory that believers are destined to share with Christ far exceeds the sufferings of the present life. Paul considers the destiny of the created world to be linked with the future that belongs to the believers. As it shares in the penalty of corruption brought about by sin, so also will it share in the benefits of redemption and future glory that comprise the ultimate liberation of God's people (19-22). After patient endurance in steadfast expectation, the full harvest of the Spirit's presence will be realized. On earth believers enjoy the firstfruits, i.e., the Spirit, as a guarantee of the total liberation of their bodies from the influence of the rebellious old self (23).

ies. [24]* For in hope we were saved. Now hope that sees for itself is not hope. For who hopes for what one sees? [25] But if we hope for what we do not see, we wait with endurance.

[26] In the same way, the Spirit too comes to the aid of our weakness; for we do not know how to pray as we ought, but the Spirit itself intercedes with inexpressible groanings. [27]* And the one who searches hearts knows what is the intention of the Spirit, because it intercedes for the holy ones according to God's will.

God's Indomitable Love in Christ.† [28]† We know that all things work for good for those who love God, who are called according to his purpose. [29]† For those he foreknew he also predestined to be conformed to the image of his Son, so that he might be the firstborn among many brothers. [30]* And those he predestined he also called; and those he called he also justified; and those he justified he also glorified.

[31]† What then shall we say to this? If God is for us, who can be against us? [32] He who did not spare his own Son but handed him over for us all, how will he not also give us everything else along with him? [33]* Who will bring a charge against God's chosen ones? It is God who acquits us. [34]* Who will condemn? It is Christ [Jesus] who died, rather, was raised, who also is at the right hand of God, who indeed intercedes for us. [35] What will separate us from the love of Christ? Will anguish, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or the sword? [36]* As it is written:

> "For your sake we are being slain all the day;
> we are looked upon as sheep to be slaughtered."

[37]* No, in all these things we conquer overwhelmingly through him who loved us. [38]*† For I am convinced that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor present things, nor future things, nor powers, [39]† nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature will be able to separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus our Lord.

V: JEWS AND GENTILES IN GOD'S PLAN†

Paul's Love for Israel.† [1]* I speak the truth in Christ, I do not lie; my conscience joins with the holy Spirit in bearing me witness [2] that I have great sorrow and constant anguish in my heart. [3]* For I could wish that I myself were accursed and separated from Christ for the sake of my brothers, my kin according to the flesh. [4]* They are Israelites; theirs the adoption, the glory, the covenants, the giving of the law, the worship, and the promises; [5]*† theirs

† 8, 28-30: These verses outline the Christian vocation as it was designed by God: to be conformed to the image of his Son, who is to be the firstborn among many brothers (29). God's redemptive action on behalf of the believers has been in process before the beginning of the world. Those whom God chooses are those he foreknew (29) or elected. Those who are called (30) are predestined or predetermined. These expressions do not mean that God is arbitrary. Rather, Paul uses them to emphasize the thought and care that God has taken for the Christian's salvation.

8, 28: We know that all things work for good for those who love God: a few ancient authorities have God as the subject of the verb, and some translators render: "We know that God makes everything work for good for those who love God. . . ."

8, 29: Image: while man and woman were originally created in God's image (Gn 1, 26-27), it is through baptism into Christ, the image of God (2 Cor 4, 4; Col 1, 15), that we are renewed according to the image of the Creator (Col 3, 10).

8, 31-39: The all-conquering power of God's love has overcome every obstacle to Christians' salvation and every threat to separate them from God. That power manifested itself fully when God's own Son was delivered up to death for their salvation. Through him Christians can overcome all their afflictions and trials.

8, 38: Present things and future things may refer to astrological data. Paul appears to be saying that the gospel liberates believers from dependence on astrologers.

8, 39: Height, depth may refer to positions in the zodiac, positions of heavenly bodies relative to the horizon. In astrological documents the term for "height" means "exaltation" or the position of greatest influence exerted by a planet. Since hostile spirits were associated with the planets and stars, Paul includes powers (38) in his list of malevolent forces.

9, 1—11, 36: Israel's unbelief and its rejection of Jesus as savior astonished and puzzled Christians. It constituted a serious problem for them in view of God's specific preparation of Israel for the advent of the Messiah. Paul addresses himself here to the essential question of how the divine plan could be frustrated by Israel's unbelief. At the same time, he discourages both complacency and anxiety on the part of Gentiles. To those who might boast of their superior advantage over Jews, he warns that their enjoyment of the blessings assigned to Israel can be terminated. To those who might anxiously ask, "How can we be sure that Israel's fate will not be ours?" he replies that only unbelief can deprive one of salvation.

9, 1-5: The apostle speaks in strong terms of the depth of his grief over the unbelief of his own people. He would willingly undergo a curse himself for the sake of their coming to the knowledge of Christ (3; cf Lv 27, 28-29). His love for them derives from God's continuing choice of them and from the spiritual benefits that God bestows on them and through them on all of humanity (4-5).

9, 5: Some editors punctuate this verse differently and prefer the translation, "Of whom is Christ according to the flesh, who is God over all." However, Paul's point is that God who is over all aimed to use Israel, which had been entrusted with every privilege, in outreach to the entire world through the Messiah.

the patriarchs, and from them, according to the flesh, is the Messiah. God who is over all be blessed forever. Amen.

God's Free Choice. 6* But it is not that the word of God has failed. For not all who are of Israel are Israel, 7* nor are they all children of Abraham because they are his descendants; but "It is through Isaac that descendants shall bear your name." 8* This means that it is not the children of the flesh who are the children of God, but the children of the promise are counted as descendants. 9* For this is the wording of the promise, "About this time I shall return and Sarah will have a son." 10*† And not only that, but also when Rebecca had conceived children by one husband, our father Isaac— 11 before they had yet been born or had done anything, good or bad, in order that God's elective plan might continue, 12* not by works but by his call—she was told, "The older shall serve the younger." 13*† As it is written:

"I loved Jacob
but hated Esau."

14*† What then are we to say? Is there injustice on the part of God? Of course not! 15* For he says to Moses:

"I will show mercy to whom I will,
I will take pity on whom I will."

16* So it depends not upon a person's will or exertion, but upon God, who shows mercy. 17* For the scripture says to Pharaoh, "This is why I have raised you up, to show my power through you that my name may be proclaimed throughout the earth." 18*† Consequently, he has mercy upon whom he wills, and he hardens whom he wills.

19*† You will say to me then, "Why [then] does he still find fault? For who can oppose his will?" 20* But who indeed are you, a human being, to talk back to God? Will what is made say to its maker, "Why have you created me so?" 21 Or does not the potter have a right over the clay, to make out of the same lump one vessel for a noble purpose and another for an ignoble one? 22* What if God, wishing to show his wrath and make known his power, has endured with much patience the vessels of wrath made for destruction? 23 This was to make known the riches of his glory to the vessels of mercy, which he has prepared previously for glory, 24 namely, us whom he has called, not only from the Jews but also from the Gentiles.

Witness of the Prophets. 25*† As indeed he says in Hosea:

"Those who were not my people I will call 'my people,'
and her who was not beloved I will call 'beloved.'
26* And in the very place where it was said to them, 'You are not my people,' there they shall be called children of the living God."

27* And Isaiah cries out concerning Israel, "Though the number of the Israelites were like the sand of the sea, only a remnant will be saved; 28 for decisively and quickly will the Lord execute sentence upon the earth." 29* And as Isaiah predicted:

"Unless the Lord of hosts had left us descendants,
we would have become like Sodom
and have been made like Gomorrah."

9, 10: Children by one husband, our father Isaac: Abraham had two children, Ishmael and Isaac, by two wives, Hagar and Sarah, respectively. In that instance Isaac, although born later than Ishmael, became the bearer of the messianic promise. In the case of twins born to Rebecca, God's elective procedure is seen even more dramatically, and again the younger, contrary to Semitic custom, is given the preference.

9, 13: The literal rendering, "Jacob I loved, but Esau I hated," suggests an attitude of divine hostility that is not implied in Paul's statement. In Semitic usage "hate" means to love less; cf Lk 14, 26 with Mt 10, 37. Israel's unbelief reflects the mystery of the divine election that is always operative within it. Mere natural descent from Abraham does not ensure the full possession of the divine gifts; it is God's sovereign prerogative to bestow this fullness upon, or to withhold it from, whomsoever he wishes; cf Mt 3, 9; Jn 8, 39. The choice of Jacob over Esau is a case in point.

9, 14-18: The principle of divine election does not invite Christians to theoretical inquiry concerning the nonelected, nor does this principle mean that God is unfair in his dealings with humanity. The instruction concerning divine election is a part of the gospel and reveals that the gift of faith is the enactment of God's mercy (16). God raised up Moses to display that mercy, and Pharaoh to display divine severity in punishing those who obstinately oppose their Creator.

9, 18: The basic biblical principle is: those who will not see or hear shall not see or hear. On the other hand, the same God who thus makes stubborn or hardens the heart can reconstruct it through the work of the holy Spirit.

9, 19-29: The apostle responds to the objection that if God rules over faith through the principle of divine election, God cannot then accuse unbelievers of sin (19). For Paul, this objection is in the last analysis a manifestation of human insolence, and his "answer" is less an explanation of God's ways than the rejection of an argument that places humanity on a level with God. At the same time, Paul shows that God is far less arbitrary than appearances suggest, for God endures with much patience (22) a person like the Pharaoh of the Exodus.

9, 25: Beloved: in Semitic discourse means "preferred" or "favorite" (cf 13). See Hos 2, 1, which is transposed after Hos 3, 5 in the NAB.

Righteousness Based on Faith.† 30* What then shall we say? That Gentiles, who did not pursue righteousness, have achieved it, that is, righteousness that comes from faith; 31* but that Israel, who pursued the law of righteousness, did not attain to that law? 32*† Why not? Because they did it not by faith, but as if it could be done by works. They stumbled over the stone that causes stumbling, 33* as it is written:

"Behold, I am laying a stone in Zion
that will make people stumble
and a rock that will make them fall,
and whoever believes in him shall not be put to shame."

CHAPTER 10

1*† Brothers, my heart's desire and prayer to God on their behalf is for salvation. 2* I testify with regard to them that they have zeal for God, but it is not discerning. 3* For, in their unawareness of the righteousness that comes from God and their attempt to establish their own [righteousness], they did not submit to the righteousness of God. 4*† For Christ is the end of the law for the justification of everyone who has faith.

5*† Moses writes about the righteousness that comes from [the] law, "The one who does these things will live by them." 6* But the righteousness that comes from faith says, "Do not say in your heart, 'Who will go up into heaven?' (that is, to bring Christ down) 7*† or 'Who will go down into the abyss?' (that is, to bring Christ up from the dead)." 8* But what does it say?

"The word is near you,
in your mouth and in your heart"

(that is, the word of faith that we preach), 9*† for, if you confess with your mouth that Jesus is Lord and believe in your heart that God raised him from the dead, you will be saved. 10 For one believes with the heart and so is justified, and one confesses with the mouth and so is saved. 11* For the scripture says, "No one who believes in him will be put to shame." 12* For there is no distinction between Jew and Greek; the same Lord is Lord of all, enriching all who call upon him. 13* For "everyone who calls on the name of the Lord will be saved."

14*† But how can they call on him in whom they have not believed? And how can they believe in him of whom they have not heard? And how can they hear without someone to preach? 15*† And how can people preach unless they are sent? As it is written, "How beautiful are the feet of those who bring [the] good news!" 16* But not everyone has heeded the good news; for Isaiah says, "Lord, who has believed what was heard from us?" 17* Thus faith comes from what is heard, and what is heard comes through the word of Christ. 18* But I ask, did they not hear? Certainly they did; for

9, 30-33: In the conversion of the Gentiles and, by contrast, of relatively few Jews, the Old Testament prophecies are seen to be fulfilled; cf 25-29. Israel feared that the doctrine of justification through faith would jeopardize the validity of the Mosaic law, and so they never reached their goal of righteousness that they had sought to attain through meticulous observance of the law (31). Since Gentiles, including especially Greeks and Romans, had a great regard for righteousness, Paul's statement concerning Gentiles in v 30 is to be understood from a Jewish perspective: quite evidently they had not been interested in "God's" righteousness, for it had not been revealed to them; but now in response to the proclamation of the gospel they respond in faith.

9, 32: Paul discusses Israel as a whole from the perspective of contemporary Jewish rejection of Jesus as Messiah. The Old Testament and much of Jewish noncanonical literature in fact reflect a fervent faith in divine mercy.

10, 1-13: Despite Israel's lack of faith in God's act in Christ, Paul does not abandon hope for her salvation (1). However, Israel must recognize that the Messiah's arrival in the person of Jesus Christ means the termination of the Mosaic law as the criterion for understanding oneself in a valid relationship to God. Faith in God's saving action in Jesus Christ takes precedence over any such legal claim (6).

10, 4: The Mosaic legislation has been superseded by God's action in Jesus Christ. Others understand end here in the sense that Christ is the goal of the law, i.e., the true meaning of the Mosaic law, which cannot be correctly understood apart from him. Still others believe that both meanings are intended.

10, 5-6: The subject of the verb says (6) is righteousness personified. Both of the statements in vv 5 and 6 derive from Moses, but Paul wishes to contrast the language of law and the language of faith.

10, 9-11: To confess Jesus as Lord was frequently quite hazardous in the first century (cf Mt 10, 18; 1 Thes 2, 2; 1 Pt 2, 18-21; 3, 14). For a Jew it could mean disruption of normal familial and other social relationships, including great economic sacrifice. In the face of penalties imposed by the secular world, Christians are assured that no one who believes in Jesus will be put to shame (11).

10, 14-21: The gospel has been sufficiently proclaimed to Israel, and Israel has adequately understood God's plan for the messianic age, which would see the gospel brought to the uttermost parts of the earth. As often in the past, Israel has not accepted the prophetic message; cf Acts 7, 51-53.

10, 15: How beautiful are the feet of those who bring [the] good news. In Semitic fashion, the parts of the body that bring the messenger with welcome news are praised; cf Lk 11, 27.

and their words to the ends of the world."

19* But I ask, did not Israel understand? First Moses says:

"I will make you jealous of those who are not a nation;
with a senseless nation I will make you angry."

20* Then Isaiah speaks boldly and says:

"I was found [by] those who were not seeking me;
I revealed myself to those who were not asking for me."

21 But regarding Israel he says, "All day long I stretched out my hands to a disobedient and contentious people."

CHAPTER 11

The Remnant of Israel.† 1* I ask, then, has God rejected his people? Of course not! For I too am an Israelite, a descendant of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin. 2 God has not rejected his people whom he foreknew. Do you not know what the scripture says about Elijah, how he pleads with God against Israel? 3* "Lord, they have killed your prophets, they have torn down your altars, and I alone am left, and they are seeking my life." 4* But what is God's response to him? "I have left for myself seven thousand men who have not knelt to Baal." 5* So also at the present time there is a remnant, chosen by grace. 6* But if by grace, it is no longer because of works; otherwise grace would no longer be grace. 7* What then? What Israel was seeking it did not attain, but the elect attained it; the rest were hardened, 8* as it is written:

"God gave them a spirit of deep sleep, eyes that should not see
and ears that should not hear,
down to this very day."

9* And David says:

"Let their table become a snare and a trap,
a stumbling block and a retribution for them;
10 let their eyes grow dim so that they may not see,
and keep their backs bent forever."

The Gentiles' Salvation.† 11* Hence I ask, did they stumble so as to fall? Of course not! But through their transgression salvation has come to the Gentiles, so as to make them jealous. 12 Now if their transgression is enrichment for the world, and if their diminished number is enrichment for the Gentiles, how much more their full number.

13* Now I am speaking to you Gentiles. Inasmuch then as I am the apostle to the Gentiles, I glory in my ministry 14 in order to make my race jealous and thus save some of them. 15 For if their rejection is the reconciliation of the world, what will their acceptance be but life from the dead? 16*† If the firstfruits are holy, so is the whole batch of dough; and if the root is holy, so are the branches.

17* But if some of the branches were broken off, and you, a wild olive shoot, were grafted in their place and have come to share in the rich root of the olive tree, 18* do not boast against the branches. If you do boast, consider that you do not support the root; the root supports you. 19 Indeed you will say, "Branches were broken off so that I might be grafted in." 20* That is so. They were broken off because of unbelief, but you are there because of faith. So do not become haughty, but stand in awe. 21* For if God did not spare the natural branches, [perhaps] he will not spare you either. 22* See, then, the kindness and severity of God: severity toward those who fell, but God's kindness to you, provided you remain in his kindness; otherwise you too will be cut off. 23* And they also, if they do not remain

† 11, 1-10: Although Israel has been unfaithful to the prophetic message of the gospel (10, 14-21), God remains faithful to Israel. Proof of the divine fidelity lies in the existence of Jewish Christians like Paul himself. The unbelieving Jews, says Paul, have been blinded by the Christian teaching concerning the Messiah.

11, 11-15: The unbelief of the Jews has paved the way for the preaching of the gospel to the Gentiles and for their easier acceptance of it outside the context of Jewish culture. Through his mission to the Gentiles Paul also hopes to fill his fellow Jews with jealousy. Hence he hastens to fill the entire Mediterranean world with the gospel. Once all the Gentile nations have heard the gospel, Israel as a whole is expected to embrace it. This will be tantamount to resurrection of the dead, that is, the reappearance of Jesus Christ with all the believers at the end of time.

11, 16-24: Israel remains holy in the eyes of God and stands as a witness to the faith described in the Old Testament because of the firstfruits (or the first piece baked) (16), that is, the converted remnant, and the root that is holy, that is, the patriarchs (16). The Jews' failure to believe in Christ is a warning to Gentile Christians to be on guard against any semblance of anti-Jewish arrogance, that is, failure to recognize their total dependence on divine grace.

in unbelief, will be grafted in, for God is able to graft them in again. [24] For if you were cut from what is by nature a wild olive tree, and grafted, contrary to nature, into a cultivated one, how much more will they who belong to it by nature be grafted back into their own olive tree.

God's Irrevocable Call.† [25*] I do not want you to be unaware of this mystery, brothers, so that you will not become wise [in] your own estimation: a hardening has come upon Israel in part, until the full number of the Gentiles comes in, [26*] and thus all Israel will be saved, as it is written:

> "The deliverer will come out of Zion,
> he will turn away godlessness from Jacob; > [27*] and this is my covenant with them
> when I take away their sins."

[28*] In respect to the gospel, they are enemies on your account; but in respect to election, they are beloved because of the patriarchs. [29*] For the gifts and the call of God are irrevocable.

Triumph of God's Mercy.† [30] Just as you once disobeyed God but have now received mercy because of their disobedience, [31] so they have now disobeyed in order that, by virtue of the mercy shown to you, they too may [now] receive mercy. [32*] For God delivered all to disobedience, that he might have mercy upon all.

[33*]† Oh, the depth of the riches and wisdom and knowledge of God! How inscrutable are his judgments and how unsearchable his ways!

[34*]†"For who has known the mind of the Lord or who has been his counselor?"
[35*]†"Or who has given him anything that he may be repaid?"

[36*] For from him and through him and for him are all things. To him be glory forever. Amen.

VI: THE DUTIES OF CHRISTIANS†

Sacrifice of Body and Mind.† [1*] I urge you therefore, brothers, by the mercies of God, to offer your bodies as a living sacrifice, holy and pleasing to God, your spiritual worship. [2*] Do not conform yourself to this age but be transformed by the renewal of your mind, that you may discern what is the will of God, what is good and pleasing and perfect.

Many Parts in One Body. [3*] For by the grace given to me I tell everyone among you not to think of himself more highly than one ought to think, but to think soberly, each according to the measure of faith that God has apportioned. [4*] For as in one body we have many parts, and all the parts do not have the same function, [5]† so we, though many, are one body in Christ and individually parts of one another.

11, 25-29: In God's design, Israel's unbelief is being used to grant the light of faith to the Gentiles. Meanwhile, Israel remains dear to God (cf 9, 13), still the object of special providence, the mystery of which will one day be revealed.

11, 30-32: Israel, together with the Gentiles who have been handed over to all manner of vices (ch 1), has been delivered . . . to disobedience. The conclusion of v 32 repeats the thought of 5, 20, "Where sin increased, grace overflowed all the more."

11, 33-36: This final reflection celebrates the wisdom of God's plan of salvation. As Paul has indicated throughout these chapters, both Jew and Gentile, despite the religious recalcitrance of each, have received the gift of faith. The methods used by God in making this outreach to the world stagger human comprehension but are at the same time a dazzling invitation to abiding faith.

11, 34: The citation is from the Greek text of Is 40, 13. Paul does not explicitly mention Isaiah in this verse, nor Job in v 35.

11, 35: Paul quotes from an old Greek version of Jb 41, 3a, which differs from the Hebrew text (Jb 41, 11a).

12, 1—13, 14: Since Christ marks the termination of the Mosaic law as the primary source of guidance for God's people (10, 4), the apostle explains how Christians can function, in the light of the gift of justification through faith, in their relation to one another and the state.

12, 1-8: The Mosaic code included elaborate directions on sacrifices and other cultic observances. The gospel, however, invites believers to present their bodies as a living sacrifice (1). Instead of being limited by specific legal maxims, Christians are liberated for the exercise of good judgment as they are confronted with the many and varied decisions required in the course of daily life. To assist them, God distributes a variety of gifts to the fellowship of believers, including those of prophecy, teaching, and exhortation (6-8). Prophets assist the community to understand the will of God as it applies to the present situation (6). Teachers help people to understand themselves and their responsibilities in relation to others (7). One who exhorts offers encouragement to the community to exercise their faith in the performance of all that is pleasing to God (8). Indeed, this very section, beginning with v 1, is a specimen of Paul's own style of exhortation.

12, 5: One body in Christ: on the church as the body of Christ, see 1 Cor 12, 12-27.

6*† Since we have gifts that differ according to the grace given to us, let us exercise them: if prophecy, in proportion to the faith; 7 if ministry, in ministering; if one is a teacher, in teaching; 8† if one exhorts, in exhortation; if one contributes, in generosity; if one is over others, with diligence; if one does acts of mercy, with cheerfulness.

Mutual Love. 9* Let love be sincere; hate what is evil, hold on to what is good; 10* love one another with mutual affection; anticipate one another in showing honor. 11* Do not grow slack in zeal, be fervent in spirit, serve the Lord. 12* Rejoice in hope, endure in affliction, persevere in prayer. 13* Contribute to the needs of the holy ones, exercise hospitality. 14*† Bless those who persecute [you], bless and do not curse them. 15* Rejoice with those who rejoice, weep with those who weep. 16* Have the same regard for one another; do not be haughty but associate with the lowly; do not be wise in your own estimation. 17* Do not repay anyone evil for evil; be concerned for what is noble in the sight of all. 18* If possible, on your part, live at peace with all. 19* Beloved, do not look for revenge but leave room for the wrath; for it is written, "Vengeance is mine, I will repay, says the Lord." 20* Rather, "if your enemy is hungry, feed him; if he is thirsty, give him something to drink; for by so doing you will heap burning coals upon his head." 21 Do not be conquered by evil but conquer evil with good.

Obedience to Authority.† 1* Let every person be subordinate to the higher authorities, for there is no authority except from God, and those that exist have been established by God. 2 Therefore, whoever resists authority opposes what God has appointed, and those who oppose it will bring judgment upon themselves. 3* For rulers are not a cause of fear to good conduct, but to evil. Do you wish to have no fear of authority? Then do what is good and you will receive approval from it, 4* for it is a servant of God for your good. But if you do evil, be afraid, for it does not bear the sword without purpose; it is the servant of God to inflict wrath on the evildoer. 5* Therefore, it is necessary to be subject not only because of the wrath but also because of conscience. 6 This is why you also pay taxes, for the authorities are ministers of God, devoting themselves to this very thing. 7* Pay to all their dues, taxes to whom taxes are due, toll to whom toll is due, respect to whom respect is due, honor to whom honor is due.

Love Fulfills the Law.† 8* Owe nothing to anyone, except to love one another; for the one who loves another has fulfilled the law. 9* The commandments, "You shall not commit adultery;

† 12, 6: Everyone has some gift that can be used for the benefit of the community. When the instruction on justification through faith is correctly grasped, the possesser of a gift will understand that it is not an instrument of self-aggrandizement. Possession of a gift is not an index to quality of faith. Rather, the gift is a challenge to faithful use.

12, 8: Over others: usually taken to mean "rule over" but possibly "serve as a patron." Wealthier members in Greco-Roman communities were frequently asked to assist in public service projects. In view of the references to contributing in generosity and to acts of mercy, Paul may have in mind people like Phoebe (16, 1-2), who is called a benefactor (or "patron") because of the services she rendered to many Christians, including Paul.

12, 14-21: Since God has justified the believers, it is not necessary for them to take justice into their own hands by taking vengeance. God will ultimately deal justly with all, including those who inflict injury on the believers. This question of personal rights as a matter of justice prepares the way for more detailed consideration of the state as adjudicator.

13, 1-7: Paul must come to grips with the problem raised by a message that declares people free from the law. How are they to relate to Roman authority? The problem was exacerbated by the fact that imperial protocol was interwoven with devotion to various deities. Paul builds on the traditional instruction exhibited in Wis 6, 1-3, according to which kings and magistrates rule by consent of God. From this perspective, then, believers who render obedience to the governing authorities are obeying the one who is highest in command. At the same time, it is recognized that Caesar has the responsibility to make just ordinances and to commend uprightness; cf Wis 6, 4-21. That Caesar is not entitled to obedience when such obedience would nullify God's prior claim to the believers' moral decision becomes clear in the light of the following verses.

13, 8-10: When love directs the Christian's moral decisions, the interest of law in basic concerns, such as familial relationships, sanctity of life, and security of property, is safeguarded (9). Indeed, says Paul, the same applies to any other commandment (9), whether one in the Mosaic code or one drawn up by local magistrates under imperial authority. Love anticipates the purpose of public legislation, namely, to secure the best interests of the citizenry. Since Caesar's obligation is to punish the wrongdoer (4), the Christian who acts in love is free from all legitimate indictment.

you shall not kill; you shall not steal; you shall not covet," and whatever other commandment there may be, are summed up in this saying, [namely] "You shall love your neighbor as yourself." [10]* Love does no evil to the neighbor; hence, love is the fulfillment of the law.

Awareness of the End of Time.† [11]* And do this because you know the time; it is the hour now for you to awake from sleep. For our salvation is nearer now than when we first believed; [12]* the night is advanced, the day is at hand. Let us then throw off the works of darkness [and] put on the armor of light; [13]† let us conduct ourselves properly as in the day, not in orgies and drunkenness, not in promiscuity and licentiousness, not in rivalry and jealousy. [14] But put on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make no provision for the desires of the flesh.

To Live and Die for Christ.† [1]* Welcome anyone who is weak in faith, but not for disputes over opinions. [2]* One person believes that one may eat anything, while the weak person eats only vegetables. [3]* The one who eats must not despise the one who abstains, and the one who abstains must not pass judgment on the one who eats; for God has welcomed him. [4]* Who are you to pass judgment on someone else's servant? Before his own master he stands or falls. And he will be upheld, for the Lord is able to make him stand. [5]† [For] one person considers one day more important than another, while another person considers all days alike. Let everyone be fully persuaded in his own mind. [6] Whoever observes the day, observes it for the Lord. Also whoever eats, eats for the Lord, since he gives thanks to God; while whoever abstains, abstains for the Lord and gives thanks to God. [7] None of us lives for oneself, and no one dies for oneself. [8]† For if we live, we live for the Lord, and if we die, we die for the Lord; so then, whether we live or die, we are the Lord's. [9]* For this is why Christ died and came to life, that he might be Lord of both the dead and the living. [10]* Why then do you judge your brother? Or you, why do you look down on your brother? For we shall all stand before the judgment seat of God; [11]* for it is written:

> "As I live, says the Lord, every knee > shall bend before me,
> and every tongue shall give praise > to God."

[12]* So [then] each of us shall give an account of himself [to God].

Consideration for the Weak Conscience. [13]* Then let us no longer judge one another, but rather resolve never to put a stumbling block or hindrance in the way of a brother. [14]* I know and am convinced in the Lord Jesus that nothing is unclean in itself; still, it is unclean for someone who thinks it unclean. [15]* If your brother is being hurt by what you eat, your conduct is no longer in accord with love. Do not because of your food destroy him for whom Christ died. [16]* So do not let your good be reviled. [17]* For the kingdom of God is not a matter of food and drink, but of righteousness, peace, and joy in the holy Spirit; [18] whoever serves Christ in this way is pleasing to God and approved by others. [19]† Let us then pursue what leads to peace and to building up one another. [20] For the sake of food, 13, 11-14: These verses provide the motivation for the love that is encouraged in vv 8-10.

13, 13: Let us conduct ourselves properly as in the day: the behavior described in 1, 29-30 is now to be reversed. Secular moralists were fond of making references to people who could not wait for nightfall to do their carousing. Paul says that Christians claim to be people of the new day that will dawn with the return of Christ. Instead of planning for nighttime behavior they should be concentrating on conduct that is consonant with avowed interest in the Lord's return.

14, 1—15, 6: Since Christ spells termination of the law, which included observance of specific days and festivals as well as dietary instruction, the jettisoning of long-practiced customs was traumatic for many Christians brought up under the Mosaic code. Although Paul acknowledges that in principle no food is a source of moral contamination (14), he recommends that the consciences of Christians who are scrupulous in this regard be respected by other Christians (21). On the other hand, those who have scruples are not to sit in judgment on those who know that the gospel has liberated them from such ordinances (10). See 1 Cor 8 and 10.

14, 5: Since the problem to be overcome was humanity's perverted mind or judgment (1, 28), Paul indicates that the mind of the Christian is now able to function with appropriate discrimination (cf 12, 2).

14, 8: The Lord: Jesus, our Master. The same Greek word, kyrios, was applied to both rulers and holders of slaves. Throughout the Letter to the Romans Paul emphasizes God's total claim on the believer; see the note on 1, 1.

14, 19: Some manuscripts, versions, and church Fathers read, "We then pursue . . ."; cf 5, 1.

do not destroy the work of God. Everything is indeed clean, but it is wrong for anyone to become a stumbling block by eating; [21] it is good not to eat meat or drink wine or do anything that causes your brother to stumble. [22] Keep the faith [that] you have to yourself in the presence of God; blessed is the one who does not condemn himself for what he approves. [23]*† But whoever has doubts is condemned if he eats, because this is not from faith; for whatever is not from faith is sin.

Patience and Self-Denial. [1]* We who are strong ought to put up with the failings of the weak and not to please ourselves; [2]* let each of us please our neighbor for the good, for building up. [3]† For Christ did not please himself; but, as it is written, "The insults of those who insult you fall upon me." [4] For whatever was written previously was written for our instruction, that by endurance and by the encouragement of the scriptures we might have hope. [5]*† May the God of endurance and encouragement grant you to think in harmony with one another, in keeping with Christ Jesus, [6] that with one accord you may with one voice glorify the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

God's Fidelity and Mercy.† [7]* Welcome one another, then, as Christ welcomed you, for the glory of God. [8]* For I say that Christ became a minister of the circumcised to show God's truthfulness, to confirm the promises to the patriarchs, [9]* but so that the Gentiles might glorify God for his mercy. As it is written:

> "Therefore, I will praise you among the Gentiles > and sing praises to your name."

[10]*† And again it says:

> "Rejoice, O Gentiles, with his people."

[11]* And again:

> "Praise the Lord, all you Gentiles, > and let all the peoples praise him."

[12]* And again Isaiah says:

> "The root of Jesse shall come,
> raised up to rule the Gentiles;
> in him shall the Gentiles hope."

[13]* May the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing, so that you may abound in hope by the power of the holy Spirit.

VII: CONCLUSION

Apostle to the Gentiles.† [14]† I myself am convinced about you, my brothers, that you yourselves are full of goodness, filled with all knowledge, and able to admonish one another. [15]* But I have written to you rather boldly in some respects to remind you, because of the grace given me by God [16]* to be a minister of Christ Jesus to the Gentiles in performing the priestly service of the gospel of God, so that the offering up of the Gentiles may be acceptable, sanctified by the holy Spirit. [17] In Christ Jesus, then, I have reason to boast in what pertains to God. [18]* For I will not dare to speak of anything except what Christ has accomplished through me to lead the Gentiles to obedience by word and deed, [19]† by the power of signs and wonders, by the power of the Spirit [of God], so that from Jerusalem all the way around to Illyricum I have finished preaching the gospel of Christ. [20]*† Thus I aspire to proclaim the gospel

14, 23: Whatever is not from faith is sin: Paul does not mean that all the actions of unbelievers are sinful. He addresses himself to the question of intracommunity living. Sin in the singular is the dreadful power described in 5, 12-14.

15, 3: Liberation from the law of Moses does not make the scriptures of the old covenant irrelevant. Much consolation and motivation for Christian living can be derived from the Old Testament, as in the citation from Ps 69, 10. Because this psalm is quoted several times in the New Testament, it has been called indirectly messianic.

15, 5: Think in harmony: a Greco-Roman ideal. Not rigid uniformity of thought and expression but thoughtful consideration of other people's views finds expression here.

15, 7-13: True oneness of mind is found in pondering the ultimate mission of the church: to bring it about that God's name be glorified throughout the world and that Jesus Christ be universally recognized as God's gift to all humanity. Paul here prepares his addressees for the climactic appeal he is about to make.

15, 10: Paul's citation of Dt 32, 43 follows the Greek version.

15, 14-33: Paul sees himself as apostle and benefactor in the priestly service of the gospel and so sketches plans for a mission in Spain, supported by those in Rome.

15, 14: Full of goodness: the opposite of what humanity was filled with according to 1, 29-30.

15, 19: Illyricum: Roman province northwest of Greece on the eastern shore of the Adriatic.

15, 20: I aspire: Paul uses terminology customarily applied to philanthropists. Unlike some philanthropists of his time, Paul does not engage in cheap competition for public acclaim. This explanation of his missionary policy is to assure the Christians in Rome that he is also not planning to remain in that city and build on other people's foundations (cf 2 Cor 10, 12-18). However, he does solicit their help in sending him on his way to Spain, which was considered the limit of the western world. Thus Paul's addressees realize that evangelization may be understood in the broader sense of mission or, as in Rom 1, 15, of instruction within the Christian community that derives from the gospel.

not where Christ has already been named, so that I do not build on another's foundation, [21]*† but as it is written:

> "Those who have never been told > of him shall see,
> and those who have never heard > of him shall understand."

Paul's Plans; Need for Prayers. [22] That is why I have so often been prevented from coming to you. [23]* But now, since I no longer have any opportunity in these regions and since I have desired to come to you for many years, [24]* I hope to see you in passing as I go to Spain and to be sent on my way there by you, after I have enjoyed being with you for a time. [25]† Now, however, I am going to Jerusalem to minister to the holy ones. [26]† For Macedonia and Achaia have decided to make some contribution for the poor among the holy ones in Jerusalem; [27] they decided to do it, and in fact they are indebted to them, for if the Gentiles have come to share in their spiritual blessings, they ought also to serve them in material blessings. [28] So when I have completed this and safely handed over this contribution to them, I shall set out by way of you to Spain; [29] and I know that in coming to you I shall come in the fullness of Christ's blessing.

[30]* I urge you, [brothers,] by our Lord Jesus Christ and by the love of the Spirit, to join me in the struggle by your prayers to God on my behalf, [31] that I may be delivered from the disobedient in Judea, and that my ministry for Jerusalem may be acceptable to the holy ones, [32] so that I may come to you with joy by the will of God and be refreshed together with you. [33]* The God of peace be with all of you. Amen.

Phoebe Commended.† [1]*† I commend to you Phoebe our sister, who is [also] a minister of the church at Cenchreae, [2] that you may receive her in the Lord in a manner worthy of the holy ones, and help her in whatever she may need from you, for she has been a benefactor to many and to me as well.

Paul's Greetings. [3]† Greet Prisca and Aquila, my co-workers in Christ Jesus, [4] who risked their necks for my life, to whom not only I am grateful but also all the churches of the Gentiles; [5]† greet also the church at their house. Greet my beloved Epaenetus, who was the firstfruits in Asia for Christ. [6] Greet Mary, who has worked hard for you. [7]† Greet Andronicus and Junia, my relatives and my fellow prisoners; they are prominent among the apostles and they were in Christ before me. [8] Greet Ampliatus, my beloved in the Lord. [9] Greet Urbanus, our co-worker in Christ, and my beloved Stachys. [10] Greet Apelles, who is approved in Christ. Greet those who belong to the family of Aristobulus. [11] Greet my relative Herodion. Greet those in the Lord who belong to the family of Narcissus. [12] Greet those workers in the Lord, Tryphaena and Tryphosa. Greet the beloved Persis, who has worked hard in the Lord. [13]† Greet Rufus, chosen in the Lord, and his mother and mine. [14] Greet Asyncritus, Phlegon, Hermes, Patrobas, Hermas, and the brothers who are with them. [15] Greet Philologus, Julia, Nereus and his sister, and Olympas, and all the holy ones who are with them. [16] Greet one another with a holy kiss. All the churches of Christ greet you.

15, 21: The citation from Is 52, 15 concerns the Servant of the Lord. According to Isaiah, the Servant is first of all Israel, which was to bring the knowledge of Yahweh to the nations. In chs 9-11 Paul showed how Israel failed in this mission. Therefore, he himself undertakes almost singlehandedly Israel's responsibility as the Servant and moves as quickly as possible with the gospel through the Roman empire.

15, 25-27: Paul may have viewed the contribution he was gathering from Gentile Christians for the poor in Jerusalem (cf 2 Cor 8 and 9) as a fulfillment of the vision of Is 60, 5-6. In confidence that the messianic fulfillment was taking place, Paul stresses in chs 14-16 the importance of harmonious relationships between Jews and Gentiles.

15, 26: Achaia: the Roman province of southern Greece.

16, 1-23: Some authorities regard these verses as a later addition to the letter, but in general the evidence favors the view that they were included in the original. Paul endeavors through the long list of greetings (3-16; 21-23) to establish strong personal contact with congregations that he has not personally encountered before. The combination of Jewish and Gentile names dramatically attests the unity in the gospel that transcends previous barriers of nationality, religious ceremony, or racial status.

16, 3: Prisca and Aquila: presumably the couple mentioned at Acts 18, 2; 1 Cor 16, 19; 2 Tm 4, 19.

16, 5: The church at their house: i.e., that meets there. Such local assemblies (cf 1 Cor 16, 19; Col 4, 15; Phlm 2) might consist of only one or two dozen Christians each. It is understandable, therefore, that such smaller groups might experience difficulty in relating to one another on certain issues. Firstfruits: cf 8, 23; 11, 16; 1 Cor 16, 15.

16, 7: The name Junia is a woman's name. One ancient Greek manuscript and a number of ancient versions read the name "Julia." Most editors have interpreted it as a man's name, Junias.

16, 13: This Rufus cannot be identified to any degree of certainty with the Rufus of Mk 15, 21.

Against Factions.† [17]* I urge you, brothers, to watch out for those who create dissensions and obstacles, in opposition to the teaching that you learned; avoid them. [18]* For such people do not serve our Lord Christ but their own appetites, and by fair and flattering speech they deceive the hearts of the innocent. [19]* For while your obedience is known to all, so that I rejoice over you, I want you to be wise as to what is good, and simple as to what is evil; [20]*† then the God of peace will quickly crush Satan under your feet. The grace of our Lord Jesus be with you.

Greetings from Corinth. [21]* Timothy, my co-worker, greets you; so do Lucius and Jason and Sosipater, my relatives. [22] I, Tertius, the writer of this letter, greet you in the Lord. [23]*† Gaius, who is host to me and to the whole church, greets you. Erastus, the city treasurer, and our brother Quartus greet you. [24]†

Doxology.† [25]† Now to him who can strengthen you, according to my gospel and the proclamation of Jesus Christ, according to the revelation of the mystery kept secret for long ages [26] but now manifested through the prophetic writings and, according to the command of the eternal God, made known to all nations to bring about the obedience of faith, [27]* to the only wise God, through Jesus Christ be glory forever and ever. Amen.]

16, 17-18: Paul displays genuine concern for the congregations in Rome by warning them against self-seeking teachers. It would be a great loss, he intimates, if their obedience, which is known to all (cf 1, 8), would be diluted.

16, 20: This verse contains the only mention of Satan in Romans.

16, 23: This Erastus is not necessarily to be identified with the Erastus of Acts 19, 22 or of 2 Tm 4, 20.

16, 24: Some manuscripts add, similarly to v 20, "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen."

16, 25-27: This doxology is assigned variously to the end of chs 14, 15, and 16 in the manuscript tradition. Some manuscripts omit it entirely. Whether written by Paul or not, it forms an admirable conclusion to the letter at this point.

16, 25: Paul's gospel reveals the mystery kept secret for long ages: justification and salvation through faith, with all the implications for Jews and Gentiles that Paul has developed in the letter.

The First Letter to the

Paul's first letter to the church of Corinth provides us with a fuller insight into the life of an early Christian community of the first generation than any other book of the New Testament. Through it we can glimpse both the strengths and the weaknesses of this small group in a great city of the ancient world, men and women who had accepted the good news of Christ and were now trying to realize in their lives the implications of their baptism. Paul, who had founded the community and continued to look after it as a father, responds both to questions addressed to him and to situations of which he had been informed. In doing so, he reveals much about himself, his teaching, and the way in which he conducted his work of apostleship. Some things are puzzling because we have the correspondence only in one direction. For the person studying this letter, it seems to raise as many questions as it answers, but without it our knowledge of church life in the middle of the first century would be much poorer.

Paul established a Christian community in Corinth about the year 51, on his second missionary journey. The city, a commercial crossroads, was a melting pot full of devotees of various pagan cults and marked by a measure of moral depravity not unusual in a great seaport. The Acts of the Apostles suggests that moderate success attended Paul's efforts among the Jews in Corinth at first, but that they soon turned against him (Acts 18, 1-8). More fruitful was his year and a half spent among the Gentiles (Acts 18, 11), which won to the faith many of the city's poor and underprivileged (1, 26). After his departure the eloquent Apollos, an Alexandrian Jewish Christian, rendered great service to the community, expounding "from the scriptures that the Messiah is Jesus" (Acts 18, 24-28).

While Paul was in Ephesus on his third journey (16, 8; Acts 19, 1-20), he received disquieting news about Corinth. The community there was displaying open factionalism, as certain members were identifying themselves exclusively with individual Christian leaders and interpreting Christian teaching as a superior wisdom for the initiated few (1, 10—4, 21). The community lacked the decisiveness to take appropriate action against one of its members who was living publicly in an incestuous union (5, 1-13). Other members engaged in legal conflicts in pagan courts of law (6, 1-11); still others may have participated in religious prostitution (6, 12-20) or temple sacrifices (10, 14-22).

The community's ills were reflected in its liturgy. In the celebration of the Eucharist certain members discriminated against others, drank too freely at the agape, or fellowship meal, and denied Christian social courtesies to the poor among the membership (11, 17-22). Charisms such as ecstatic prayer, attributed freely to the impulse of the holy Spirit, were more highly prized than works of charity (13, 1-2.8), and were used at times in a disorderly way (14, 1-40). Women appeared at the assembly without the customary head-covering (11, 3-16), and perhaps were quarreling over their right to address the assembly (14, 34-35).

Still other problems with which Paul had to deal concerned matters of conscience discussed among the faithful members of the community: the eating of meat that had been sacrificed to idols (8, 1-13), the use of sex in marriage (7, 1-7), and the attitude to be taken by the unmarried toward marriage in view of the possible proximity of Christ's second coming (7, 25-40). There was also a doctrinal matter that called for Paul's attention, for some members of the community, despite their belief in the resurrection of Christ, were denying the possibility of general bodily resurrection.

To treat this wide spectrum of questions, Paul wrote this letter from Ephesus about the year 56. The majority of the Corinthian Christians may well have been quite faithful. Paul writes on their behalf to guard against the threats posed to the community by the views and conduct of various minorities. He writes with confidence in the authority of his apostolic mission, and he presumes that the Corinthians, despite their deficiencies, will recognize and accept it. On the other hand, he does not hesitate to exercise his authority as his judgment dictates in each situation, even going so far as to promise a direct confrontation with recalcitrants, should the abuses he scores remain uncorrected (4, 18-21).

The letter illustrates well the mind and character of Paul. Although he is impelled to insist on his office as founder of the community, he recognizes that he is only one servant of God among many and generously acknowledges the labors of Apollos (3, 5-8). He provides us in this letter with many valuable examples of his method of theological reflection and exposition. He always treats the questions at issue on the level of the purity of Christian teaching and conduct. Certain passages of the letter are of the greatest importance for the understanding of early Christian teaching on the Eucharist (10, 14-22; 11, 17-34) and on the resurrection of the body (15, 1-58).

Paul's authorship of 1 Corinthians, apart from a few verses that some regard as later interpolations, has never been seriously questioned. Some scholars have proposed, however, that the letter as we have it contains portions of more than one original Pauline letter. We know that Paul wrote at least two other letters to Corinth (see 5, 9; 2 Cor 2, 3-4) in addition to the two that we now have; this theory holds that the additional letters are actually contained within the two canonical ones. Most commentators, however, find 1 Corinthians quite understandable as a single coherent work.

The principal divisions of the First Letter to the Corinthians are the following:

- I: Address (1, 1-9)
- II: Disorders in the Corinthian Community (1, 10—6, 20)
  - A. Divisions in the Church (1, 10—4, 21)
  - B. Moral Disorders (5, 1—6, 20)
- III: Answers to the Corinthians' Questions (7, 1—11, 1)
  - A. Marriage and Virginity (7, 1-40)
  - B. Offerings to Idols (8, 1—11, 1)
- IV: Problems in Liturgical Assemblies (11, 2—14, 40)
  - A. Women's Headdresses (11, 3-16)
  - B. The Lord's Supper (11, 17-34)
  - C. Spiritual Gifts (12, 1—14, 40)
- V: The Resurrection (15, 1-58)
  - A. The Resurrection of Christ (15, 1-11)
  - B. The Resurrection of the Dead (15, 12-34)
  - C. The Manner of the Resurrection (15, 35-58)
- VI: Conclusion (16, 1-24)

CHAPTER 1

Greeting. [1]† Paul, called to be an apostle of Christ Jesus by the will of God, and Sosthenes our brother, [2] to the church of God that is in Corinth, to you who have been sanctified in Christ Jesus, called to be holy, with all those everywhere who call upon the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, their Lord and ours. [3] Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Thanksgiving. [4] I give thanks to my

1, 1: Rom 1, 1. 2: Acts 18, 1-11.

† 1, 1-9: Paul follows the conventional form for the opening of a Hellenistic letter (cf Rom 1, 1-7), but expands the opening with details carefully chosen to remind the readers of their situation and to suggest some of the issues the letter will discuss.

1, 1: Called . . . by the will of God: Paul's mission and the church's existence are grounded in God's initiative. God's call, grace, and fidelity are central ideas in this introduction, emphasized by repetition and wordplays in the Greek.

God always on your account for the grace of God bestowed on you in Christ Jesus, [5] that in him you were enriched in every way, with all discourse and all knowledge, [6]† as the testimony to Christ was confirmed among you, [7]* so that you are not lacking in any spiritual gift as you wait for the revelation of our Lord Jesus Christ. [8]* He will keep you firm to the end, irreproachable on the day of our Lord Jesus [Christ]. [9]* God is faithful, and by him you were called to fellowship with his Son, Jesus Christ our Lord.

II: DISORDERS IN THE CORINTHIAN COMMUNITY

Groups and Slogans. [10]* I urge you, brothers, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that all of you agree in what you say, and that there be no divisions among you, but that you be united in the same mind and in the same purpose. [11] For it has been reported to me about you, my brothers, by Chloe's people, that there are rivalries among you. [12]† I mean that each of you is saying, "I belong to Paul," or "I belong to Apollos," or "I belong to Kephas," or "I belong to Christ." [13]† Is Christ divided? Was Paul crucified for you? Or were you baptized in the name of Paul? [14] I give thanks [to God] that I baptized none of you except Crispus and Gaius, [15] so that no one can say you were baptized in my name. [16]* (I baptized the household of Stephanas also; beyond that I do not know whether I baptized anyone else.) [17]*† For Christ did not send me to baptize but to preach the gospel, and not with the wisdom of human eloquence, so that the cross of Christ might not be emptied of its meaning.

Paradox of the Cross. [18]* The message of the cross is foolishness to those who are perishing, but to us who are being saved it is the power of God. [19]* For it is written:

> "I will destroy the wisdom of the wise,
> and the learning of the learned I will set aside."

[20]* Where is the wise one? Where is the scribe? Where is the debater of this age? Has not God made the wisdom of the world foolish? [21]† For since in the wisdom of God the world did not come to know God through wisdom, it was the will of God through the foolishness of the proclamation to save those who have faith. [22]* For Jews demand signs and Greeks look for wisdom, [23]* but we proclaim Christ crucified, a stumbling block to Jews and foolishness to Gentiles, [24] but to those who are called, Jews and Greeks alike, Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God. [25] For the foolishness of God is wiser than human wisdom, and the weakness of God is stronger than human strength.

The Corinthians and Paul.† [26] Consider your own calling, brothers. Not many of you were wise by human standards, not many were powerful, not

1, 6: The testimony: this defines the purpose of Paul's mission (see also 15, 15 and the note on 2, 1). The forms of his testimony include oral preaching and instruction, his letters, and the life he leads as an apostle.

1, 10—4, 21: The first problem Paul addresses is that of divisions within the community. Although we are unable to reconstruct the situation in Corinth completely, Paul clearly traces the divisions back to a false self-image on the part of the Corinthians, coupled with a false understanding of the apostles who preached to them (cf 4, 6.9; 9, 1-5) and of the Christian message itself. In these chapters he attempts to deal with those underlying factors and to bring the Corinthians back to a more correct perspective.

1, 12: I belong to: the activities of Paul and Apollos in Corinth are described in Acts 18. Kephas (i.e., "the Rock," a name by which Paul designates Peter also in 3, 22; 9, 5; 15, 5 and in Gal 1, 18; 2, 9.11.14) may well have passed through Corinth; he could have baptized some members of the community either there or elsewhere. The reference to Christ may be intended ironically here.

1, 13-17: The reference to baptism and the contrast with preaching the gospel in v 17a suggest that some Corinthians were paying special allegiance to the individuals who initiated them into the community.

1, 17b-18: The basic theme of chs 1-4 is announced. Adherence to individual leaders has something to do with differences in rhetorical ability and also with certain presuppositions regarding wisdom, eloquence, and effectiveness (power), which Paul judges to be in conflict with the gospel and the cross.

1, 17b: Not with the wisdom of human eloquence: both of the nouns employed here involve several levels of meaning, on which Paul deliberately plays as his thought unfolds. Wisdom (sophia) may be philosophical and speculative, but in biblical usage the term primarily denotes practical knowledge such as is demonstrated in the choice and effective application of means to achieve an end. The same term can designate the arts of building (cf 3, 10) or of persuasive speaking (cf 2, 4) or effectiveness in achieving salvation. Eloquence (logos): this translation emphasizes one possible meaning of the term logos (cf the references to rhetorical style and persuasiveness in 2, 1.4). But the term itself may denote an internal reasoning process, plan, or intention, as well as an external word, speech, or message. So by his expression ouk en sophia logou in the context of gospel preaching, Paul may intend to exclude both human ways of reasoning or thinking about things and human rhetorical technique. Human, this adjective does not stand in the Greek text but is supplied from the context. Paul will begin immediately to distinguish between sophia and logos from their divine counterparts and play them off against each other.

1, 21-25: True wisdom and power are to be found paradoxically where one would least expect them, in the place of their apparent negation. To human eyes the crucified Christ symbolizes impotence and absurdity.

1, 26—2, 5: The pattern of God's wisdom and power is exemplified in their own experience, if they interpret it rightly (1, 26-31), and can also be read in their experience of Paul as he first appeared among them preaching the gospel (2, 1-5).

many were of noble birth. [27]* Rather,
God chose the foolish of the world to shame the wise, and God chose the weak of the world to shame the strong, [28] and God chose the lowly and despised of the world, those who count for nothing, to reduce to nothing those who are something, [29]† so that no human being might boast before God. [30] It is due to him that you are in Christ Jesus, who became for us wisdom from God, as well as righteousness, sanctification, and redemption, [31]* so that, as it is written,
"Whoever boasts, should boast in the

CHAPTER 2

[1]† When I came to you, brothers, proclaiming the mystery of God, I did not come with sublimity of words or of wisdom. [2] For I resolved to know nothing
while I was with you except Jesus Christ, and him crucified. [3]† I came to you in weakness and fear and much trembling, [4]† and my message and my proclamation were not with persuasive [words of] wisdom, but with a demonstration of spirit and power, [5] so that your faith might rest not on human wisdom but on the power of God.

The True Wisdom.† [6] Yet we do speak
a wisdom to those who are mature, but not a wisdom of this age, nor of the rulers of this age who are passing away.
[7]† Rather we speak God's wisdom, mysterious, hidden, which God predetermined before the ages for our glory, [8]† and which none of the rulers of this age knew, for if they had known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory. [9]* But as it is written:

> "What eye has not seen, and ear has > not heard,
> and what has not entered the hu> man heart,
> what God has prepared for those > who love him,"

[10]* this God has revealed to us through the Spirit.

For the Spirit scrutinizes everything,
even the depths of God. [11] Among human beings, who knows what pertains to a person except the spirit of the person that is within? Similarly, no one knows what pertains to God except the Spirit of God. [12] We have not received the spirit of the world but the Spirit that is from God, so that we may understand the things freely given us by God.
[13]† And we speak about them not with words taught by human wisdom, but with words taught by the Spirit, describing spiritual realities in spiritual terms.

[14]† Now the natural person does not accept what pertains to the Spirit of God, for to him it is foolishness, and he cannot understand it, because it is judged spiritually. [15]† The spiritual person, however, can judge everything but is not subject to judgment by anyone.
[16]* For "who has known the mind of the Lord, so as to counsel him?" But we have the mind of Christ.

1, 29-31: "Boasting (about oneself)" is a Pauline expression for the radical sin, the claim to autonomy on the part of a creature, the illusion that we live and are saved by our own resources. "Boasting in the Lord" (31), on the other hand, is the acknowledgment that we live only from God and for God.

2, 1: The mystery of God: God's secret, known only to himself, is his plan for the salvation of his people; it is clear from 1, 18-25; 2, 2.8-10 that this secret involves Jesus and the cross. In place of mystery, other good manuscripts read "testimony" (cf 1, 6).

2, 3: The weakness of the crucified Jesus is reflected in Paul's own bearing (cf 2 Cor 10-13). Fear and much trembling: reverential fear based on a sense of God's transcendence permeates Paul's existence and preaching. Compare his advice to the Philippians to work out their salvation with "fear and trembling" (Phil 2, 12), because God is at work in them just as his exalting power was paradoxically at work in the emptying, humiliation, and obedience of Jesus to death on the cross (Phil 2, 6-11).

2, 4: Among many manuscript readings here the best is either "not with the persuasion of wisdom" or "not with persuasive words of wisdom," which differ only by a nuance. Whichever reading is accepted, the inefficacy of human wisdom for salvation is contrasted with the power of the cross.

2, 6—3, 4: Paul now asserts paradoxically what he has previously been denying. To the Greeks who "are looking for wisdom" (1, 22), he does indeed bring a wisdom, but of a higher order and an entirely different quality, the only wisdom really worthy of the name. The Corinthians would be able to grasp Paul's preaching as wisdom and enter into a wisdom-conversation with him if they were more open to the Spirit and receptive to the new insight and language that the Spirit teaches.

2, 7-10a: God's wisdom: his plan for our salvation. This was his own eternal secret that no one else could fathom, but in this new age of salvation he has graciously revealed it to us. For the pattern of God's secret, hidden to others and now revealed to the Church, cf also Rom 11, 25-36; 16, 25-27; Eph 1, 3-10; 3, 3-11; Col 1, 25-28.

2, 8: The rulers of this age: this suggests not only the political leaders of the Jews and Romans under whom Jesus was crucified (cf Acts 4, 25-28) but also the cosmic powers behind them (cf Eph 1, 20-23; 3, 10). They would not have crucified the Lord of glory: they became the unwitting executors of God's plan, which will paradoxically bring about their own conquest and submission (15, 24-28).

2, 13: In spiritual terms: the Spirit teaches spiritual people a new mode of perception (12) and an appropriate language by which they can share their self-understanding, their knowledge about what God has done in them. The final phrase in v 13 can also be translated "describing spiritual realities to spiritual people," in which case it prepares for vv 14-16.

2, 14: The natural person: see the note on 3, 1.

2, 15: The spiritual person . . . is not subject to judgment: since spiritual persons have been given knowledge of what pertains to God (11-12), they share in God's own capacity to judge. One to whom the mind of the Lord (and of Christ) is revealed (16) can be said to share in some sense in God's exemption from counseling and criticism.

CHAPTER 3

1† Brothers, I could not talk to you as spiritual people, but as fleshly people,
as infants in Christ. 2* I fed you milk, not solid food, because you were unable to take it. Indeed, you are still not able, even now, 3*† for you are still of the flesh. While there is jealousy and rivalry among you, are you not of the flesh, and behaving in an ordinary human way? 4* Whenever someone says, "I belong to Paul," and another, "I belong to Apollos," are you not merely human?

The Role of God's Ministers.† 5† What is Apollos, after all, and what is Paul?
Ministers through whom you became believers, just as the Lord assigned each one. 6* I planted, Apollos watered, but God caused the growth. 7 Therefore,
neither the one who plants nor the one who waters is anything, but only God, who causes the growth. 8 The one who plants and the one who waters are equal, and each will receive wages in proportion to his labor. 9* For we are God's co-workers; you are God's field,
God's building.

10† According to the grace of God
given to me, like a wise master builder
I laid a foundation, and another is building upon it. But each one must be careful how he builds upon it, 11 for no one can lay a foundation other than the one that is there, namely, Jesus Christ.
12 If anyone builds on this foundation
with gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, or straw, 13*† the work of each will come to light, for the Day will disclose
it. It will be revealed with fire, and the fire [itself] will test the quality of each one's work. 14 If the work stands that someone built upon the foundation, that person will receive a wage. 15† But if someone's work is burned up, that one will suffer loss; the person will be saved, but only as through fire. 16* Do you not know that you are the temple of God,
and that the Spirit of God dwells in you?
17† If anyone destroys God's temple, God will destroy that person; for the temple of God, which you are, is holy.

18* Let no one deceive himself. If anyone among you considers himself wise in this age, let him become a fool so as to become wise. 19* For the wisdom of this world is foolishness in the eyes of God, for it is written:

> "He catches the wise in their own > ruses,"

20* and again:

> "The Lord knows the thoughts of > the wise, that they are vain."

21*† So let no one boast about human beings, for everything belongs to you, 22 Paul or Apollos or Kephas, or the world or life or death, or the present or the future: all belong to you, 23 and you to Christ, and Christ to God.

† 3, 1-4: The Corinthians desire a sort of wisdom dialogue or colloquy with Paul; they are looking for solid, adult food, and he appears to disappoint their expectations. Paul counters: if such a dialogue has not yet taken place, the reason is that they are still at an immature stage of development (cf 2, 6).

3, 1: Spiritual people . . . fleshly people: Paul employs two clusters of concepts and terms to distinguish what later theology will call the "natural" and the "supernatural." (1) The natural person (2, 14) is one whose existence, perceptions, and behavior are determined by purely natural principles, the psychē (2, 14) and the sarx (flesh, a biblical term that connotes creatureliness, 1.3). Such persons are only infants (1); they remain on a purely human level (anthrōpoi, 4). (2) On the other hand, they are called to be animated by a higher principle, the pneuma, God's spirit. They are to become spiritual (pneumatikoi, 1) and mature (2, 6) in their perceptions and behavior (cf Gal 5, 16-26). The culmination of existence in the Spirit is described in 15, 44-49.

3, 3-4: Jealousy, rivalry, and divisions in the community are symptoms of their arrested development; they reveal the immaturity both of their self-understanding (4) and of the judgments about their apostles (21).

3, 5—4, 5: The Corinthians tend to evaluate their leaders by the criteria of human wisdom and to exaggerate their importance. Paul views the role of the apostles in the light of his theology of spiritual gifts (cf chs 12-14, where the charism of the apostle heads the lists). The essential aspects of all spiritual gifts (12, 4-6 presents them as gifts of grace, as services, and as modes of activity) are exemplified by the apostolate, which is a gift of grace (3, 10) through which God works (3, 9) and a form of service (3, 5) for the common good (elsewhere expressed by the verb "build up," suggested here by the image of the building, 3, 9). The apostles serve the church, but their accountability is to God and to Christ (4, 1-5).

3, 5: Ministers: for other expressions of Paul's understanding of himself as minister or steward to the church, cf 4, 1; 9, 17.19-27; 2 Cor 3, 6-9; 4, 1; 5, 18; 6, 3-4; and 11, 23 (the climax of Paul's defense).

3, 10-11: There are diverse functions in the service of the community, but each individual's task is serious, and each will stand accountable for the quality of his contribution.

3, 13: The Day: the great day of Yahweh, the day of judgment, which can be a time of either gloom or joy. Fire both destroys and purifies.

3, 15: Will be saved: although Paul can envision very harsh divine punishment (cf 17), he appears optimistic about the success of divine corrective means both here and elsewhere (cf 5, 5; 11, 32 [discipline]). The text of v 15 has sometimes been used to support the notion of purgatory, though it does not envisage this.

3, 17: Holy: i.e., "belonging to God." The cultic sanctity of the community is a fundamental theological reality to which Paul frequently alludes (cf 1, 2.30; 6, 11; 7, 14).

3, 21-23: These verses pick up the line of thought of 1, 10-13. If the Corinthians were genuinely wise (18-20), their perceptions would be reversed, and they would see everything in the world and all those with whom they exist in the church in their true relations with one another. Paul assigns all the persons involved in the theological universe a position on a scale: God, Christ, church members, church leaders. Read from top to bottom, the scale expresses ownership; read from bottom to top, the obligation to serve. This picture should be complemented by similar statements such as those in 8, 6 and 15, 20-28.

1* Thus should one regard us: as servants of Christ and stewards of the mysteries of God. 2 Now it is of course required of stewards that they be found trustworthy. 3 It does not concern me in the least that I be judged by you or any human tribunal; I do not even pass judgment on myself; 4* I am not conscious of anything against me, but I do not thereby stand acquitted; the one who judges me is the Lord. 5 Therefore, do not make any judgment before the appointed time, until the Lord comes, for he will bring to light what is hidden in darkness and will manifest the motives of our hearts, and then everyone will receive praise from God.

Paul's Life as Pattern.† 6† I have applied these things to myself and Apollos for your benefit, brothers, so that you may learn from us not to go beyond what is written, so that none of you will be inflated with pride in favor of one person over against another. 7 Who confers distinction upon you? What do you possess that you have not received? But if you have received it, why are you boasting as if you did not receive it? 8† You are already satisfied; you have already grown rich; you have become kings without us! Indeed, I wish that you had become kings, so that we also might become kings with you.

9*† For as I see it, God has exhibited us apostles as the last of all, like people sentenced to death, since we have become a spectacle to the world, to angels and human beings alike. 10* We are fools on Christ's account, but you are wise in Christ; we are weak, but you are strong; you are held in honor, but we in disrepute. 11* To this very hour we go hungry and thirsty, we are poorly clad and roughly treated, we wander about homeless 12* and we toil, working with our own hands. When ridiculed, we bless; when persecuted, we endure; 13 when slandered, we respond gently. We have become like the world's rubbish, the scum of all, to this very moment.

14† I am writing you this not to shame you, but to admonish you as my beloved children. 15* Even if you should have countless guides to Christ, yet you do not have many fathers, for I became your father in Christ Jesus through the gospel. 16* Therefore, I urge you, be imitators of me. 17* For this reason I am sending you Timothy, who is my beloved and faithful son in the Lord; he will remind you of my ways in Christ [Jesus], just as I teach them everywhere in every church.

18† Some have become inflated with pride, as if I were not coming to you. 19 But I will come to you soon, if the Lord is willing, and I shall ascertain not the talk of these inflated people but their power. 20* For the kingdom of God is not a matter of talk but of power.

20: 2, 4; 1 Thes 1, 5.

4, 6-21: This is an emotionally charged peroration to the discussion about divisions. It contains several exhortations and statements of Paul's purpose in writing (cf 6.14-17.21) that counterbalance the initial exhortation at 1, 10.

4, 6: That you may learn from us not to go beyond what is written: the words "to go" are not in the Greek, but have here been added as the minimum necessary to elicit sense from this difficult passage. It probably means that the Corinthians should avoid the false wisdom of vain speculation, contenting themselves with Paul's proclamation of the cross, which is the fulfillment of God's promises in the Old Testament (what is written). Inflated with pride: literally, "puffed up," i.e., arrogant, filled with a sense of self-importance. The term is particularly Pauline, found in the New Testament only in 1 Cor 4, 6.18-19; 5, 2; 8, 1; 13, 4; Col 2, 18 (cf the related noun at 2 Cor 12, 20). It sometimes occurs in conjunction with the theme of "boasting," as in vv 6-7 here.

4, 8: Satisfied . . . rich . . . kings: these three statements could also be punctuated as questions continuing the series begun in v 7. In any case these expressions reflect a tendency at Corinth toward an overrealized eschatology, a form of self-deception that draws Paul's irony. The underlying attitude has implications for the Corinthians' thinking about other issues, notably morality and the resurrection, that Paul will address later in the letter.

4, 9-13: A rhetorically effective catalogue of the circumstances of apostolic existence, in the course of which Paul ironically contrasts his own sufferings with the Corinthians' illusion that they have passed beyond the folly of the passion and have already reached the condition of glory. His language echoes that of the beatitudes and woes, which assert a future reversal of present conditions. Their present sufferings ("to this very hour," 11) place the apostles in the class of those to whom the beatitudes promise future relief (Mt 5, 3-11; Lk 6, 20-23); whereas the Corinthians' image of themselves as "already" filled, rich, ruling (8), as wise, strong, and honored (10) places them paradoxically in the position of those whom the woes threaten with future undoing (Lk 6, 24-26). They have lost sight of the fact that the reversal is predicted for the future.

4, 14-17: My beloved children: the close of the argument is dominated by the tender metaphor of the father who not only gives his children life but also educates them. Once he has begotten them through his preaching, Paul continues to present the gospel to them existentially, by his life as well as by his word, and they are to learn, as children do, by imitating their parents (16). The reference to the rod in v 21 belongs to the same image-complex. So does the image of the ways in v 17; the ways that Paul teaches everywhere, "his ways in Christ Jesus," mean a behavior pattern quite different from the human ways along which the Corinthians are walking (3, 3).

4, 18-21: Verse 20 picks up the contrast between a certain kind of talk (logos) and true power (dynamis) from 1, 17-18 and 2, 4-5. The kingdom, which many of them imagine to be fully present in their lives (8), will be rather unexpectedly disclosed in the strength of Paul's encounter with them, if they make a powerful intervention on his part necessary. Compare the similar ending to an argument in 2 Cor 13, 1-4.10.

21* Which do you prefer? Shall I come to you with a rod, or with love and a gentle spirit?

B. Moral Disorders†

A Case of Incest.† 1* It is widely reported that there is immorality among you, and immorality of a kind not found even among pagans—a man living with his father's wife. 2† And you are inflated with pride. Should you not rather have been sorrowful? The one who did this deed should be expelled from your midst. 3* I, for my part, although absent in body but present in spirit, have already, as if present, pronounced judgment on the one who has committed this deed, 4 in the name of [our] Lord Jesus: when you have gathered together and I am with you in spirit with the power of the Lord Jesus, 5*† you are to deliver this man to Satan for the destruction of his flesh, so that his spirit may be saved on the day of the Lord.

6*† Your boasting is not appropriate. Do you not know that a little yeast leavens all the dough? 7*† Clear out the old yeast, so that you may become a fresh batch of dough, inasmuch as you are unleavened. For our paschal lamb, Christ, has been sacrificed. 8* Therefore let us celebrate the feast, not with the old yeast, the yeast of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.

9† I wrote you in my letter not to associate with immoral people, 10* not at all referring to the immoral of this world or the greedy and robbers or idolaters; for you would then have to leave the world. 11* But I now write to you not to associate with anyone named a brother, if he is immoral, greedy, an idolater, a slanderer, a drunkard, or a robber, not even to eat with such a person. 12 For why should I be judging outsiders? Is it not your business to judge those within? 13* God will judge those outside. "Purge the evil person from your midst."

Lawsuits before Unbelievers.† 1 How can any one of you with a case against another dare to bring it to the unjust for judgment instead of to the holy ones? 2*† Do you not know that the holy ones will judge the world? If the world is to be judged by you, are you unqualified for the lowest law courts? 3 Do you not know that we will judge angels? Then why not everyday matters? 4 If, therefore, you have courts for everyday matters, do you seat as judges people of no standing in the church? 5 I say this to shame you. Can it be that there is not one among you wise enough to be able to settle a case between brothers? 6 But rather brother goes to court against brother, and that before unbelievers?

7* Now indeed [then] it is, in any case, a failure on your part that you have lawsuits against one another. Why not rather put up with injustice? Why not rather let yourselves be cheated?

5, 1—6, 20: Paul now takes up a number of other matters that require regulation. These have come to his attention by hearsay (5, 1), probably in reports brought by "Chloe's people" (1, 11).

5, 1-13: Paul first deals with the incestuous union of a man with his stepmother (1-8) and then attempts to clarify general admonitions he has given about associating with fellow Christians guilty of immorality (9-13). Each of these three brief paragraphs expresses the same idea: the need of separation between the holy and the unholy.

5, 2: Inflated with pride: this remark and the reference to boasting in v 6 suggest that they are proud of themselves despite the infection in their midst, tolerating and possibly even approving the situation. The attitude expressed in 6, 2.13 may be influencing their thinking in this case.

5, 5: Deliver this man to Satan: once the sinner is expelled from the church, the sphere of Jesus' lordship and victory over sin, he will be in the region outside over which Satan is still master. For the destruction of his flesh: the purpose of the penalty is medicinal: through affliction, sin's grip over him may be destroyed and the path to repentance and reunion laid open. With Paul's instructions for an excommunication ceremony here, contrast his recommendations for the reconciliation of a sinner in 2 Cor 2, 5-11.

5, 6: A little yeast: yeast, which induces fermentation, is a natural symbol for a source of corruption that becomes all-pervasive. The expression is proverbial.

5, 7-8: In the Jewish calendar, Passover was followed immediately by the festival of Unleavened Bread. In preparation for this feast all traces of old bread were removed from the house, and during the festival only unleavened bread was eaten. The sequence of these two feasts provides Paul with an image of Christian existence: Christ's death (the true Passover celebration) is followed by the life of the Christian community, marked by newness, purity, and integrity (a perpetual feast of unleavened bread). Paul may have been writing around Passover time (cf 16, 5); this is a little Easter homily, the earliest in Christian literature.

5, 9-13: Paul here corrects a misunderstanding of his earlier directives against associating with immoral fellow Christians. He concedes the impossibility of avoiding contact with sinners in society at large but urges the Corinthians to maintain the inner purity of their own community.

6, 1-11: Christians at Corinth are suing one another before pagan judges in Roman courts. A barrage of rhetorical questions (1-9) betrays Paul's indignation over this practice, which he sees as an infringement upon the holiness of the Christian community.

6, 2-3: The principle to which Paul appeals is an eschatological prerogative promised to Christians: they are to share with Christ the judgment of the world (cf Dn 7, 22.27). Hence they ought to be able to settle minor disputes within the community.

[8] Instead, you inflict injustice and cheat, and this to brothers. [9]† Do you not know that the unjust will not inherit the kingdom of God? Do not be deceived; neither fornicators nor idolaters nor adulterers nor boy prostitutes nor practicing homosexuals [10] nor thieves nor the greedy nor drunkards nor slanderers nor robbers will inherit the kingdom of God. [11] That is what some of you used to be; but now you have had yourselves washed, you were sanctified, you were justified in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ and in the Spirit of our God.

Sexual Immorality.† [12]† "Everything is lawful for me," but not everything is beneficial. "Everything is lawful for me," but I will not let myself be dominated by anything. [13] "Food for the stomach and the stomach for food," but God will do away with both the one and the other. The body, however, is not for immorality, but for the Lord, and the Lord is for the body; [14] God raised the Lord and will also raise us by his power.
[15]*† Do you not know that your bodies are members of Christ? Shall I then take Christ's members and make them the members of a prostitute? Of course not!
[16]* [Or] do you not know that anyone who joins himself to a prostitute becomes one body with her? For "the two," it says, "will become one flesh."
[17]* But whoever is joined to the Lord becomes one spirit with him. [18]† Avoid immorality. Every other sin a person commits is outside the body, but the immoral person sins against his own body.
[19]† Do you not know that your body is a temple of the holy Spirit within you, whom you have from God, and that you are not your own? [20] For you have been purchased at a price. Therefore, glorify God in your body.

Advice to the Married.† [1]† Now in regard to the matters about which you to touch a woman," [2] but because of cases of immorality every man should have his own wife, and every woman

6, 9-10: A catalogue of typical vices that exclude from the kingdom of God and that should be excluded from God's church. Such lists (cf 5, 10) reflect the common moral sensibility of the New Testament period.

6, 9: The Greek word translated as boy prostitutes designated catamites, i.e., boys or young men who were kept for purposes of prostitution, a practice not uncommon in the Greco-Roman world. In Greek mythology this was the function of Ganymede, the "cupbearer of the gods," whose Latin name was Catamitus. The term translated practicing homosexuals refers to adult males who indulged in homosexual practices with such boys. See similar condemnations of such practices in Rom 1, 26-27; 1 Tm 1, 10.

6, 12-20: Paul now turns to the opinion of some Corinthians that sexuality is a morally indifferent area (12-13). This leads him to explain the mutual relation between the Lord Jesus and our bodies (13b) in a densely packed paragraph that contains elements of a profound theology of sexuality (15-20).

6, 12-13: Everything is lawful for me: the Corinthians may have derived this slogan from Paul's preaching about Christian freedom, but they mean something different by it: they consider sexual satisfaction a matter as indifferent as food, and they attribute no lasting significance to bodily functions (13a). Paul begins to deal with the slogan by two qualifications, which suggest principles for judging sexual activity. Not everything is beneficial: cf 10, 23, and the whole argument of chs 8-10 on the finality of freedom and moral activity. Not let myself be dominated: certain apparently free actions may involve in fact a secret servitude in conflict with the lordship of Jesus.

6, 15b-16: A prostitute: the reference may be specifically to religious prostitution, an accepted part of pagan culture at Corinth and elsewhere; but the prostitute also serves as a symbol for any sexual relationship that conflicts with Christ's claim over us individually. The two . . . will become one flesh: the text of Gn 2, 24 is applied positively to human marriage in Mt and Mk, and in Eph 5, 29-32: love of husband and wife reflect the love of Christ for his church. The application of the text to union with a prostitute is jarring, for such a union is a parody, an antitype of marriage, which does conflict with Christ's claim over us. This explains the horror expressed in 15b.

6, 18: Against his own body: expresses the intimacy and depth of sexual disorder, which violates the very orientation of our bodies.

6, 19-20: Paul's vision becomes trinitarian. A temple: sacred by reason of God's gift, his indwelling Spirit. Not your own: but "for the Lord," who acquires ownership by the act of redemption. Glorify God in your body: the argument concludes with a positive imperative to supplement the negative "avoid immorality" of v 18. Far from being a terrain that is morally indifferent, the area of sexuality is one in which our relationship with God (and his Christ and his Spirit) is very intimately expressed: he is either highly glorified or deeply offended.

7, 1-40: Paul now begins to answer questions addressed to him by the Corinthians (7, 1—11, 1). The first of these concerns marriage. This chapter contains advice both to the married (1-16) and to the unmarried (25-38) or widowed (39-40); these two parts are separated by vv 17-24, which enunciate a principle applicable to both.

7, 1-16: It seems that some Christians in Corinth were advocating asceticism in sexual matters. The pattern it is a good thing . . . , but occurs twice (1-2.8-9; cf 26), suggesting that in this matter as in others the Corinthians have seized upon a genuine value but are exaggerating or distorting it in some way. Once again Paul calls them to a more correct perspective and a better sense of their own limitations. The phrase it is a good thing (1) may have been the slogan of the ascetic party at Corinth.

7, 1-7: References to Paul's own behavior (7-8) suggest that his celibate way of life and his preaching to the unmarried (cf 25-35) have given some the impression that asceticism within marriage, i.e., suspension of normal sexual relations, would be a laudable ideal. Paul points to their experience of widespread immorality to caution them against overestimating their own strength (2); as individuals they may not have the particular gift that makes such asceticism feasible (7) and hence are to abide by the principle to be explained in vv 17-24.

her own husband. 3 The husband should fulfill his duty toward his wife, and likewise the wife toward her husband.
4 A wife does not have authority over her own body, but rather her husband, and similarly a husband does not have authority over his own body, but rather his wife. 5 Do not deprive each other, except perhaps by mutual consent for a time, to be free for prayer, but then return to one another, so that Satan may not tempt you through your lack of self-control. 6† This I say by way of concession, however, not as a command. 7*† Indeed, I wish everyone to be as I am, but each has a particular gift from God, one of one kind and one of another.

8*† Now to the unmarried and to widows, I say: it is a good thing for them to remain as they are, as I do, 9 but if they cannot exercise self-control they should marry, for it is better to marry than to be on fire. 10*† To the married,
however, I give this instruction (not I,
but the Lord): a wife should not separate from her husband 11—and if she does separate she must either remain single or become reconciled to her husband—and a husband should not divorce his wife.

12† To the rest I say (not the Lord): if any brother has a wife who is an unbe-liever, and she is willing to go on living with him, he should not divorce her; 13 and if any woman has a husband who is an unbeliever, and he is willing to go on living with her, she should not divorce her husband. 14* For the unbelieving husband is made holy through his wife, and the unbelieving wife is made holy through the brother. Otherwise your children would be unclean, whereas in fact they are holy.

15† If the unbeliever separates, however, let him separate. The brother or sister is not bound in such cases; God has called you to peace. 16 For how do you know, wife, whether you will save your husband; or how do you know, husband, whether you will save your wife?

The Life That the Lord Has Assigned.† 17 Only, everyone should live as the Lord has assigned, just as God called each one. I give this order in all the churches. 18* Was someone called after he had been circumcised? He should not try to undo his circumcision.
Was an uncircumcised person called?
He should not be circumcised.
19* Circumcision means nothing, and uncircumcision means nothing; what matters is keeping God's commandments. 20 Everyone should remain in the state in which he was called.

21 Were you a slave when you were called? Do not be concerned but, even if you can gain your freedom, make the most of it. 22* For the slave called in the Lord is a freed person in the Lord, just as the free person who has been called is a slave of Christ. 23* You have been purchased at a price. Do not become slaves to human beings. 24 Brothers, everyone should continue before God in the state in which he was called.

Advice to Virgins and Widows.†
25 Now in regard to virgins, I have no commandment from the Lord, but I give my opinion as one who by the Lord's mercy is trustworthy. 26* So this is what I think best because of the present distress: that it is a good thing for a person to remain as he is. 27 Are you bound to a wife? Do not seek a separation. Are you free of a wife? Then do not look for a wife. 28 If you marry, however, you do not sin, nor does an unmarried woman sin if she marries; but such people will experience affliction in their earthly life, and I would like to spare you that.

29*† I tell you, brothers, the time is running out. From now on, let those having wives act as not having them, 30 those weeping as not weeping, those rejoicing as not rejoicing, those buying as not owning, 31 those using the world

7, 6: By way of concession: this refers most likely to the concession mentioned in v 5a: temporary interruption of relations for a legitimate purpose.

7, 7: A particular gift from God: use of the term charisma suggests that marriage and celibacy may be viewed in the light of Paul's theology of spiritual gifts (chs 12-14).

7, 8: Paul was obviously unmarried when he wrote this verse. Some interpreters believe that he had previously been married and widowed; there is no clear evidence either for or against this view, which was expressed already at the end of the second century by Clement of Alexandria.

7, 10-11: (Not I, but the Lord): Paul reminds the married of Jesus' principle of nonseparation (Mk 10, 9). This is one of his rare specific references to the teaching of Jesus.

7, 12-14: To the rest: marriages in which only one partner is a baptized Christian. Jesus' prohibition against divorce is not addressed to them, but Paul extends the principle of nonseparation to such unions, provided they are marked by peacefulness and shared sanctification.

7, 15-16: If the unbeliever separates: the basis of the "Pauline privilege" in Catholic marriage legislation.

7, 17-24: On the ground that distinct human conditions are less significant than the whole new existence opened up by God's call, Paul urges them to be less concerned with changing their states of life than with answering God's call where it finds them. The principle applies both to the married state (1-16) and to the unmarried (25-38).

7, 25-28: Paul is careful to explain that the principle of v 17 does not bind under sin but that present earthly conditions make it advantageous for the unmarried to remain as they are (28). These remarks must be complemented by the statement about "particular gifts" from v 7.

7, 29-31: The world . . . is passing away: Paul advises Christians to go about the ordinary activities of life in a manner different from those who are totally immersed in them and unaware of their transitoriness.

as not using it fully. For the world in its present form is passing away.
32 I should like you to be free of anxieties. An unmarried man is anxious about the things of the Lord, how he may please the Lord. 33* But a married man is anxious about the things of the world, how he may please his wife, 34* and he is divided. An unmarried woman or a virgin is anxious about the things of the Lord, so that she may be holy in both body and spirit. A married woman, on the other hand, is anxious about the things of the world, how she may please her husband. 35* I am telling you this for your own benefit, not to impose a restraint upon you, but for the sake of propriety and adherence to the Lord without distraction.
36† If anyone thinks he is behaving improperly toward his virgin, and if a critical moment has come and so it has to be, let him do as he wishes. He is committing no sin; let them get married.
37 The one who stands firm in his resolve, however, who is not under compulsion but has power over his own will, and has made up his mind to keep his virgin, will be doing well. 38 So then, the one who marries his virgin does well; the one who does not marry her will do better.
39*† A wife is bound to her husband as long as he lives. But if her husband dies, she is free to be married to whomever she wishes, provided that it be in the Lord. 40* She is more blessed, though, in my opinion, if she remains as she is, and I think that I too have the Spirit of God.

B. Offerings to Idols†

Knowledge Insufficient. 1*† Now in regard to meat sacrificed to idols: we realize that "all of us have knowledge"; knowledge inflates with pride, but love builds up. 2 If anyone supposes he knows something, he does not yet know as he ought to know. 3* But if one loves God, one is known by him.
4* So about the eating of meat sacrificed to idols: we know that "there is no idol in the world," and that "there is no God but one." 5 Indeed, even though there are so-called gods in heaven and on earth (there are, to be sure, many "gods" and many "lords"), 6*† yet for us there is one God, the Father,

from whom all things are and for whom we exist,
and one Lord, Jesus Christ,
through whom all things are and through whom we exist.

Practical Rules. 7* But not all have this knowledge. There are some who have been so used to idolatry up until now that, when they eat meat sacrificed to idols, their conscience, which is weak, is defiled.
8*† Now food will not bring us closer to God. We are no worse off if we do not eat, nor are we better off if we do.
9* But make sure that this liberty of 9: Rom 14, 13.20-21.

† 7, 36-38: The passage is difficult to interpret, because it is unclear whether Paul is thinking of a father and his unmarried daughter (or slave), or of a couple engaged in a betrothal or spiritual marriage. The general principles already enunciated apply: there is no question of sin, even if they should marry, but staying as they are is "better" (for the reasons mentioned in 28-35). Once again the charisma of v 7, which applies also to the unmarried (8-9), is to be presupposed.

7, 36: A critical moment has come: either because the woman will soon be beyond marriageable age, or because their passions are becoming uncontrollable (cf 9).

7, 39-40: Application of the principles to the case of widows. If they do choose to remarry, they ought to prefer Christian husbands.

8, 1—11, 1: The Corinthians' second question concerns meat that has been sacrificed to idols; in this area they were exhibiting a disordered sense of liberation that Paul here tries to rectify. These chapters contain a sustained and unified argument that illustrates Paul's method of theological reflection on a moral dilemma. Although the problem with which he is dealing is dated, the guidelines for moral decisions that he offers are of lasting validity.

Essentially Paul urges them to take a communitarian rather than an individualistic view of their Christian freedom. Many decisions that they consider pertinent only to their private relationship with God have, in fact, social consequences. Nor can moral decisions be determined by merely theoretical considerations; they must be based on concrete circumstances, specifically on the value and needs of other individuals and on mutual responsibility within the community. Paul here introduces the theme of "building up" (oikodomē), i.e., of contributing by individual action to the welfare and growth of the community. This theme will be further developed in ch 14; see the note on 14, 3b-5. Several years later Paul would again deal with the problem of meat sacrificed to idols in Rom 14, 1—15, 6.

8, 1a: Meat sacrificed to idols: much of the food consumed in the city could have passed through pagan religious ceremonies before finding its way into markets and homes. "All of us have knowledge": a slogan, similar to 6, 12, which reveals the self-image of the Corinthians. Verse 4 will specify the content of this knowledge.

8, 6: This verse rephrases the monotheistic confession of v 4 in such a way as to contrast it with polytheism (5) and to express our relationship with the one God in concrete, i.e., in personal and Christian terms. And for whom we exist: since the Greek contains no verb here and the action intended must be inferred from the preposition eis, another translation is equally possible: "toward whom we return." Through whom all things: the earliest reference in the New Testament to Jesus' role in creation.

8, 8-9: Although the food in itself is morally neutral, extrinsic circumstances may make the eating of it harmful. A stumbling block: the image is that of tripping or causing someone to fall (cf 13; 9, 12; 10, 12.32; 2 Cor 6, 3; Rom 14, 13.20-21). This is a basic moral imperative for Paul, a counterpart to the positive imperative to "build one another up"; compare the expression "giving offense" as opposed to "pleasing" in 10, 32-33.

yours in no way becomes a stumbling block to the weak. [10] If someone sees you, with your knowledge, reclining at table in the temple of an idol, may not his conscience too, weak as it is, be "built up" to eat the meat sacrificed to idols? [11]* Thus through your knowledge, the weak person is brought to destruction, the brother for whom Christ died. [12] When you sin in this way against your brothers and wound their consciences, weak as they are, you are sinning against Christ. [13]*† Therefore, if food causes my brother to sin, I will never eat meat again, so that I may not cause my brother to sin.

Paul's Rights as an Apostle. [1]* Am I not free? Am I not an apostle? Have I not seen Jesus our Lord? Are you not my work in the Lord? [2] Although I may not be an apostle for others, certainly I am for you, for you are the seal of my apostleship in the Lord.

[3]† My defense against those who would pass judgment on me is this. [4]† Do we not have the right to eat and drink? [5] Do we not have the right to take along a Christian wife, as do the rest of the apostles, and the brothers of the Lord, and Kephas? [6]* Or is it only myself and Barnabas who do not have the right not to work? [7]* Who ever serves as a soldier at his own expense? Who plants a vineyard without eating its produce? Or who shepherds a flock without using some of the milk from the flock? [8] Am I saying this on human authority, or does not the law also speak of these things? [9]* It is written in the law of Moses, "You shall not muzzle an ox while it is treading out the grain." Is God concerned about oxen, [10]* or is he not really speaking for our sake? It was written for our sake, because the plowman should plow in hope, and the thresher in hope of receiving a share. [11]* If we have sown spiritual seed for you, is it a great thing that we reap a material harvest from you? [12]*† If others share this rightful claim on you, do not we still more?

Reason for Not Using His Rights. Yet we have not used this right. On the contrary, we endure everything so as not to place an obstacle to the gospel of Christ. [13]† Do you not know that those who perform the temple services eat [what] belongs to the temple, and those who minister at the altar share in the sacrificial offerings? [14] In the same way, the Lord ordered that those who preach the gospel should live by the gospel.

[15]† I have not used any of these rights, however, nor do I write this that it be done so in my case. I would rather die. Certainly no one is going to nullify my boast. [16] If I preach the gospel, this is no reason for me to boast, for an obligation has been imposed on me, and woe to me if I do not preach it! [17]* If I do so willingly, I have a recompense, but if unwillingly, then I have been entrusted with a stewardship. [18]* What then is my recompense? That, when I

9, 1-27: This chapter is an emotionally charged expansion of Paul's appeal to his own example in 8, 13; its purpose is to reinforce the exhortation of 8, 9. The two opening questions introduce the themes of Paul's freedom and his apostleship (1), themes that the chapter will develop in reverse order, vv 1-18 treating the question of his apostleship and the rights that flow from it, and vv 19-27 exploring dialectically the nature of Paul's freedom. The language is highly rhetorical, abounding in questions, wordplays, paradoxes, images, and appeals to authority and experience. The argument is unified by repetitions; its articulations are highlighted by inclusions and transitional verses.

9, 3: My defense against those who would pass judgment on me: the reference to a defense (apologia) is surprising, and suggests that Paul is incorporating some material here that he has previously used in another context. The defense will touch on two points: the fact of Paul's rights as an apostle (4-12a and 13-14) and his nonuse of those rights (12b and 15-18).

9, 4-12a: Apparently some believe that Paul is not equal to the other apostles and therefore does not enjoy equal privileges. His defense on this point (here and in 13-14) reinforces the assertion of his apostolic character in v 2. It consists of a series of analogies from natural equity (7) and religious custom (13) designed to establish his equal right to support from the churches (4-6.11-12a); these analogies are confirmed by the authority of the law (8-10) and of Jesus himself (14).

9, 12b: It appears, too, that suspicion or misunderstanding has been created by Paul's practice of not living from his preaching. The first reason he asserts in defense of this practice is an entirely apostolic one; it anticipates the developments to follow in vv 19-22. He will give a second reason in vv 15-18.

9, 13-14: The position of these verses produces an interlocking of the two points of Paul's defense. These arguments by analogy (13) and from authority (14) belong with those of vv 7-10 and ground the first point. But Paul defers them until he has had a chance to mention "the gospel of Christ" (12b), after which it is more appropriate to mention Jesus' injunction to his preachers and to argue by analogy from the sacred temple service to his own liturgical service, the preaching of the gospel (cf Rom 1, 9; 15, 16).

9, 15-18: Paul now assigns a more personal motive to his nonuse of his right to support. His preaching is not a service spontaneously undertaken on his part but a stewardship imposed by a sort of divine compulsion. Yet to merit any reward he must bring some spontaneous quality to his service, and this he does by freely renouncing his right to support. The material here is quite similar to that contained in Paul's "defense" at 2 Cor 11, 5-12; 12, 11-18.

preach, I offer the gospel free of charge so as not to make full use of my right in the gospel.

All Things to All.† [19]* Although I am free in regard to all, I have made myself a slave to all so as to win over as many as possible. [20] To the Jews I became like a Jew to win over Jews; to those under the law I became like one under the law—though I myself am not under the law—to win over those under the law. [21] To those outside the law I became like one outside the law—though I am not outside God's law but within the law of Christ—to win over those outside the law. [22]* To the weak I became weak, to win over the weak. I have become all things to all, to save at least some. [23] All this I do for the sake of the gospel, so that I too may have a share in it.

[24]† Do you not know that the runners in the stadium all run in the race, but only one wins the prize? Run so as to win. [25] Every athlete exercises discipline in every way. They do it to win a perishable crown, but we an imperishable one. [26] Thus I do not run aimlessly; I do not fight as if I were shadowboxing. [27]† No, I drive my body and train it, for fear that, after having preached to others, I myself should be disqualified.

Warning against Overconfidence.† [1]* I do not want you to be unaware, brothers, that our ancestors were all under the cloud and all passed through the sea, [2]* and all of them were baptized into Moses in the cloud and in the sea. [3] All ate the same spiritual food, [4]† and all drank the same spiritual drink, for they drank from a spiritual rock that followed them, and the rock was the Christ. [5] Yet God was not pleased with most of them, for they were struck down in the desert.

[6]† These things happened as examples for us, so that we might not desire evil things, as they did. [7] And do not become idolaters, as some of them did, as it is written, "The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to revel." [8]* Let us not indulge in immorality as some of them did, and twenty-three thousand fell within a single day. [9]† Let us not test Christ as some of them did, and suffered death by serpents. [10] Do not grumble as some of them did, and suffered death by the destroyer. [11]† These things happened to them as an example, and they have been written down as a warning to us, upon whom the end of the ages has come. [12]† Therefore, whoever thinks he is standing secure should take care not to fall. [13]* No trial has come to you but what is human. God is faithful and will not let you be tried beyond your strength; but with the trial he will also provide a way out, so that you may be able to bear it.

Warning against Idolatry.† [14]* Therefore, my beloved, avoid idolatry. [15] I am speaking as to sensible people; judge for yourselves what I am saying. [16]* The cup of blessing that we bless, is it not a participation in the blood of Christ? The bread that we 9, 19-23: In a rhetorically balanced series of statements Paul expands and generalizes the picture of his behavior and explores the paradox of apostolic freedom. It is not essentially freedom from restraint but freedom for service—a possibility of constructive activity.

9, 24-27: A series of miniparables from sports, appealing to readers familiar with Greek gymnasia and the nearby Isthmian games.

9, 27: For fear that . . . I myself should be disqualified: a final paradoxical turn to the argument: what appears at first a free, spontaneous renunciation of rights (12-18) seems subsequently to be required for fulfillment of Paul's stewardship (to preach effectively he must reach his hearers wherever they are, 19-22), and finally is seen to be necessary for his own salvation (23-27). Mention of the possibility of disqualification provides a transition to ch 10.

10, 1-5: Paul embarks unexpectedly upon a panoramic survey of the events of the Exodus period. The privileges of Israel in the wilderness are described in terms that apply strictly only to the realities of the new covenant ("baptism," "spiritual food and drink"); interpreted in this way they point forward to the Christian experience (1-4). But those privileges did not guarantee God's permanent pleasure (5).

10, 4: A spiritual rock that followed them: the Torah speaks only about a rock from which water issued, but rabbinic legend amplified this into a spring that followed the Israelites throughout their migration. Paul uses this legend as a literary type: he makes the rock itself accompany the Israelites, and he gives it a spiritual sense. The rock was the Christ: in the Old Testament, Yahweh is the Rock of his people (cf Dt 32, Moses' song to Yahweh the Rock). Paul now applies this image to the Christ, the source of the living water, the true Rock that accompanied Israel, guiding their experiences in the desert.

10, 6-13: This section explicitates the typological value of these Old Testament events: the desert experiences of the Israelites are examples, meant as warnings, to deter us from similar sins (idolatry, immorality, etc.) and from a similar fate.

10, 9: Christ: to avoid Paul's concept of Christ present in the wilderness events, some manuscripts read "the Lord."

10, 11: Upon whom the end of the ages has come: it is our period in time toward which past ages have been moving and in which they arrive at their goal.

10, 12-13: Take care not to fall: the point of the whole comparison with Israel is to caution against overconfidence, a sense of complete security (12). This warning is immediately balanced by a reassurance, based, however, on God (13).

10, 14-22: The warning against idolatry from v 7 is now repeated (14) and explained in terms of the effect of sacrifices: all sacrifices, Christian (16-17), Jewish (18), or pagan (20), establish communion. But communion with Christ is exclusive, incompatible with any other such communion (21). Compare the line of reasoning at 6, 15.

break, is it not a participation in the body of Christ? [17]* Because the loaf of bread is one, we, though many, are one body, for we all partake of the one loaf.
[18]* Look at Israel according to the flesh; are not those who eat the sacrifices participants in the altar? [19] So what am I saying? That meat sacrificed to idols is anything? Or that an idol is anything? [20]† No, I mean that what they sacrifice, [they sacrifice] to demons, not to God, and I do not want you to become participants with demons. [21] You cannot drink the cup of the Lord and also the cup of demons. You cannot partake of the table of the Lord and of the table of demons. [22]* Or are we provoking the Lord to jealous anger? Are we stronger than he?

Seek the Good of Others.† [23]† "Everything is lawful," but not everything is beneficial. "Everything is lawful," but not everything builds up. [24] No one should seek his own advantage, but that of his neighbor. [25]† Eat anything sold in the market, without raising questions on grounds of conscience, [26]* for "the earth and its fullness are the Lord's." [27] If an unbeliever invites you and you want to go, eat whatever is placed before you, without raising questions on grounds of conscience. [28] But if someone says to you, "This was offered in sacrifice," do not eat it on account of the one who called attention to it and on account of conscience; [29] I mean not your own conscience, but the other's. For why should my freedom be determined by someone else's conscience? [30]* If I partake thankfully, why am I reviled for that over which I give thanks?
[31] So whether you eat or drink, or whatever you do, do everything for the glory of God. [32]† Avoid giving offense, whether to Jews or Greeks or the church of God, [33]* just as I try to please everyone in every way, not seeking my own benefit but that of the many, that they may be saved.

10, 20: To demons: although Jews denied divinity to pagan gods, they often believed that there was some nondivine reality behind the idols, such as the dead, or angels, or demons. The explanation Paul offers in v 20 is drawn from Dt 32, 7: the power behind the idols, with which the pagans commune, consists of demonic powers hostile to God.

10, 23—11, 1: By way of peroration Paul returns to the opening situation (ch 8) and draws conclusions based on the intervening considerations (chs 9-10).

10, 23-24: He repeats in the context of this new problem the slogans of liberty from 6, 12, with similar qualifications. Liberty is not merely an individual perfection, nor an end in itself, but is to be used for the common good. The language of v 24 recalls the descriptions of Jesus' self-emptying in Phil 2.

10, 25-30: A summary of specific situations in which the eating of meat sacrificed to idols could present problems of conscience. Three cases are considered. In the first (the marketplace, 25-26) and the second (at table, 27), there is no need to be concerned with whether food has passed through a pagan sacrifice or not, for the principle of 8, 4-6 still stands, and the whole creation belongs to the one God. But in the third case (28), the situation changes if someone present explicitly raises the question of the sacrificial origin of the food; eating in such circumstances may be subject to various interpretations, some of which could be harmful to individuals. Paul is at pains to insist that the enlightened Christian conscience need not change its judgment about the neutrality, even the goodness, of the food in itself (29-30); yet the total situation is altered to the extent that others are potentially endangered, and this calls for a different response, for the sake of others.

10, 32—11, 1: In summary, the general rule of mutually responsible use of their Christian freedom is enjoined first negatively (32), then positively, as exemplified in Paul (33), and finally grounded in Christ, the pattern for Paul's behavior and theirs (11, 1; cf Rom 15, 1-3).

11, 2—14, 40: This section of the letter is devoted to regulation of conduct at the liturgy. The problems Paul handles have to do with the dress of women in the assembly (11, 3-16), impropneties in the celebration of community meals (11, 17-34), and the use of charisms or spiritual gifts (12, 1—14, 40). The statement in 11, 2 introduces all of these discussions, but applies more appropriately to the second (cf the mention of praise in 11, 17 and of tradition in 11, 23).

11, 3-16: Women have been participating in worship at Corinth without the head-covering normal in Greek society of the period. Paul's stated goal is to bring them back into conformity with contemporary practice and propriety. In his desire to convince, he reaches for arguments from a variety of sources, though he has space to develop them only sketchily and is perhaps aware that they differ greatly in persuasiveness.

11, 3: A husband the head of his wife: the specific problem suggests to Paul the model of the head as a device for clarifying relations within a hierarchical structure. The model is similar to that developed later in greater detail and nuance in Eph 5, 21-33. It is a hybrid model, for it grafts onto a strictly theological scale of existence (cf 3, 21-23) the hierarchy of sociosexual relations prevalent in the ancient world: men, dominant, reflect the active function of Christ in relation to his church; women, submissive, reflect the passive role of the church with respect to its savior. This gives us the functional scale: God, Christ, man, woman.

11, 4-6: From man's direct relation to Christ, Paul infers that his head should not be covered. But woman, related not directly to Christ on the scale but to her husband, requires a covering as a sign of that relationship. Shameful . . . to have her hair cut off: certain less honored classes in society, such as lesbians and prostitutes, are thought to have worn their hair close-cropped.

with his head covered brings shame upon his head. 5 But any woman who prays or prophesies with her head unveiled brings shame upon her head, for it is one and the same thing as if she had had her head shaved. 6 For if a woman does not have her head veiled, she may as well have her hair cut off. But if it is shameful for a woman to have her hair cut off or her head shaved, then she should wear a veil.

7*† A man, on the other hand, should not cover his head, because he is the image and glory of God, but woman is the glory of man. 8* For man did not come from woman, but woman from man; 9* nor was man created for woman, but woman for man; 10† for this reason a woman should have a sign of authority on her head, because of the angels. 11*† Woman is not independent of man or man of woman in the Lord. 12* For just as woman came from man, so man is born of woman; but all things are from God.

13† Judge for yourselves: is it proper for a woman to pray to God with her head unveiled? 14 Does not nature itself teach you that if a man wears his hair long it is a disgrace to him, 15 whereas if a woman has long hair it is her glory, because long hair has been given [her] for a covering? 16 But if anyone is inclined to be argumentative, we do not have such a custom, nor do the churches of God.

B. The Lord's Supper†

An Abuse at Corinth. 17 In giving this instruction, I do not praise the fact that your meetings are doing more harm than good. 18* First of all, I hear that when you meet as a church there are divisions among you, and to a degree I believe it; 19† there have to be factions among you in order that [also] those who are approved among you may become known. 20 When you meet in one place, then, it is not to eat the Lord's supper, 21 for in eating, each one goes ahead with his own supper, and one goes hungry while another gets drunk. 22* Do you not have houses in which you can eat and drink? Or do you show contempt for the church of God and make those who have nothing feel ashamed? What can I say to you? Shall I praise you? In this matter I do not praise you.

Tradition of the Institution.† 23* For I received from the Lord what I also handed on to you, that the Lord Jesus, on the night he was handed over, took bread, 24 and, after he had given thanks, broke it and said, "This is my body that is for you. Do this in remembrance of me." 25* In the same way also the cup, after supper, saying, "This cup is the new covenant in my blood. Do this, as often as you drink it, in remembrance of me." 26 For as often as you eat this bread and drink the cup, you proclaim the death of the Lord until he comes.

27† Therefore whoever eats the bread or drinks the cup of the Lord unworthily will have to answer for the body and blood of the Lord. 28† A person should

11, 7-9: The hierarchy of v 3 is now expressed in other metaphors: the image (eikōn) and the reflected glory (doxa). Paul is alluding basically to the text of Gn 1, 27, in which mankind as a whole, the male-female couple, is created in God's image and given the command to multiply and together dominate the lower creation. But Gn 1, 24 is interpreted here in the light of the second creation narrative in Gn 2, in which each of the sexes is created separately (first the man and then the woman from man and for him, to be his helpmate, Gn 2, 20-23), and under the influence of the story of the fall, as a result of which the husband rules over the woman (Gn 3, 16). This interpretation splits the single image of God into two, at different degrees of closeness.

11, 10: A sign of authority: "authority" (exousia) may possibly be due to mistranslation of an Aramaic word for "veil"; in any case, the connection with v 9 indicates that the covering is a sign of woman's subordination. Because of the angels: a surprising additional reason, which the context does not clarify. Presumably the reference is to cosmic powers who might inflict harm on women or whose function is to watch over women or the cult.

11, 11-12: These parenthetical remarks relativize the argument from Gn 2-3. In the Lord: in the Christian economy the relation between the sexes is characterized by a mutual dependence, which is not further specified. And even in the natural order conditions have changed: the mode of origin described in Gn 2 has been reversed (12a). But the ultimately significant fact is the origin that all things have in common (12b).

11, 13-16: The argument for conformity to common church practice is summed up and pressed home. Verses 14-15 contain a final appeal to the sense of propriety that contemporary Greek society would consider "natural" (cf 5-6).

11, 17-34: Paul turns to another abuse connected with the liturgy, and a more serious one, for it involves neglect of basic Christian tradition concerning the meaning of the Lord's Supper. Paul recalls that tradition for them and reminds them of its implications.

11, 19: That . . . those who are approved among you may become known: Paul situates their divisions within the context of the eschatological separation of the authentic from the inauthentic and the final revelation of the difference. The notion of authenticity-testing recurs in the injunction to self-examination in view of present and future judgment (28-32).

11, 23-25: This is the earliest written account of the institution of the Lord's Supper in the New Testament. The narrative emphasizes Jesus' action of self-giving (expressed in the words over the bread and the cup) and his double command to repeat his own action.

11, 27: It follows that the only proper way to celebrate the Eucharist is one that corresponds to Jesus' intention, which fits with the meaning of his command to reproduce his action in the proper spirit. If the Corinthians eat and drink unworthily, i.e., without having grasped and internalized the meaning of his death for them, they will have to answer for the body and blood, i.e., will be guilty of a sin against the Lord himself (cf 8, 12).

11, 28: Examine himself: the Greek word is similar to that for "approved" in v 19, which means "having been tested and found true." The self-testing required for proper eating involves discerning the body (29), which, from the context, must mean understanding the sense of Jesus' death (26), perceiving the imperative to unity that follows from the fact that Jesus gives himself to all and requires us to repeat his sacrifice in the same spirit (18-25).

examine himself, and so eat the bread and drink the cup. [29]† For anyone who eats and drinks without discerning the body, eats and drinks judgment on himself. [30] That is why many among you are ill and infirm, and a considerable number are dying. [31] If we discerned ourselves, we would not be under judgment; [32]* but since we are judged by [the] Lord, we are being disciplined so that we may not be condemned along with the world.

[33] Therefore, my brothers, when you come together to eat, wait for one another. [34] If anyone is hungry, he should eat at home, so that your meetings may not result in judgment. The other matters I shall set in order when I come.

C. Spiritual Gifts†

CHAPTER 12

Unity and Variety. [1] Now in regard to spiritual gifts, brothers, I do not want you to be unaware. [2]*† You know how,
when you were pagans, you were constantly attracted and led away to mute idols. [3]* Therefore, I tell you that nobody speaking by the spirit of God says,
"Jesus be accursed." And no one can say, "Jesus is Lord," except by the holy Spirit.

[4]† There are different kinds of spiritual gifts but the same Spirit; [5] there are different forms of service but the same Lord; [6] there are different workings but the same God who produces all of them in everyone. [7] To each individual the manifestation of the Spirit is given for some benefit. [8] To one is given through the Spirit the expression of wisdom; to another the expression of knowledge according to the same Spirit; [9] to another faith by the same Spirit; to another gifts of healing by the one Spirit;
[10]* to another mighty deeds; to another prophecy; to another discernment of spirits; to another varieties of tongues;
to another interpretation of tongues.
[11]* But one and the same Spirit produces all of these, distributing them individually to each person as he wishes.

One Body, Many Parts.† [12]* As a body is one though it has many parts,
and all the parts of the body, though many, are one body, so also Christ.
[13]* For in one Spirit we were all baptized into one body, whether Jews or Greeks, slaves or free persons, and we were all given to drink of one Spirit.

[14] Now the body is not a single part,
but many. [15] If a foot should say, "Because I am not a hand I do not belong to the body," it does not for this reason belong any less to the body. [16] Or if an ear should say, "Because I am not an eye I do not belong to the body," it does not for this reason belong any less to the body. [17] If the whole body were an eye, where would the hearing be? If the whole body were hearing, where would the sense of smell be? [18] But as it is, God placed the parts, each one of them, in the body as he intended. [19] If they were all one part, where would the body be?
[20] But as it is, there are many parts, yet one body. [21] The eye cannot say to the hand, "I do not need you," nor again
the head to the feet, "I do not need you."
[22] Indeed, the parts of the body that seem to be weaker are all the more necessary, [23] and those parts of the body that we consider less honorable we surround with greater honor, and our less presentable parts are treated with greater propriety, [24] whereas our more presentable parts do not need this. But God has so constructed the body as to give greater honor to a part that is without it, [25] so that there may be no division in the body, but that the parts may have the same concern for one another.
[26] If [one] part suffers, all the parts suffer with it; if one part is honored, all the parts share its joy.

11, 29-32: Judgment: there is a series of wordplays in these verses that would be awkward to translate literally into English; it includes all the references to judgment (krima, 29.34; krinō, 31.32), discernment (diakrinō, 29.31), and condemnation (katakrinō, 32). The judgment is concretely described as the illness, infirmity, and death that have visited the community. These are signs that the power of Jesus' death is not yet completely recognized and experienced. Yet even the judgment incurred is an expression of God's concern; it is a medicinal measure meant to rescue us from condemnation with God's enemies.

12, 1—14, 40: Ecstatic and charismatic activity were common in early Christian experience, as they were in other ancient religions. But the Corinthians seem to have developed a disproportionate esteem for certain phenomena, especially tongues, to the detriment of order in the liturgy. Paul's response to this development provides us with the fullest exposition we have of his theology of the charisms.

12, 2-3: There is an experience of the Spirit and an understanding of ecstatic phenomena that are specifically Christian and that differ, despite apparent similarities, from those of the pagans. It is necessary to discern which spirit is leading one; ecstatic phenomena must be judged by their effect (2). Verse 3 illustrates this by an example: power to confess Jesus as Lord can come only from the Spirit, and it is inconceivable that the Spirit would move anyone to curse the Lord.

12, 4-6: There are some features common to all charisms, despite their diversity: all are gifts (charismata), grace from outside ourselves; all are forms of service (diakoniai), an expression of their purpose and effect; and all are workings (energēmata), in which God is at work. Paul associates each of these aspects with what later theology will call one of the persons of the Trinity, an early example of "appropriation."

12, 12-26: The image of a body is introduced to explain Christ's relationship with believers (12). Verse 13 applies this model to the church: by baptism all, despite diversity of ethnic or social origins, are integrated into one organism. Verses 14-26 then develop the need for diversity of function among the parts of a body without threat to its unity.

Application to Christ.† 27* Now you are Christ's body, and individually parts of it. 28*† Some people God has designated in the church to be, first, apostles; second, prophets; third, teachers; then, mighty deeds; then, gifts of healing, assistance, administration, and varieties of tongues. 29 Are all apostles? Are all prophets? Are all teachers? Do all work mighty deeds? 30 Do all have gifts of healing? Do all speak in tongues? Do all interpret? 31 Strive eagerly for the greatest spiritual gifts.

The Way of Love. But I shall show you a still more excellent way.

CHAPTER 13†

1*† If I speak in human and angelic tongues but do not have love, I am a resounding gong or a clashing cymbal. 2* And if I have the gift of prophecy and comprehend all mysteries and all knowledge; if I have all faith so as to move mountains but do not have love, I am nothing. 3* If I give away everything I own, and if I hand my body over so that I may boast but do not have love, I gain nothing.

4*† Love is patient, love is kind. It is not jealous, [love] is not pompous, it is not inflated, 5* it is not rude, it does not seek its own interests, it is not quick-tempered, it does not brood over injury, 6 it does not rejoice over wrongdoing but rejoices with the truth. 7* It bears all things, believes all things, hopes all things, endures all things.

8† Love never fails. If there are prophecies, they will be brought to nothing; if tongues, they will cease; if knowledge, it will be brought to nothing. 9 For we know partially and we prophesy partially, 10 but when the perfect comes, the partial will pass away. 11 When I was a child, I used to talk as a child, think as a child, reason as a child; when I became a man, I put aside childish things. 12* At present we see indistinctly, as in a mirror, but then face to face. At present I know partially; then I shall know fully, as I am fully known. 13*† So faith, hope, love remain, these three; but the greatest of these is love.

Prophecy Greater than Tongues.† 1* Pursue love, but strive eagerly for the spiritual gifts, above all that you may prophesy. 2† For one who speaks in a tongue does not speak to human beings but to God, for no one listens; he utters mysteries in spirit. 3*† On the other hand, one who prophesies does speak to human beings, for their building up,

12, 27-30: Paul now applies the image again to the church as a whole and its members (27). The lists in vv 28-30 spell out the parallelism by specifying the diversity of functions found in the church (cf Rom 12, 6-8; Eph 4, 11).

12, 28: First, apostles: apostleship was not mentioned in vv 8-10, nor is it at issue in these chapters, but Paul gives it pride of place in his listing. It is not just one gift among others but a prior and fuller gift that includes the others. They are all demonstrated in Paul's apostolate, but he may have developed his theology of charisms by reflecting first of all on his own grace of apostleship (cf 3, 5—4, 14; 9, 1-27; 2 Cor 2, 14—6, 13; 10, 1—13, 30, esp. 11, 23 and 12, 12).

13, 1-13: This chapter involves a shift of perspective and a new point. All or part of the material may once have been an independent piece in the style of Hellenistic eulogies of virtues, but it is now integrated, by editing, into the context of chs 12-14 (cf the reference to tongues and prophecy) and into the letter as a whole (cf the references to knowledge and to behavior). The function of ch 13 within the discussion of spiritual gifts is to relativize all the charisms by contrasting them with the more basic, pervasive, and enduring value that gives them their purpose and their effectiveness. The rhetoric of this chapter is striking.

13, 1-3: An inventory of gifts, arranged in careful gradation: neither tongues (on the lowest rung), nor prophecy, knowledge, or faith, nor even self-sacrifice has value unless informed by love.

13, 4-7: This paragraph is developed by personification and enumeration, defining love by what it does or does not do. The Greek contains fifteen verbs; it is natural to translate many of them by adjectives in English.

13, 8-13: The final paragraph announces its topic, Love never fails (8), then develops the permanence of love in contrast to the charisms (9-12), and finally asserts love's superiority even over the other "theological virtues" (13).

13, 13: In speaking of love, Paul is led by spontaneous association to mention faith and hope as well. They are already a well-known triad (cf 1 Thes 1, 3), three interrelated (cf 7) features of Christian life, more fundamental than any particular charism. The greatest . . . is love: love is operative even within the other members of the triad (7), so that it has a certain primacy among them. Or, if the perspective is temporal, love will remain (cf "never fails," 8) even when faith has yielded to sight and hope to possession.

14, 1-5: Verse 1b returns to the thought of 12, 31a and reveals Paul's primary concern. The series of contrasts in vv 2-5 discloses the problem at Corinth: a disproportionate interest in tongues, with a corresponding failure to appreciate the worth of prophecy. Paul attempts to clarify the relative values of those gifts by indicating the kind of communication achieved in each and the kind of effect each produces.

14, 2-3a: They involve two kinds of communication: tongues, private speech toward God in inarticulate terms that need interpretation to be intelligible to others (see 27-28); prophecy, communication with others in the community.

14, 3b-5: They produce two kinds of effect. One who speaks in tongues builds himself up; it is a matter of individual experience and personal perfection, which inevitably recalls Paul's previous remarks about being inflated, seeking one's own good, pleasing oneself. But a prophet builds up the church: the theme of "building up" or "edifying" others, the main theme of the letter, comes to clearest expression in this chapter (3.4.5.12.17). It has been anticipated at 8, 1 and 10, 23, and by the related concept of "the beneficial" in 6, 12; 10, 23; 12, 7; etc.

encouragement, and solace. 4 Whoever speaks in a tongue builds himself up, but whoever prophesies builds up the church. 5 Now I should like all of you to speak in tongues, but even more to prophesy. One who prophesies is greater than one who speaks in tongues, unless he interprets, so that the church may be built up.

6† Now, brothers, if I should come to you speaking in tongues, what good will I do you if I do not speak to you by way of revelation, or knowledge, or prophecy, or instruction? 7 Likewise, if inanimate things that produce sound, such as flute or harp, do not give out the tones distinctly, how will what is being played on flute or harp be recognized? 8 And if the bugle gives an indistinct sound, who will get ready for battle? 9 Similarly, if you, because of speaking in tongues, do not utter intelligible speech, how will anyone know what is being said? For you will be talking to the air. 10 It happens that there are many different languages in the world, and none is meaningless; 11 but if I do not know the meaning of a language, I shall be a foreigner to one who speaks it, and one who speaks it a foreigner to me. 12 So with yourselves: since you strive eagerly for spirits, seek to have an abundance of them for building up the church.

Need for Interpretation.† 13 Therefore, one who speaks in a tongue should pray to be able to interpret. 14† [For] if I pray in a tongue, my spirit is at prayer but my mind is unproductive. 15* So what is to be done? I will pray with the spirit, but I will also pray with the mind. I will sing praise with the spirit, but I will also sing praise with the mind. 16 Otherwise, if you pronounce a blessing [with] the spirit, how shall one who holds the place of the uninstructed say the "Amen" to your thanksgiving, since he does not know what you are saying? 17 For you may be giving thanks very well, but the other is not built up. 18 I give thanks to God that I speak in tongues more than any of you, 19 but in the church I would rather speak five words with my mind, so as to instruct others also, than ten thousand words in a tongue.

Functions of These Gifts.† 20* Brothers, stop being childish in your thinking. In respect to evil be like infants, but in your thinking be mature. 21* It is written in the law:

> "By people speaking strange tongues > and by the lips of foreigners
> I will speak to this people,
> and even so they will not listen to me,
> says the Lord." 22 Thus, tongues are a sign not for those who believe but for unbelievers, whereas prophecy is not for unbelievers but for those who believe.

23*† So if the whole church meets in one place and everyone speaks in tongues, and then uninstructed people or unbelievers should come in, will they not say that you are out of your minds? 24 But if everyone is prophesying, and an unbeliever or uninstructed person should come in, he will be convinced by everyone and judged by everyone, 25* and the secrets of his heart will be disclosed, and so he will fall down and worship God, declaring, "God is really in your midst."

Rules of Order.† 26* So what is to be

26: Eph 4, 12.

† 14, 6-12: Sound, in order to be useful, must be intelligible. This principle is illustrated by a series of analogies from music (7-8) and from ordinary human speech (10-11); it is applied to the case at hand in v 9 and v 12.

14, 13-19: The charism of interpretation lifts tongues to the level of intelligibility, enabling them to produce the same effect as prophecy (cf 5.26-28).

14, 14-15: My spirit: Paul emphasizes the exclusively ecstatic, nonrational quality of tongues. The tongues at Pentecost are also described as an ecstatic experience (Acts 2, 4.12-13), though Luke superimposes further interpretations of his own. My mind: the ecstatic element, dominant in earliest Old Testament prophecy as depicted in 1 Sam 10, 5-13; 19, 20-24, seems entirely absent from Paul's notion of prophecy and completely relegated to tongues. He emphasizes the role of reason when he specifies instruction as a function of prophecy (6.19.31). But he does not exclude intuition and emotion; cf references to encouragement and consolation (3.31) and the scene describing the ideal exercise of prophecy (24-25).

14, 20-22: The Corinthians pride themselves on tongues as a sign of God's favor, a means of direct communication with him (2.28). To challenge them to a more mature appraisal, Paul draws from scripture a less flattering explanation of what speaking in tongues may signify. Isaiah threatened the people that if they failed to listen to their prophets, the Lord would speak to them (in punishment) through the lips of Assyrian conquerors (Is 28, 11-12). Paul compresses Isaiah's text and makes God address his people directly. Equating tongues with foreign languages (cf 10-11), Paul concludes from Isaiah that tongues are a sign not for those who believe, i.e., not a mark of God's pleasure for those who listen to him but a mark of his displeasure with those in the community who are faithless, who have not heeded the message that he has sent through the prophets.

14, 23-25: Paul projects the possible missionary effect of two hypothetical liturgical experiences, one consisting wholly of tongues, the other entirely of prophecy. Uninstructed (idiōtai): the term may simply mean people who do not speak or understand tongues, as in v 16, where it seems to designate Christians. But coupled with the term "unbelievers" it may be another way of designating those who have not been initiated into the community of faith: some believe it denotes a special class of non-Christians who are close to the community, such as catechumens. Unbelievers (apistoi): he has shifted from the inner-community perspective of v 22; the term here designates non-Christians (cf 6, 6; 7, 15; 10, 27).

done, brothers? When you assemble, one has a psalm, another an instruction, a revelation, a tongue, or an interpretation. Everything should be done for building up. [27] If anyone speaks in a tongue, let it be two or at most three, and each in turn, and one should interpret. [28] But if there is no interpreter, the person should keep silent in the church and speak to himself and to God.

[29] Two or three prophets should speak, and the others discern. [30] But if a revelation is given to another person sitting there, the first one should be silent. [31] For you can all prophesy one by one, so that all may learn and all be encouraged. [32] Indeed, the spirits of prophets are under the prophets' control, [33] since he is not the God of disorder but of peace.

†As in all the churches of the holy ones, [34]* women should keep silent in the churches, for they are not allowed to speak, but should be subordinate, as even the law says. [35] But if they want to learn anything, they should ask their husbands at home. For it is improper for a woman to speak in the church. [36] Did the word of God go forth from you? Or has it come to you alone?

[37] If anyone thinks that he is a prophet or a spiritual person, he should recognize that what I am writing to you is a commandment of the Lord. [38] If anyone does not acknowledge this, he is not acknowledged. [39] So, [my] brothers, strive eagerly to prophesy, and do not forbid speaking in tongues, [40] but everything must be done properly and in order.

V: THE RESURRECTION

A. The Resurrection of Christ

CHAPTER 15†

The Gospel Teaching.† [1] Now I am reminding you, brothers, of the gospel I preached to you, which you indeed received and in which you also stand. [2] Through it you are also being saved, if you hold fast to the word I preached to you, unless you believed in vain. [3]† For I handed on to you as of first importance what I also received: that Christ died for our sins in accordance with the scriptures; [4] that he was buried; that he was raised on the third day in accordance with the scriptures; [5]* that he appeared to Kephas, then to the Twelve. [6] After that, he appeared to more than five hundred brothers at once, most of whom are still living, though some have fallen asleep. [7] After that he appeared to James, then to all the apostles. [8]* Last of all, as to one born abnormally, he appeared to me. [9]*† For I am the least of the apostles, not fit to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God. [10] But by the grace of God I am what I am, and his grace to me has not been ineffective. Indeed, I have toiled harder than all of them; not I, however, but the grace of God [that is] with me. [11] Therefore, whether it be I or they, so we preach and so you believed.

14, 33b-36: Verse 33b may belong with what precedes, so that the new paragraph would begin only with v 34. Verses 34-35 change the subject. These two verses have the theme of submission in common with ch 11, despite differences in vocabulary, and a concern with what is or is not becoming; but it is difficult to harmonize the injunction to silence here with ch 11, which appears to take it for granted that women do pray and prophesy aloud in the assembly (cf 11, 5.13). Hence the verses are often considered an interpolation, reflecting the discipline of later churches; such an interpolation would have to have antedated our manuscripts, all of which contain them, though some transpose them to the very end of the chapter.

15, 1-58: Some consider this chapter an earlier Pauline composition inserted into the present letter. The problem that Paul treats is clear to a degree: some of the Corinthians are denying the resurrection of the dead (12), apparently because of their inability to imagine how any kind of bodily existence could be possible after death (35). It is plausibly supposed that their attitude stems from Greek anthropology, which looks with contempt upon matter and would be content with the survival of the soul, and perhaps also from an overrealized eschatology of gnostic coloration, such as that reflected in 2 Tm 2, 18, which considers the resurrection a purely spiritual experience already achieved in baptism and in the forgiveness of sins. Paul, on the other hand, will affirm both the essential corporeity of the resurrection and its futurity.

His response moves through three steps: a recall of the basic kerygma about Jesus' resurrection (1-11), an assertion of the logical inconsistencies involved in denial of the resurrection (12-34), and an attempt to perceive theologically what the properties of the resurrected body must be (35-58).

15, 1-11: Paul recalls the tradition (3-7), which he can presuppose as common ground and which provides a starting point for his argument. This is the fundamental content of all Christian preaching and belief (1-2.11).

15, 3-7: The language by which Paul expresses the essence of the "gospel" (1) is not his own but is drawn from older credal formulas. This credo highlights Jesus' death for our sins (confirmed by his burial) and Jesus' resurrection (confirmed by his appearances) and presents both of them as fulfillment of prophecy. In accordance with the scriptures: conformity of Jesus' passion with the scriptures is asserted in Mt 16, 1; Lk 24, 25-27.32.44-46. Application of some Old Testament texts (Pss 2, 7; 16, 8-11) to his resurrection is illustrated by Acts 2, 27-31; 13, 29-39; and Is 52, 13—53, 12 and Hos 6, 2 may also have been envisaged.

15, 9-11: A persecutor may have appeared disqualified (ouk . . . hikanos) from apostleship, but in fact God's grace has qualified him. Cf the remarks in 2 Cor about his qualifications (2, 16; 3, 5) and his greater labors (11, 23). These verses are parenthetical, but a nerve has been touched (the references to his abnormal birth and his activity as a persecutor may echo taunts from Paul's opponents), and he is instinctively moved to self-defense.

Results of Denial.† 12 But if Christ is preached as raised from the dead, how can some among you say there is no resurrection of the dead? 13* If there is no resurrection of the dead, then neither has Christ been raised. 14 And if Christ has not been raised, then empty [too] is our preaching; empty, too, your faith. 15* Then we are also false witnesses to God, because we testified against God that he raised Christ, whom he did not raise if in fact the dead are not raised. 16 For if the dead are not raised, neither has Christ been raised, 17† and if Christ has not been raised, your faith is vain; you are still in your sins. 18 Then those who have fallen asleep in Christ have perished. 19 If for this life only we have hoped in Christ, we are the most pitiable people of all.

Christ the Firstfruits.† 20*† But now Christ has been raised from the dead, the firstfruits of those who have fallen asleep. 21† For since death came through a human being, the resurrection of the dead came also through a human being. 22* For just as in Adam all die, so too in Christ shall all be brought to life, 23* but each one in proper order: Christ the firstfruits; then, at his coming, those who belong to Christ; 24*† then comes the end, when he hands over the kingdom to his God and Father, when he has destroyed every sovereignty and every authority and power. 25* For he must reign until he has put all his enemies under his feet. 26*† The last enemy to be destroyed is death, 27*† for "he subjected everything under his feet." But when it says that everything has been subjected, it is clear that it excludes the one who subjected everything to him. 28* When everything is subjected to him, then the Son himself will [also] be subjected to the one who subjected everything to him, so that God may be all in all.

Practical Arguments.† 29† Otherwise, what will people accomplish by having themselves baptized for the dead? If the dead are not raised at all, then why are they having themselves baptized for them?

30*† Moreover, why are we endangering ourselves all the time? 31* Every day I face death; I swear it by the pride in you [brothers] that I have in Christ Jesus our Lord. 32* If at Ephesus I fought with beasts, so to speak, what benefit was it to me? If the dead are not raised:

> "Let us eat and drink,
> for tomorrow we die."

33 Do not be led astray:

> "Bad company corrupts good morals."

34* Become sober as you ought and stop sinning. For some have no knowledge of God; I say this to your shame.

34: Mt 22, 29; Mk 12, 24.

15, 12-19: Denial of the resurrection (12) involves logical inconsistencies. The basic one, stated twice (13.16), is that if there is no such thing as (bodily) resurrection, then it has not taken place even in Christ's case.

15, 17-18: The consequences for the Corinthians are grave: both forgiveness of sins and salvation are an illusion, despite their strong convictions about both. Unless Christ is risen, their faith does not save.

15, 20-28: After a triumphant assertion of the reality of Christ's resurrection (20a), Paul explains its positive implications and consequences. As a soteriological event of both human (20-23) and cosmic (24-28) dimensions, Jesus' resurrection logically and necessarily involves ours as well.

15, 20: The firstfruits: the portion of the harvest offered in thanksgiving to God implies the consecration of the entire harvest to come. Christ's resurrection is not an end in itself; its finality lies in the whole harvest, ourselves.

15, 21-22: Our human existence, both natural and supernatural, is corporate, involves solidarity. In Adam . . . in Christ: the Hebrew word 'ādām in Genesis is both a common noun for mankind and a proper noun for the first man. Paul here presents Adam as at least a literary type of Christ; the parallelism and contrast between them will be developed further in vv 45-49 and in Rom 5, 12-21.

15, 24-28: Paul's perspective expands to cosmic dimensions, as he describes the climax of history, the end. His viewpoint is still christological, as in vv 20-23. Verses 24 and 28 describe Christ's final relations to his enemies and his Father in language that is both royal and military; vv 25-26 insert a proof from scripture (Pss 110, 1; 8, 7) into this description. But the viewpoint is also theological, for God is the ultimate agent and end, and likewise soteriological, for we are the beneficiaries of all the action.

15, 26: The last enemy . . . is death: a parenthesis that specifies the final fulfillment of the two Old Testament texts just referred to, Ps 110, 1 and Ps 8, 7. Death is not just one cosmic power among many, but the ultimate effect of sin in the universe (cf 56; Rom 5, 12). Christ defeats death where it prevails, in our bodies. The destruction of the last enemy is concretely the "coming to life" (22) of "those who belong to Christ" (23).

15, 27b-28: The one who subjected everything to him: the Father is the ultimate agent in the drama, and the final end of the process, to whom the Son and everything else is ordered (24.28). That God may be all in all: his reign is a dynamic exercise of creative power, an outpouring of life and energy through the universe, with no further resistance. This is the supremely positive meaning of "subjection": that God may fully be God.

15, 29-34: Paul concludes his treatment of logical inconsistencies with a listing of miscellaneous Christian practices that would be meaningless if the resurrection were not a fact.

15, 29: Baptized for the dead: this practice is not further explained here, nor is it necessarily mentioned with approval, but Paul cites it as something in their experience that attests in one more way to belief in the resurrection.

15, 30-34: A life of sacrifice, such as Paul describes in 4, 9-13 and 2 Cor, would be pointless without the prospect of resurrection; a life of pleasure, such as that expressed in the Epicurean slogan of v 32, would be far more consistent. I fought with beasts: since Paul does not elsewhere mention a combat with beasts at Ephesus, he may be speaking figuratively about struggles with adversaries.

C. The Manner of the Resurrection†

35† But someone may say, "How are the dead raised? With what kind of body will they come back?"
The Resurrection Body.† 36* You fool! What you sow is not brought to life unless it dies. 37 And what you sow is not the body that is to be but a bare kernel of wheat, perhaps, or of some other kind; 38* but God gives it a body as he chooses, and to each of the seeds its own body. 39† Not all flesh is the same, but there is one kind for human beings, another kind of flesh for animals, another kind of flesh for birds, and another for fish. 40 There are both heavenly bodies and earthly bodies, but the brightness of the heavenly is one kind and that of the earthly another. 41 The brightness of the sun is one kind, the brightness of the moon another, and the brightness of the stars another. For star differs from star in brightness.
42† So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown corruptible; it is raised incorruptible. 43* It is sown dishonorable; it is raised glorious. It is sown weak; it is raised powerful. 44 It is sown
a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. If there is a natural body, there is also a spiritual one.
45*† So, too, it is written, "The first man, Adam, became a living being," the last Adam a life-giving spirit. 46 But the spiritual was not first; rather the natural and then the spiritual. 47 The first man was from the earth, earthly; the second man, from heaven. 48 As was the earthly one, so also are the earthly,
and as is the heavenly one, so also are the heavenly. 49*† Just as we have borne the image of the earthly one,
we shall also bear the image of the heavenly one.
The Resurrection Event.† 50*† This I declare, brothers: flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God, nor does corruption inherit incorruption.
51*† Behold, I tell you a mystery. We shall not all fall asleep, but we will all be changed, 52* in an instant, in the blink of an eye, at the last trumpet. For the trumpet will sound, the dead will be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. 53* For that which is corrupt-ible must clothe itself with incorruptibility, and that which is mortal must clothe itself with immortality. 54*† And when this which is corruptible clothes itself with incorruptibility and this which is mortal clothes itself with immortality, then the word that is written shall come about:

"Death is swallowed up in victory.
55* Where, O death, is your victory?
Where, O death, is your sting?"

15, 35-58: Paul imagines two objections that the Corinthians could raise: one concerning the manner of the resurrection (how?), the other pertaining to the qualities of the risen body (what kind?). These questions probably lie behind their denial of the resurrection (12), and seem to reflect the presumption that no kind of body other than the one we now possess would be possible. Paul deals with these objections in inverse order, in vv 36-49 and vv 50-58. His argument is fundamentally theological and its appeal is to the understanding.

15, 35-49: Paul approaches the question of the nature of the risen body (what kind of body?) by means of two analogies: the seed (36-44) and the first man, Adam (45-49).

15, 36-38: The analogy of the seed: there is a change of attributes from seed to plant; the old life-form must be lost for the new to emerge. By speaking about the seed as a body that dies and comes to life, Paul keeps the point of the analogy before the reader's mind.

15, 42-44: The principles of qualitative difference before and after death (36-38) and of diversity on different levels of creation (39-41) are now applied to the human body. Before: a body animated by a lower, natural life-principle (psychē) and endowed with the properties of natural existence (corruptibility, lack of glory, weakness). After: a body animated by a higher life-principle (pneuma; cf 45) and endowed with other qualities (incorruptibility, glory, power, spirituality), which are properties of God himself.

15, 45: The analogy of the first man, Adam, is introduced by a citation from Gn 2, 7. Paul alters the text slightly, adding the adjective first, and translating the Hebrew 'ādām twice, so as to give it its value both as a common noun (man) and as a proper name (Adam). Verse 45b then specifies similarities and differences between the two Adams. The last Adam, Christ (cf 21-22) has become a . . . spirit (pneuma), a life-principle transcendent with respect to the natural soul (psychē) of the first Adam (on the terminology here, cf the note on 3, 1). Further, he is not just alive, but life-giving, a source of life for others.

15, 49: We shall also bear the image: although it has less manuscript support, this reading better fits the context's emphasis on futurity and the transforming action of God; on future transformation as conformity to the image of the Son, cf Rom 8, 29; Phil 3, 21. The majority reading, "let us bear the image," suggests that the image of the heavenly man is already present and exhorts us to conform to it.

15, 50-57: These verses, an answer to the first question of v 35, explain theologically how the change of properties from one image to another will take place: God has the power to transform, and he will exercise it.

15, 50-53: Flesh and blood . . . corruption: living persons and the corpses of the dead, respectively. In both cases, the gulf between creatures and God is too wide to be bridged unless God himself transforms us.

15, 51-52: A mystery: the last moment in God's plan is disclosed; cf the notes on 2, 1.7-10a. The final trumpet and the awakening of the dead are stock details of the apocalyptic scenario. We shall not all fall asleep: Paul expected that some of his contemporaries might still be alive at Christ's return; after the death of Paul and his whole generation, copyists altered this statement in various ways. We will all be changed: the statement extends to all Christians, for Paul is not directly speaking about anyone else. Whether they have died before the end or happen still to be alive, all must be transformed.

15, 54-55: Death is swallowed up in victory: scripture itself predicts death's overthrow. O death: in his prophetic vision Paul may be making Hosea's words his own, or imagining this cry of triumph on the lips of the risen church.

[56]† The sting of death is sin, and the power of sin is the law. [57] But thanks be to God who gives us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

[58] Therefore, my beloved brothers, be firm, steadfast, always fully devoted to the work of the Lord, knowing that in the Lord your labor is not in vain.

VI: CONCLUSION

The Collection.† [1]*† Now in regard to the collection for the holy ones, you also should do as I ordered the churches of Galatia. [2] On the first day of the week each of you should set aside and save whatever one can afford, so that collections will not be going on when I come. [3] And when I arrive, I shall send those whom you have approved with letters of recommendation to take your gracious gift to Jerusalem. [4]† If it seems fitting that I should go also, they will go with me.

Paul's Travel Plans.† [5]* I shall come to you after I pass through Macedonia (for I am going to pass through Macedonia), [6] and perhaps I shall stay or even spend the winter with you, so that you may send me on my way wherever I may go. [7]* For I do not wish to see you now just in passing, but I hope to spend some time with you, if the Lord permits. [8]† I shall stay in Ephesus until Pentecost, [9] because a door has opened for me wide and productive for work, but there are many opponents.

[10]* If Timothy comes, see that he is without fear in your company, for he is doing the work of the Lord just as I am. [11] Therefore no one should disdain him. Rather, send him on his way in peace that he may come to me, for I am expecting him with the brothers. [12]* Now in regard to our brother Apollos, I urged him strongly to go to you with the brothers, but it was not at all his will that he go now. He will go when he has an opportunity.

Exhortation and Greetings. [13] Be on your guard, stand firm in the faith, be courageous, be strong. [14] Your every act should be done with love.

[15]* I urge you, brothers—you know that the household of Stephanas is the firstfruits of Achaia and that they have devoted themselves to the service of the holy ones—[16] be subordinate to such people and to everyone who works and toils with them. [17] I rejoice in the arrival of Stephanas, Fortunatus, and Achaicus, because they made up for your absence, [18]* for they refreshed my spirit as well as yours. So give recognition to such people.

[19]† The churches of Asia send you greetings. Aquila and Prisca together with the church at their house send you many greetings in the Lord. [20] All the brothers greet you. Greet one another with a holy kiss.

[21]* I, Paul, write you this greeting in my own hand. [22]*† If anyone does not love the Lord, let him be accursed. Marana tha. [23]* The grace of the Lord Jesus be with you. [24] My love to all of you in Christ Jesus.

15, 56: The sting of death is sin: an explanation of Hosea's metaphor. Death, scorpion-like, is equipped with a sting, sin, by which it injects its poison. Christ defeats sin, the cause of death (Gn 3, 19; Rom 5, 12).

16, 1-4: This paragraph contains our earliest evidence for a project that became a major undertaking of Paul's ministry. The collection for the church at Jerusalem was a symbol in his mind for the unity of Jewish and Gentile Christianity. Cf Gal 2, 10; Rom 15, 25-29; 2 Cor 8-9 and the notes to this last passage.

16, 1: In regard to the collection: it has already begun in Galatia and Macedonia (cf 2 Cor 8), and presumably he has already instructed the Corinthians about its purpose.

16, 4: That I should go also: presumably Paul delivered the collection on his final visit to Jerusalem; cf Rom 15, 25-32; Acts 24, 14.

16, 5-12: The travel plans outlined here may not have materialized precisely as Paul intended; cf 2 Cor 1, 8—2, 13; 7, 4-16.

16, 8: In Ephesus until Pentecost: this tells us the place from which he wrote the letter and suggests he may have composed it about Easter time (cf 5, 7-8).

16, 19-24: These paragraphs conform to the normal epistolary conclusion, but their language is overlaid with liturgical coloration as well. The greetings of the Asian churches are probably to be read, along with the letter, in the liturgy at Corinth, and the union of the church is to be expressed by a holy kiss (19-20). Paul adds to this his own greeting (21) and blessings (23-24).

16, 22: Accursed: literally, "anathema." This expression (cf 12, 3) is a formula for exclusion from the community. It may imply here a call to self-examination before celebration of the Eucharist, in preparation for the Lord's coming and judgment (cf 11, 17-34). Marana tha: an Aramaic expression probably used in the early Christian liturgy. As understood here ("O Lord, come!"), it is a prayer for the early return of Christ. If the Aramaic words are divided differently (Maran atha, "Our Lord has come"), it becomes a credal declaration. The former interpretation is supported by what appears to be a Greek equivalent of this acclamation in Rv 22, 20: "Amen. Come, Lord Jesus!"

The Second Letter to the

The Second Letter to the Corinthians is the most personal of all of Paul's extant writings, and it reveals much about his character. In it he deals with one or more crises that have arisen in the Corinthian church. The confrontation with these problems caused him to reflect deeply on his relationship with the community and to speak about it frankly. One moment he is venting his feelings of frustration and uncertainty, the next he is pouring out his relief and affection. The importance of the issues at stake between them calls forth from him an enormous effort of personal persuasion, as well as doctrinal considerations that are of great value for us. Paul's ability to produce profound theological foundations for what may at first sight appear to be rather commonplace circumstances is perhaps nowhere better exemplified than in Second Corinthians. The emotional tone of the letter, its lack of order, and our ignorance of some of its background do not make it easy to follow, but it amply repays the effort required of the reader.

Second Corinthians is rich and varied in content. The interpretation of Exodus in chapter 3, for instance, offers a striking example of early apologetic use of the Old Testament. Paul's discussion of the collection in chs 8-9 contains a theology of sharing of possessions, of community of goods among Christian churches, which is both balanced and sensitive. Furthermore, the closing chapters provide an illustration of early Christian invective and polemic, because the conflict with intruders forces Paul to assert his authority. But in those same chapters Paul articulates the vision and sense of values that animate his own apostolate, revealing his faith that Jesus' passion and resurrection are the pattern for all Christian life and expressing a spirituality of ministry unsurpassed in the New Testament.

The letter is remarkable for its rhetoric. Paul falls naturally into the style and argumentation of contemporary philosophic preachers, employing with ease the stock devices of the "diatribe." By a barrage of questions, by challenges both serious and ironic, by paradox heaped upon paradox, even by insults hurled at his opponents, he strives to awaken in his hearers a true sense of values and an appropriate response. All his argument centers on the destiny of Jesus, in which a paradoxical reversal of values is revealed. But Paul appeals to his own personal experience as well. In passages of great rhetorical power (4, 7-15; 6, 3-10; 11, 21-29; 12, 5-10; 13, 3-4) he enumerates the circumstances of his ministry and the tribulations he has had to endure for Jesus and the gospel, in the hope of illustrating the pattern of Jesus' existence in his own and of drawing the Corinthians into a reappraisal of the values they cherish. Similar passages in the same style in his other letters (cf especially Rom 8, 31-39; 1 Cor 1, 26-31; 4, 6-21; 9, 1-27; 13, 1-13; Phil 4, 10-19) confirm Paul's familiarity with contemporary rhetoric and demonstrate how effectively it served to express his vision of Christian life and ministry.

Second Corinthians was occasioned by events and problems that developed after Paul's first letter reached Corinth. We have no information about these circumstances except what is contained in the letter itself, which of course supposes that they are known to the readers. Consequently the reconstruction of the letter's background is an uncertain enterprise about which there is not complete agreement.

The letter deals principally with these three topics: (1) a crisis between Paul and the Corinthians, occasioned at least partially by changes in his travel plans (1, 12—2, 13), and the successful resolution of that crisis (7, 5-16); (2) further directives and encouragement in regard to the collection for the church in Jerusalem (8, 1—9, 15); (3) the definition and defense of Paul's ministry as an apostle. Paul's reflections on this matter are occasioned by visitors from other churches who passed through Corinth, missionaries who differed from Paul in a variety of ways, both in theory and in practice. Those differences led to comparisons. Either the visitors themselves or some of the local church members appear to have sown confusion among the Corinthians with regard to Paul's authority or his style, or both. Paul deals at length with aspects of this situation in 2, 14—7, 4 and again in 10, 1—13, 10, though the manner of treatment and the thrust of the argument differ in each of these sections.

Scholars have noticed a lack of continuity in this document. For example, the long section of 2, 14—7, 4 seems abruptly spliced into the narrative of a crisis and its resolution. Identical or similar topics, moreover, seem to be treated several times during the letter (compare 2, 14—7, 4 with 10, 1—13, 10, and 8, 1-24 with 9, 1-15). Many judge, therefore, that this letter as it stands incorporates several briefer letters sent to Corinth over a certain span of time. If this is so, then Paul himself or, more likely, some other editor clearly took care to gather those letters together and impose some literary unity upon the collection, thus producing the document that has come down to us as the Second Letter to the Corinthians. Others continue to regard it as a single letter, attributing its inconsistencies to changes of perspective in Paul that may have been occasioned by the arrival of fresh news from Corinth during its composition. The letter, or at least some sections of it, appears to have been composed in Macedonia (2, 12-13; 7, 5-6; 8, 1-4; 9, 2-4). It is generally dated about the autumn of A.D. 57; if it is a compilation, of course, the various parts may have been separated by intervals of at least some months.

The principal divisions of the Second Letter to the Corinthians are the following:

- I: Address (1, 1-11)
- II: The Crisis between Paul and the Corinthians (1, 12—7, 16)
  - A. Past Relationships (1, 12—2, 13)
  - B. Paul's Ministry (2, 14—7, 4)
  - C. Resolution of the Crisis (7, 5-16)
- III: The Collection for Jerusalem (8, 1—9, 15)
- IV: Paul's Defense of His Ministry (10, 1—13, 10)
- V: Conclusion (13, 11-13)

I: ADDRESS

CHAPTER 1

Greeting.† 1 Paul, an apostle of Christ Jesus by the will of God, and Timothy our brother, to the church of God that is in Corinth, with all the holy ones throughout Achaia: 2 grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Thanksgiving.* 3*† Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of compassion and God of all encouragement, 4* who encourages us in our every affliction, so that we may be able to encourage those who are in any affliction with the encouragement with which we ourselves are encouraged by God. 5† For as Christ's sufferings over-

4: 7, 6-7.13; 1 Thes 3, 6-8; 2 Thes 2, 16.

† 1, 1-11: The opening follows the usual Pauline form, except that the thanksgiving takes the form of a doxology or glorification of God (3). This introduces a meditation on the experience of suffering and encouragement shared by Paul and the Corinthians (4-7), drawn, at least in part, from Paul's reflections on a recent affliction (8-10). The section ends with a modified and delayed allusion to thanksgiving (11).

1, 3: God of all encouragement: Paul expands a standard Jewish blessing so as to state the theme of the paragraph. The theme of "encouragement" or "consolation" (paraklēsis) occurs ten times in this opening, against a background formed by multiple references to "affliction" and "suffering."

1, 5: Through Christ: the Father of compassion is the Father of our Lord Jesus (3); Paul's sufferings and encouragement (or "consolation") are experienced in union with Christ. Cf Lk 2, 25: the "consolation of Israel" is Jesus himself.

flow to us, so through Christ does our encouragement also overflow. [6] If we are afflicted, it is for your encouragement and salvation; if we are encouraged, it is for your encouragement, which enables you to endure the same sufferings that we suffer. [7]† Our hope for you is firm, for we know that as you share in the sufferings, you also share in the encouragement.

[8]† We do not want you to be unaware, brothers, of the affliction that came to us in the province of Asia; we were utterly weighed down beyond our strength, so that we despaired even of life. [9]† Indeed, we had accepted within ourselves the sentence of death, that we might trust not in ourselves but in God who raises the dead. [10]* He rescued us from such great danger of death, and he will continue to rescue us; in him we have put our hope [that] he will also rescue us again, [11]* as you help us with prayer, so that thanks may be given by many on our behalf for the gift granted us through the prayers of many.

II: THE CRISIS BETWEEN PAUL AND THE CORINTHIANS

A. Past Relationships†

Paul's Sincerity and Constancy.† [12] For our boast is this, the testimony of our conscience that we have conducted ourselves in the world, and especially toward you, with the simplicity and sincerity of God, [and] not by human wisdom but by the grace of God.
[13] For we write you nothing but what you can read and understand, and I hope that you will understand completely, [14]* as you have come to understand us partially, that we are your boast as you also are ours, on the day of [our] Lord Jesus.

[15]† With this confidence I formerly intended to come to you so that you might receive a double favor, [16]* namely, to go by way of you to Macedonia, and then to come to you again on my return from Macedonia, and have you send me on my way to Judea. [17]*† So when I intended this, did I act lightly? Or do I make my plans according to human considerations, so that with me it is "yes, yes" and "no, no"? [18]† As God is faithful, our word to you is not "yes"
and "no." [19]* For the Son of God, Jesus Christ, who was proclaimed to you by us, Silvanus and Timothy and me, was not "yes" and "no," but "yes" has been in him. [20]* For however many are the promises of God, their Yes is in him;
therefore, the Amen from us also goes through him to God for glory. [21]† But the one who gives us security with you in Christ and who anointed us is God; [22] he has also put his seal upon us and given the Spirit in our hearts as a first installment.

1, 7: You also share in the encouragement: the eschatological reversal of affliction and encouragement that Christians expect (cf Mt 5, 4; Lk 6, 24) permits some present experience of reversal in the Corinthians' case, as in Paul's.

1, 8: Asia: a Roman province in western Asia Minor, the capital of which was Ephesus.

1, 9-10: The sentence of death: it is unclear whether Paul is alluding to a physical illness or to an external threat to life. The result of the situation was to produce an attitude of faith in God alone. God who raises the dead: rescue is the constant pattern of God's activity; his final act of encouragement is the resurrection.

1, 12—2, 13: The autobiographical remarks about the crisis in Asia Minor lead into consideration of a crisis that has arisen between Paul and the Corinthians. Paul will return to this question, after a long digression, in 7, 5-16. Both of these sections deal with travel plans Paul had made, changes in the plans, alternative measures adopted, a breach that opened between him and the community, and finally a reconciliation between them.

1, 12-14: Since Paul's own conduct will be under discussion here, he prefaces the section with a statement about his habitual behavior and attitude toward the community. He protests his openness, single-mindedness, and conformity to God's grace; he hopes that his relationship with them will be marked by mutual understanding and pride, which will constantly increase until it reaches its climax at the judgment. Two references to boasting frame this paragraph (12.14), the first appearances of a theme that will be important in the letter, especially in chs 10-13; the term is used in a positive sense here (cf the note on 1 Cor 1, 29-31).

1, 15: I formerly intended to come: this plan reads like a revision of the one mentioned in 1 Cor 16, 5. Not until 1, 23—2, 1 will Paul tell us something his original readers already knew, that he has canceled one or the other of these projected visits.

1, 17: Did I act lightly?: the subsequent change of plans casts suspicion on the original intention, creating the impression that Paul is vacillating and inconsistent or that human considerations keep dictating shifts in his goals and projects (cf the counterclaim of 12). "Yes, yes" and "no, no": stating something and denying it in the same or the next breath; being of two minds at once, or from one moment to the next.

1, 18-22: As God is faithful: unable to deny the change in plans, Paul nonetheless asserts the firmness of the original plan and claims a profound constancy in his life and work. He grounds his defense in God himself, who is firm and reliable; this quality can also be predicated in various ways of those who are associated with him. Christ, Paul, and the Corinthians all participate in analogous ways in the constancy of God. A number of the terms here, which appear related only conceptually in Greek or English, would be variations of the same root, ?mn, in a Semitic language, and thus naturally associated in a Semitic mind, such as Paul's. These include the words yes (17-20), faithful (18), Amen (20), gives us security (21), faith, stand firm (24).

1, 21-22: The commercial terms gives us security, seal, first installment are here used analogously to refer to the process of initiation into the Christian life, perhaps specifically to baptism. The passage is clearly trinitarian. The Spirit is the first installment or "down payment" of the full messianic benefits that God guarantees to Christians. Cf Eph 1, 13-14.

Paul's Change of Plan.† [23] But I call upon God as witness, on my life, that it is to spare you that I have not yet gone to Corinth. [24] Not that we lord it over your faith; rather, we work together for your joy, for you stand firm in the faith.

[1] For I decided not to come to you again in painful circumstances. [2] For if I inflict pain upon you, then who is there to cheer me except the one pained by me? [3]† And I wrote as I did so that when I came I might not be pained by those in whom I should have rejoiced, confident about all of you that my joy is that of all of you. [4] For out of much affliction and anguish of heart I wrote to you with many tears, not that you might be pained but that you might know the abundant love I have for you.

The Offender.† [5] If anyone has caused pain, he has caused it not to me, but in some measure (not to exaggerate) to all of you. [6] This punishment by the majority is enough for such a person, [7] so that on the contrary you should forgive and encourage him instead, or else the person may be overwhelmed by excessive pain. [8] Therefore, I urge you to reaffirm your love for him. [9]* For this is why I wrote, to know your proven character, whether you were obedient in everything. [10] Whomever you forgive anything, so do I. For indeed what I have forgiven, if I have forgiven anything, has been for you in the presence of Christ, [11]* so that we might not be taken advantage of by Satan, for we are not unaware of his purposes.

Paul's Anxiety.† [12] When I went to Troas for the gospel of Christ, although a door was opened for me in the Lord, [13]*† I had no relief in my spirit because I did not find my brother Titus. So I took leave of them and went on to Macedonia.

B. Paul's Ministry†

Ministers of a New Covenant.† [14]† But thanks be to God, who always leads us in triumph in Christ and manifests through us the odor of the knowledge of him in every place. [15] For we 12: Acts 16, 6.

†1, 23-24: I have not yet gone to Corinth: some suppose that Paul received word of some affair in Corinth, which he decided to regulate by letter even before the first of his projected visits (cf 16). Others conjecture that he did pay the first visit, was offended there (cf 2, 5), returned to Ephesus, and sent a letter (2, 3-9) in place of the second visit. The expressions to spare you (23) and work together for your joy (24) introduce the major themes of the next two paragraphs, which are remarkable for insistent repetition of key words and ideas. These form two clusters of terms in the English translation: (1) cheer, rejoice, encourage, joy; (2) pain, affliction, anguish. These clusters reappear when Paul resumes treatment of this subject in 7, 5-16.

2, 3-4: I wrote as I did: we learn for the first time about the sending of a letter in place of the proposed visit. Paul mentions the letter in passing, but emphasizes his motivation in sending it: to avoid being saddened by them (cf 1), and to help them realize the depth of his love. Another motive will be added in 7, 12: to bring to light their own concern for him. With many tears: it has been suggested that we may have all or part of this "tearful letter" somewhere in the Corinthian correspondence, either in 1 Cor 5 (the case of the incestuous man), or in 1 Cor as a whole, or in 2 Cor 10-13. None of these hypotheses is entirely convincing. See the note on 13, 1.

2, 5-11: The nature of the pain (5) is unclear, though some believe an individual at Corinth rejected Paul's authority, thereby scandalizing many in the community. In any case, action has been taken, and Paul judges the measures adequate to right the situation (6). The follow-up directives he now gives are entirely positive: forgive, encourage, love. Overwhelmed (7): a vivid metaphor (literally "swallowed") that Paul employs positively at 5, 4 and in 1 Cor 15, 54 (7). It is often used to describe satanic activity (cf 1 Pt 5, 8); note the reference to Satan here in v 11.

2, 12-13: I had no relief: Paul does not explain the reason for his anxiety until he resumes the thread of his narrative at 7, 5: he was waiting to hear how the Corinthians would respond to his letter. Since 7, 5-16 describes their response in entirely positive terms, we never learn in detail why he found it necessary to defend and justify his change of plans, as in 1, 15-24. Was this portion of the letter written before the arrival of Titus with his good news (7, 6-7)?

2, 13: Macedonia: a Roman province in northern Greece.

2, 14—7, 4: This section constitutes a digression within the narrative of the crisis and its resolution (1, 12—2, 13 and 7, 5-16). The main component (2, 14—6, 10) treats the nature of Paul's ministry and his qualifications for it; this material bears some similarity to the defense of his ministry in chs 10-13, but it may well come from a period close to the crisis. This is followed by a supplementary block of material quite different in character and tone (6, 14—7, 1). These materials may have been brought together into their present position during final editing of the letter; appeals to the Corinthians link them to one another (6, 11-13) and lead back to the interrupted narrative (7, 2-4).

2, 14—6, 10: The question of Paul's adequacy (16; cf 3, 5) and his credentials (3, 1-2) has been raised. Paul responds by an extended treatment of the nature of his ministry. It is a ministry of glory (3, 7—4, 6), of life (4, 7—5, 10), of reconciliation (5, 11—6, 10).

2, 14-16a: The initial statement plunges us abruptly into another train of thought. Paul describes his personal existence and his function as a preacher in two powerful images (14) that constitute a prelude to the development to follow.

2, 14a: Leads us in triumph in Christ: this metaphor of a festive parade in honor of a conquering military hero can suggest either a positive sharing in Christ's triumph or an experience of defeat, being led in captivity and submission (cf 4, 8-11; 1 Cor 4, 9). Paul is probably aware of the ambiguity, as he is in the case of the next metaphor.

2, 14b-16a: The odor of the knowledge of him: incense was commonly used in triumphal processions. The metaphor suggests the gradual diffusion of the knowledge of God through the apostolic preaching. The aroma of Christ: the image shifts from the fragrance Paul diffuses to the aroma that he is. Paul is probably thinking of the "sweet odor" of the sacrifices in the Old Testament (e.g., Gn 8, 21; Ex 29, 18) and perhaps of the metaphor of wisdom as a sweet odor (Sir 24, 15). Death . . . life: the aroma of Christ that comes to them through Paul is perceived differently by various classes of people. To some his preaching and his life (cf 1 Cor 1, 17—2, 6) are perceived as death, and the effect is death for them; others perceive him, despite appearances, as life, and the effect is life for them. This fragrance thus produces a separation and a judgment (cf the function of the "light" in John's gospel).

are the aroma of Christ for God among those who are being saved and among those who are perishing, [16]† to the latter an odor of death that leads to death, to the former an odor of life that leads to life. Who is qualified for this?
[17]* For we are not like the many who trade on the word of God; but as out of sincerity, indeed as from God and in the presence of God, we speak in Christ.

CHAPTER 3

[1]† Are we beginning to commend ourselves again? Or do we need, as some do, letters of recommendation to you or from you? [2]† You are our letter, written on our hearts, known and read by all, [3]† shown to be a letter of Christ administered by us, written not in ink
but by the Spirit of the living God, not on tablets of stone but on tablets that are hearts of flesh.

[4]† Such confidence we have through Christ toward God. [5]* Not that of ourselves we are qualified to take credit for anything as coming from us; rather, our qualification comes from God, [6]*† who has indeed qualified us as ministers of a new covenant, not of letter but of spirit; for the letter brings death, but the Spirit gives life.

Contrast with the Old Covenant.† [7]*† Now if the ministry of death, carved in letters on stone, was so glorious that the Israelites could not look intently at the face of Moses because of its glory that was going to fade, [8]† how much more will the ministry of the Spirit be glorious? [9] For if the ministry of condemnation was glorious, the ministry of righteousness will abound much more in glory. [10] Indeed, what was endowed with glory has come to have no glory in this respect because of the glory that surpasses it. [11] For if what was going to fade was glorious,
how much more will what endures be glorious.

[12]† Therefore, since we have such hope, we act very boldly [13]† and not like Moses, who put a veil over his face so that the Israelites could not look intently at the cessation of what was fad-

6: Eph 3, 7 / Jer 31, 31-34.
7: Ex 34, 29-35.

2, 16b-17: Qualified: Paul may be echoing either the self-satisfied claims of other preachers or their charges about Paul's deficiencies. No one is really qualified, but the apostle contrasts himself with those who dilute or falsify the preaching for personal advantage and insists on his totally good conscience: his ministry is from God, and he has exercised it with fidelity and integrity (cf 3, 5-6).

3, 1: Paul seems to allude to certain preachers who pride themselves on their written credentials. Presumably they reproach him for not possessing similar credentials and compel him to spell out his own qualifications (4, 2; 5, 12; 6, 4). The Corinthians themselves should have performed this function for Paul (5, 12; cf 12, 11). Since he is forced to find something that can recommend him, he points to them: their very existence constitutes his letter of recommendation (1-2). Others who engage in self-commendation will also be mentioned in 10, 12-18.

3, 2-3: Mention of "letters of recommendation" generates a series of metaphors in which Paul plays on the word "letter": (1) the community is Paul's letter of recommendation (2a); (2) they are a letter engraved on his affections for all to see and read (2b); (3) they are a letter from Christ that Paul merely delivers (3a); (4) they are a letter written by the Spirit on the tablets of human hearts (3b). One image dissolves into another.

3, 3b: This verse contrasts Paul's letter with those written . . . in ink (like the credentials of other preachers) and those written . . . on tablets of stone (like the law of Moses). These contrasts suggest that the other preachers may have claimed special relationship with Moses. If they were Judaizers zealous for the Mosaic law, that would explain the detailed contrast between the old and the new covenants (6; 4, 7—6, 10). If they were charismatics who claimed Moses as their model, that would explain the extended treatment of Moses himself and his glory (3, 7—4, 6). Hearts of flesh: cf Ezekiel's contrast between the heart of flesh that the Spirit gives and the heart of stone that it replaces (Ez 36, 26); the context is covenant renewal and purification that makes observance of the law possible.

3, 4-6: These verses resume 2, 1—3, 3. Paul's confidence (4) is grounded in his sense of God-given mission (2, 17), the specifics of which are described in vv 1-3. Verses 5-6 return to the question of his qualifications (2, 16), attributing them entirely to God. Verse 6 further spells out the situation described in v 3b and "names" it: Paul is living within a new covenant, characterized by the Spirit, which gives life. The usage of a new covenant is derived from Jer 31, 31-33, a passage that also speaks of writing on the heart; cf 2.

3, 6b: This verse serves as a topic sentence for 3, 7—6, 10. For the contrast between letter and spirit, cf Rom 2, 29; 7, 5-6.

3, 7—4, 6: Paul now develops the contrast enunciated in 3, 6b in terms of the relative glory of the two covenants, insisting on the greater glory of the new. His polemic seems directed against individuals who appeal to the glorious Moses and fail to perceive any comparable glory either in Paul's life as an apostle or in the gospel he preaches. He asserts in response that Christians have a glory of their own that far surpasses that of Moses.

3, 7: The ministry of death: from his very first words, Paul describes the Mosaic covenant and ministry from the viewpoint of their limitations. They lead to death rather than life (6-7; cf 4, 7—5, 10), to condemnation rather than reconciliation (9; cf 5, 11—6, 10). Was so glorious: the basic text to which Paul alludes is Ex 34, 29-35, to which his opponents have undoubtedly laid claim. Going to fade: Paul concedes the glory of Moses' covenant and ministry, but grants them only temporary significance.

3, 8-11: How much more: the argument "from the less to the greater" is repeated three times (8.9.11). Verse 10 expresses another point of view: the difference in glory is so great that only the new covenant and ministry can properly be called "glorious" at all.

3, 12: Such hope: the glory is not yet an object of experience, but that does not lessen Paul's confidence. Boldly: the term parrēsia expresses outspoken declaration of Christian conviction (cf 4, 1-2). Paul has nothing to hide and no reason for timidity.

3, 13-14a: Not like Moses: in Exodus Moses veiled his face to protect the Israelites from God's reflected glory. Without impugning Moses' sincerity, Paul attributes another effect to the veil. Since it lies between God's glory and the Israelites, it explains how they could fail to notice the glory disappearing. Their thoughts were rendered dull: the problem lay with their understanding. This will be expressed in vv 14b-16 by a shift in the place of the veil: it is no longer over Moses' face but over their perception.

ing. [14]† Rather, their thoughts were rendered dull, for to this present day
the same veil remains unlifted when they read the old covenant, because through Christ it is taken away. [15]* To this day, in fact, whenever Moses is read, a veil lies over their hearts, [16]* but whenever a person turns to the Lord the veil is removed. [17]† Now the Lord is the Spirit, and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom. [18]*† All of us, gazing with unveiled face on the glory of the Lord, are being transformed into the same image from glory to glory, as from the Lord who is the Spirit.

CHAPTER 4

Integrity in the Ministry.† [1] Therefore, since we have this ministry through the mercy shown us, we are not discouraged. [2]* Rather, we have renounced shameful, hidden things; not acting deceitfully or falsifying the word of God, but by the open declaration of the truth we commend ourselves to everyone's conscience in the sight of God. [3]† And even though our gospel is veiled, it is veiled for those who are perishing, [4] in whose case the god of this age has blinded the minds of the unbelievers, so that they may not see the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God. [5]† For we do not preach ourselves but Jesus Christ as Lord, and ourselves as your slaves for the sake of Jesus. [6]*† For God who said,
"Let light shine out of darkness," has shone in our hearts to bring to light the knowledge of the glory of God on the face of [Jesus] Christ.

The Paradox of the Ministry.† [7]† But we hold this treasure in earthen vessels, that the surpassing power may be of God and not from us. [8]*† We are afflicted in every way, but not constrained; perplexed, but not driven to despair; [9] persecuted, but not abandoned; struck down, but not destroyed;
[10]*† always carrying about in the body
the dying of Jesus, so that the life of Jesus may also be manifested in our

10: Col 1, 24.

† 3, 14b-16: The parallelism in these verses makes it necessary to interpret corresponding parts in relation to one another.

To this present day: this signals the shift of Paul's attention to his contemporaries; his argument is typological, as in 1 Cor 10. The Israelites of Moses' time typify the Jews of Paul's time, and perhaps also Christians of Jewish origin or mentality who may not recognize the temporary character of Moses' glory. When they read the old covenant: the lasting dullness prevents proper appraisal of Moses' person and covenant. When his writings are read in the synagogue, a veil still impedes their understanding. Through Christ: i.e., in the new covenant. Whenever a person turns to the Lord: Moses in Exodus appeared before God without the veil and gazed on his face unprotected. Paul applies that passage to converts to Christianity: when they turn to the Lord fully and authentically, the impediment to their understanding is removed.

3, 17: The Lord is the Spirit: the "Lord" to whom the Christian turns (16) is the Spirit of whom Paul has been speaking, the life-giving Spirit of the living God (6.8), the inaugurator of the new covenant and ministry, who is also the Spirit of Christ. The Spirit of the Lord: the Lord here is the living God (3), but there may also be an allusion to Christ as Lord (14.16). Freedom: i.e., from the ministry of death (7) and the covenant that condemned (9).

3, 18: Another application of the veil image. All of us . . . with unveiled face: Christians (Israelites from whom the veil has been removed) are like Moses, standing in God's presence, beholding and reflecting his glory. Gazing: the verb may also be translated "contemplating as in a mirror"; 4, 6 would suggest that the mirror is Christ himself. Are being transformed: elsewhere Paul speaks of transformation, conformity to Jesus, God's image, as a reality of the end time, and even v 12 speaks of the glory as an object of hope. But the life-giving Spirit, the distinctive gift of the new covenant, is already present in the community (cf 1, 22, the "first installment"), and the process of transformation has already begun. Into the same image: into the image of God, which is Christ (4, 4).

4, 1-2: A ministry of this sort generates confidence and forthrightness; cf 1, 12-14; 2, 17.

4, 3-4: Though our gospel is veiled: the final application of the image. Paul has been reproached either for obscurity in his preaching or for his manner of presenting the gospel. But he confidently asserts that there is no veil over his gospel. If some fail to perceive its light, that is because of unbelief. The veil lies over their eyes (3, 14), a blindness induced by Satan, and a sign that they are headed for destruction (cf 2, 15).

4, 5: We do not preach ourselves: the light seen in his gospel is the glory of Christ (4). Far from preaching himself, the preacher should be a transparent medium through whom Jesus is perceived (cf 10-11). Your slaves: Paul draws attention away from individuals as such and toward their role in relation to God, Christ, and the community; cf 1 Cor 3, 5; 4, 1.

4, 6: Autobiographical allusion to the episode at Damascus clarifies the origin and nature of Paul's service; cf Acts 9, 1-19; 22, 3-16; 26, 2-18. "Let light shine out of darkness": Paul seems to be thinking of Gn 1, 3 and presenting his apostolic ministry as a new creation. There may also be an allusion to Is 9, 1, suggesting his prophetic calling as servant of the Lord and light to the nations; cf Is 42, 6.16; 49, 6; 60, 1-2, and the use of light imagery in Acts 26, 13-23. To bring to light the knowledge: Paul's role in the process of revelation, expressed at the beginning under the image of the odor and aroma (2, 14-15), is restated now, at the end of this first moment of the development, in the imagery of light and glory (3-6).

4, 7—5, 10: Paul now confronts the difficulty that his present existence does not appear glorious at all; it is marked instead by suffering and death. He deals with this by developing the topic already announced in 3, 3.6, asserting his faith in the presence and ultimate triumph of life, in his own and every Christian existence, despite the experience of death.

4, 7: This treasure: the glory that he preaches and into which they are being transformed. In earthen vessels: the instruments God uses are human and fragile; some imagine small terracotta lamps in which light is carried.

4, 8-9: A catalogue of his apostolic trials and afflictions. Yet in these the negative never completely prevails; there is always some experience of rescue, of salvation.

4, 10-11: Both the negative and the positive sides of the experience are grounded christologically. The logic is similar to that of 1, 3-11. His sufferings are connected with Christ's, and his deliverance is a sign that he is to share in Jesus' resurrection.

body. [11]* For we who live are constantly being given up to death for the sake of Jesus, so that the life of Jesus may be manifested in our mortal flesh.

[12]† So death is at work in us, but life in you. [13]† Since, then, we have the same spirit of faith, according to what is written, "I believed, therefore I spoke," we too believe and therefore speak, [14] knowing that the one who raised the Lord Jesus will raise us also with Jesus and place us with you in his presence. [15]* Everything indeed is for you, so that the grace bestowed in abundance on more and more people may cause the thanksgiving to overflow for the glory of God.

[16]† Therefore, we are not discouraged; rather, although our outer self is wasting away, our inner self is being renewed day by day. [17] For this momentary light affliction is producing for us an eternal weight of glory beyond all comparison, [18]* as we look not to what is seen but to what is unseen; for what is seen is transitory, but what is unseen is eternal.

Our Future Destiny. [1]† For we know that if our earthly dwelling, a tent, should be destroyed, we have a building from God, a dwelling not made with hands, eternal in heaven. [2]† For in this tent we groan, longing to be further clothed with our heavenly habitation [3]† if indeed, when we have taken it off, we shall not be found naked. [4]† For while we are in this tent we groan and are weighed down, because we do not wish to be unclothed but to be further clothed, so that what is mortal may be swallowed up by life. [5]† Now the one who has prepared us for this very thing is God, who has given us the Spirit as a first installment.

[6]† So we are always courageous, although we know that while we are at home in the body we are away from the Lord, [7] for we walk by faith, not by sight. [8]* Yet we are courageous, and we would rather leave the body and go home to the Lord. [9] Therefore, we aspire to please him, whether we are at home or away. [10]*† For we must all appear be-

4, 12-15: His experience does not terminate in himself, but in others (12.15; cf 1, 4-5). Ultimately, everything is ordered even beyond the community, toward God (15; cf 1, 11).

4, 13-14: Like the Psalmist, Paul clearly proclaims his faith, affirming life within himself despite death (10-11) and the life-giving effect of his experience upon the church (12.14-15). And place us with you in his presence: Paul imagines God presenting him and them to Jesus at the parousia and the judgment; cf 11, 2; Rom 14, 10.

4, 16-18: In a series of contrasts Paul explains the extent of his faith in life. Life is not only already present and revealing itself (8-11.16) but will outlast his experience of affliction and dying: it is eternal (17-18).

4, 16: Not discouraged: i.e., despite the experience of death. Paul is still speaking of himself personally, but he assumes his faith and attitude will be shared by all Christians. Our outer self: the individual subject of ordinary perception and observation, in contrast to the interior and hidden self, which undergoes renewal. Is being renewed day by day: this suggests a process that has already begun; cf 3, 18. The renewal already taking place even in Paul's dying is a share in the life of Jesus, but this is recognized only by faith (13.18; 5, 7).

5, 1: Our earthly dwelling: the same contrast is restated in the imagery of a dwelling. The language recalls Jesus' saying about the destruction of the temple and the construction of another building not made with hands (Mk 14, 58), a prediction later applied to Jesus' own body (Jn 2, 20).

5, 2-5: Verses 2-3 and 4 are largely parallel in structure. We groan, longing: see the note on 5, 5. Clothed with our heavenly habitation: Paul mixes his metaphors, adding the image of the garment to that of the building. Further clothed: the verb means strictly "to put one garment on over another." Paul may desire to put the resurrection body on over his mortal body, without dying; vv 2 and 4 permit this meaning but do not impose it. Or perhaps he imagines the resurrection body as a garment put on over the Christ-garment first received in baptism (Gal 3, 27) and preserved by moral behavior (Rom 13, 12-14; Col 3, 12; cf Mt 22, 11-13). Some support for this interpretation may be found in the context; cf the references to baptism (5), to judgment according to works (10), and to present renewal (4, 16), an idea elsewhere combined with the image of "putting on" a new nature (Eph 4, 22-24; Col 3, 1-5.9-10).

5, 3: When we have taken it off: the majority of witnesses read "when we have put it on," i.e., when we have been clothed (in the resurrection body), then we shall not be without a body (naked). This seems mere tautology, though some understand it to mean: whether we are "found" (by God at the judgment) clothed or naked depends upon whether we have preserved or lost our original investiture in Christ (cf the previous note). In this case to "put it on" does not refer to the resurrection body, but to keeping intact the Christ-garment of baptism. The translation follows the western reading (Codex Bezae, Tertullian), the sense of which is clear: to "take it off" is to shed our mortal body in death, after which we shall be clothed in the resurrection body and hence not "naked" (cf 1 Cor 15, 51-53).

5, 4: We do not wish to be unclothed: a clear allusion to physical death (4, 16; 5, 1). Unlike the Greeks, who found dissolution of the body desirable (cf Socrates), Paul has a Jewish horror of it. He seems to be thinking of the "intermediate period," an interval between death and resurrection. Swallowed up by life: cf 1 Cor 15, 54.

5, 5: God has created us for resurrected bodily life and already prepares us for it by the gift of the Spirit in baptism. The Spirit as a first installment: the striking parallel to 5, 1-5 in Rom 8, 17-30 describes Christians who have received the "firstfruits" (cf "first instellment" here) of the Spirit as "groaning" (cf 2.4 here) for the resurrection, the complete redemption of their bodies. In place of clothing and building, Rom 8 uses other images for the resurrection: adoption and conformity to the image of the Son.

5, 6-9: Tension between present and future is expressed by another spatial image, the metaphor of the country and its citizens. At present we are like citizens in exile or far away from home. The Lord is the distant homeland, believed in but unseen (7).

5, 10: We must all appear: the verb is ambiguous: we are scheduled to "appear" for judgment, at which we will be "revealed" as we are (cf 11; 2, 14; 4, 10-11).

The Ministry of Reconciliation.† 11* Therefore, since we know the fear of the Lord, we try to persuade others; but we are clearly apparent to God, and I hope we are also apparent to your consciousness. 12* We are not commending ourselves to you again but giving you an opportunity to boast of us, so that you may have something to say to those who boast of external appearance rather than of the heart. 13† For if we are out of our minds, it is for God; if we are rational, it is for you. 14*† For the love of Christ impels us, once we have come to the conviction that one died for all; therefore, all have died. 15* He indeed died for all, so that those who live might no longer live for themselves but for him who for their sake died and was raised.

16† Consequently, from now on we regard no one according to the flesh; even if we once knew Christ according to the flesh, yet now we know him so no longer. 17* So whoever is in Christ is a new creation: the old things have passed away; behold, new things have come. 18† And all this is from God, who has reconciled us to himself through Christ and given us the ministry of reconciliation, 19* namely, God was reconciling the world to himself in Christ, not counting their trespasses against them and entrusting to us the message of reconciliation. 20* So we are ambassadors for Christ, as if God were appealing through us. We implore you on behalf of Christ, be reconciled to God. 21*† For our sake he made him to be sin who did not know sin, so that we might become the righteousness of God in him.

The Experience of the Ministry.† 1*† Working together, then, we appeal to you not to receive the grace of God in vain. 2*† For he says:

> "In an acceptable time I heard you,
> and on the day of salvation I > helped you."

Behold, now is a very acceptable time; behold, now is the day of salvation. 3*† We cause no one to stumble in anything, in order that no fault may be found with our ministry; 4*† on the con-

4: 4, 8-11; 11, 23-27; 1 Cor 4, 9-13.

† 5, 11-15: This paragraph is transitional. Paul sums up much that has gone before. Still playing on the term "appearance," he reasserts his transparency before God and the Corinthians, in contrast to the self-commendation, boasting, and preoccupation with externals that characterize some others (cf 1, 12-14; 2, 14; 3, 1; 3, 7—4, 6). Verse 14 recalls 3, 7—4, 6, and sums up 4, 7—5, 10.

5, 13: Out of our minds: this verse confirms that a concern for ecstasy and charismatic experience may lie behind the discussion about "glory" in 3, 7—4, 6. Paul also enjoys such experiences but, unlike others, does not make a public display of them or consider them ends in themselves. Rational: the Greek virtue sōphrosynē, to which Paul alludes, implies reasonableness, moderation, good judgment, self-control.

5, 14-15: These verses echo 4, 14 and resume the treatment of "life despite death" from 4, 7—5, 10.

5, 16-17: Consequently: the death of Christ described in vv 14-15 produces a whole new order (17) and a new mode of perception (16). According to the flesh: the natural mode of perception, characterized as "fleshly," is replaced by a mode of perception proper to the Spirit. Elsewhere Paul contrasts what Christ looks like according to the old criteria (weakness, powerlessness, folly, death) and according to the new (wisdom, power, life); cf vv 15.21; 1 Cor 1, 17—3, 3. Similarly, he describes the paradoxical nature of Christian existence, e.g., in 4, 10-11.14. A new creation: rabbis used this expression to describe the effect of the entrance of a proselyte or convert into Judaism or of the remission of sins on the Day of Atonement. The new order created in Christ is the new covenant (3, 6).

5, 18-21: Paul attempts to explain the meaning of God's action by a variety of different categories; his attention keeps moving rapidly back and forth from God's act to his own ministry as well. Who has reconciled us to himself: i.e., he has brought all into oneness. Not counting their trespasses: the reconciliation is described as an act of justification (cf "righteousness," 21); this contrasts with the covenant that condemned (3, 8). The ministry of reconciliation: Paul's role in the wider picture is described: entrusted with the message of reconciliation (19), he is Christ's ambassador, through whom God appeals (20a). In v 20b Paul acts in the capacity just described.

5, 21: This is a statement of God's purpose, expressed paradoxically in terms of sharing and exchange of attributes. As Christ became our righteousness (1 Cor 1, 30), we become God's righteousness (cf vv 14-15).

6, 1-10: This paragraph is a single long sentence in the Greek, interrupted by the parenthesis of v 2. The one main verb is "we appeal." In this paragraph Paul both exercises his ministry of reconciliation (cf 5, 20) and describes how his ministry is exercised: the "message of reconciliation" (5, 19) is lived existentially in his apostolic experience.

6, 1: Not to receive . . . in vain: i.e., conform to the gift of justification and new creation. The context indicates how this can be done concretely: become God's righteousness (5, 21), not live for oneself (5, 15), be reconciled with Paul (6, 11-13; 7, 2-3).

6, 2: In an acceptable time: Paul cites the Septuagint text of Is 49, 8; the Hebrew reads "in a time of favor"; it is parallel to "on the day of salvation." Now: God is bestowing favor and salvation at this very moment, as Paul is addressing his letter to them.

6, 3: Cause no one to stumble: the language echoes that of 1 Cor 8-10, as does the expression "no longer live for themselves" in 5, 15. That no fault may be found: i.e., at the eschatological judgment (cf 1 Cor 4, 2-5).

6, 4a: This is the central assertion, the topic statement for the catalogue that follows. We commend ourselves: Paul's self-commendation is ironical (with an eye on the charges mentioned in 3, 1-3) and paradoxical (pointing mostly to experiences that would not normally be considered points of pride but are perceived as such by faith). Cf also the self-commendation in 11, 23-29. As ministers of God: the same Greek word, diakonos, means "minister" and "servant"; cf 11, 23, the central assertion in a similar context, and 1 Cor 3, 5.

6, 4b-5: Through much endurance: this phrase functions as a subtitle; it is followed by an enumeration of nine specific types of trials endured.

trary, in everything we commend ourselves as ministers of God, through much endurance, in afflictions, hardships, constraints, 5* beatings, imprisonments, riots, labors, vigils, fasts; 6*† by purity, knowledge, patience, kindness, in a holy spirit, in unfeigned love, 7* in truthful speech, in the power of God; with weapons of righteousness at the right and at the left; 8† through glory and dishonor, insult and praise. We are treated as deceivers and yet are truthful; 9* as unrecognized and yet acknowledged; as dying and behold we live; as chastised and yet not put to death; 10* as sorrowful yet always rejoicing; as poor yet enriching many; as having nothing and yet possessing all things.

11† We have spoken frankly to you, Corinthians; our heart is open wide. 12* You are not constrained by us; you are constrained by your own affections. 13* As recompense in kind (I speak as to my children), be open yourselves.

Call to Holiness.† 14† Do not be yoked with those who are different, with unbelievers. For what partnership do righteousness and lawlessness have? Or what fellowship does light have with darkness? 15 What accord has Christ with Beliar? Or what has a believer in common with an unbeliever? 16*† What agreement has the temple of God with idols? For we are the temple of the living God; as God said:

> "I will live with them and move among them,
> and I will be their God
> and they shall be my people.
> 17* Therefore, come forth from them > and be separate," says the Lord,
> "and touch nothing unclean;
> then I will receive you > 18* and I will be a father to you, > and you shall be sons and daughters to me,
> says the Lord Almighty."

CHAPTER 7

1 Since we have these promises, beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from every defilement of flesh and spirit, making holiness perfect in the fear of God.

2† Make room for us; we have not wronged anyone, or ruined anyone, or taken advantage of anyone. 3* I do not say this in condemnation, for I have already said that you are in our hearts, that we may die together and live together. 4 I have great confidence in you, I have great pride in you; I am filled with encouragement, I am overflowing with joy all the more because of all our affliction.

6, 6-7a: A list of virtuous qualities in two groups of four, the second fuller than the first.

6, 8b-10: A series of seven rhetorically effective antitheses, contrasting negative external impressions with positive inner reality. Paul perceives his existence as a reflection of Jesus' own and affirms an inner reversal that escapes outward observation. The final two members illustrate two distinct kinds of paradox or apparent contradiction that are characteristic of apostolic experience.

6, 11-13: Paul's tone becomes quieter, but his appeal for acceptance and affection is emotionally charged. References to the heart and their mutual relations bring the development begun in 2, 14—3, 3 to an effective conclusion.

6, 14—7, 1: Language and thought shift noticeably here. Suddenly we are in a different atmosphere, dealing with a quite different problem. Both the vocabulary and the thought, with their contrast between good and evil, are more characteristic of Qumran documents or the Book of Revelation than they are of Paul. Hence, critics suspect that this section was inserted by another hand.

6, 14-16a: The opening injunction to separate from unbelievers is reinforced by five rhetorical questions to make the point that Christianity is not compatible with paganism. Their opposition is emphasized also by the accumulation of five distinct designations for each group. These verses are a powerful statement of God's holiness and the exctusiveness of his claims.

6, 16c-18: This is a chain of scriptural citations carefully woven together. God's covenant relation to his people and his presence among them (16) is seen as conditioned on cultic separation from the profane and cultically impure (17); that relation is translated into the personal language of the parent-child relationship, an extension to the community of the language of 2 Sm 7, 14 (18). Some remarkable parallels to this chain are found in the final chapters of Revelation. God's presence among his people (21, 22) is expressed there, too, by applying 2 Sm 7, 14 to the community (21, 7). There is a call to separation (18, 4) and exclusion of the unclean from the community and its liturgy (21, 27). The title "Lord Almighty" (Pantokratór) occurs in the New Testament only here in 18 and nine times in Rv.

7, 2-4: These verses continue the thought of 6, 11-13, before the interruption of 6, 14—7, 1. Verse 4 serves as a transition to the next section: the four themes it introduces (confidence; pride or "boasting"; encouragement; joy in affliction) are developed in vv 5-16. All have appeared previously in the letter.

7, 5-16: This section functions as a peroration or formal summing up of the whole first part of the letter, chs 1-7. It deals with the restoration of right relations between Paul and the Corinthians, and it is marked by fullness and intensity of emotion.

7, 5-7: Paul picks up the thread of the narrative interrupted at 2, 13 (5) and describes the resolution of the tense situation there depicted (6-7). Finally Titus arrives and his coming puts an end to Paul's restlessness (2, 13; 7, 5), casts out his fears, and reverses his mood. The theme of encouragement and affliction is reintroduced (cf 1, 3-11); here, too, encouragement is traced back to God and is described as contagious (6). The language of joy and sorrow also reappears in v 7 (cf 1, 23—2, 1 and the note on 1, 23-24).

7, 5: Macedonia: see the note on 2, 13.

our flesh had no rest, but we were afflicted in every way—external conflicts, internal fears. 6* But God, who encourages the downcast, encouraged us by the arrival of Titus, 7 and not only by his arrival but also by the encouragement with which he was encouraged in regard to you, as he told us of your yearning, your lament, your zeal for me, so that I rejoiced even more. 8*† For even if I saddened you by my letter, I do not regret it; and if I did regret it ([for] I see that that letter saddened you, if only for a while), 9 I rejoice now, not because you were saddened, but because you were saddened into repentance; for you were saddened in a godly way, so that you did not suffer loss in anything because of us. 10 For godly sorrow produces a salutary repentance without regret, but worldly sorrow produces death. 11 For behold what earnestness this godly sorrow has produced for you, as well as readiness for a defense, and indignation, and fear, and yearning, and zeal, and punishment. In every way you have shown yourselves to be innocent in the matter. 12* So then even though I wrote to you, it was not on account of the one who did the wrong, or on account of the one who suffered the wrong, but in order that your concern for us might be made plain to you in the sight of God. 13† For this reason we are encouraged.

And besides our encouragement, we rejoice even more because of the joy of Titus, since his spirit has been refreshed by all of you. 14 For if I have boasted to him about you, I was not put to shame. No, just as everything we said to you was true, so our boasting before Titus proved to be the truth. 15* And his heart goes out to you all the more, as he remembers the obedience of all of you, when you received him with fear and trembling. 16 I rejoice, because I have confidence in you in every respect.

III: THE COLLECTION FOR JERUSALEM†

Generosity in Giving.† 1*† We want you to know, brothers, of the grace of God that has been given to the churches of Macedonia, 2† for in a severe test of affliction, the abundance of their joy and their profound poverty overflowed in a wealth of generosity on their part. 3† For according to their means, I can testify, and beyond their means, spontaneously, 4* they begged us insistently for the favor of taking part in the service to the holy ones, 5† and this, not as we expected, but they gave themselves first to the Lord and to us through

7, 8-12: Paul looks back on the episode from the viewpoint of its ending. The goal of their common activity, promotion of their joy (1, 24), has been achieved, despite and because of the sorrow they felt. That sorrow was God-given. Its salutary effects are enumerated fully and impressively in vv 10-11; not the least important of these is that it has revealed to them the attachment they have to Paul.

7, 13-16: Paul summarizes the effect of the experience on Titus: encouragement, joy, love, relief. Finally, he describes its effects on himself: encouragement, joy, confidence, pride or "boasting" (i.e., the satisfaction resulting from a boast that proves well-founded; cf 4; 1, 12.14).

8, 1—9, 15: Paul turns to a new topic, the collection for the church in Jerusalem. There is an early precedent for this project in the agreement mentioned in Gal 2, 6-10. According to Acts, the church at Antioch had sent Saul and Barnabas to Jerusalem with relief (Acts 11, 27-30). Subsequently Paul organized a project of relief for Jerusalem among his own churches. Our earliest evidence for it comes in 1 Cor 16, 1-4, after it had already begun (see the notes there); by the time Paul wrote Rom 15, 25-28 the collection was completed and ready for delivery. Chapters 8 and 9 contain what appear to be two letters on the subject. In them Paul gives us his fullest exposition of the meaning he sees in the enterprise, presenting it as an act of Christian charity and as an expression of the unity of the church, both present and eschatological. These chapters are especially rich in the recurrence of key words, on which Paul plays; it is usually impossible to do justice to these wordplays in the translation.

8, 1-24: This is a letter of recommendation for Titus and two unnamed companions, written from Macedonia probably at least a year later than 1 Cor 16. The recommendation proper is prefaced by remarks about the ideals of sharing and equality within the Christian community (1-15). Phil 4, 10-20 shows that Paul has reflected on his personal experience of need and relief in his relations with the community at Philippi; he now develops his reflections on the larger scale of relations between his Gentile churches and the mother church in Jerusalem.

8, 1: The grace of God: the fundamental theme is expressed by the Greek noun charis, which will be variously translated throughout these chapters as "grace" (8, 1; 9, 8.14), "favor" (8, 4), "gracious act" (8, 6.7.9) or "gracious work" (8, 19), to be compared to "gracious gift" (1 Cor 16, 3). The related term, eucharistia, "thanksgiving," also occurs at 9, 11.12. The wordplay is not superficial; various mutations of the same root signal inner connection between aspects of a single reality, and Paul consciously exploits the similarities in vocabulary to highlight that connection.

8, 2: Three more terms are now introduced. Test (dokimē): the same root is translated as "to test" (8) and "evidence" (9, 13); it means to be tried and found genuine. Abundance: variations on the same root lie behind "overflow" (8, 2; 9, 12), "excel" (8, 7), "surplus" (8, 14), "superfluous" (9, 1), "make abundant" and "have an abundance" (9, 8). These expressions of fullness contrast with references to need (8, 14; 9, 12). Generosity: the word haplotēs has nuances of both simplicity and sincerity; here and in 9, 11.13 it designates the singleness of purpose that manifests itself in generous giving.

8, 3-4: Paul emphasizes the spontaneity of the Macedonians and the nature of their action. They begged us insistently: the same root is translated as "urge," "appeal," "encourage" (8, 6.17; 9, 5). Taking part: the same word is translated "contribution" in 9, 13 and a related term as "partner" in 8, 23. Service (diakonia): this word occurs also in 9, 1.13 as "service"; in 9, 12 it is translated "administration," and in 8, 19.20 the corresponding verb is rendered "administer."

8, 5: They gave themselves . . . to the Lord and to us: on its deepest level their attitude is one of self-giving.

the will of God, [6]† so that we urged Titus that, as he had already begun, he should also complete for you this gracious act also. [7]† Now as you excel in every respect, in faith, discourse, knowledge, all earnestness, and in the love we have for you, may you excel in this gracious act also.

[8] I say this not by way of command, but to test the genuineness of your love by your concern for others. [9]† For you know the gracious act of our Lord Jesus Christ, that for your sake he became poor although he was rich, so that by his poverty you might become rich. [10] And I am giving counsel in this matter, for it is appropriate for you who began not only to act but to act willingly last year: [11]† complete it now, so that your eager willingness may be matched by your completion of it out of what you have. [12]† For if the eagerness is there, it is acceptable according to what one has, not according to what one does not have; [13] not that others should have relief while you are burdened, but that as a matter of equality [14] your surplus at the present time should supply their needs, so that their surplus may also supply your needs, that there may be equality. [15]* As it is written:

> "Whoever had much did not have more,
> and whoever had little did not have less."

Titus and His Collaborators.† [16] But thanks be to God who put the same concern for you into the heart of Titus, [17] for he not only welcomed our appeal but, since he is very concerned, he has gone to you of his own accord. [18]† With him we have sent the brother who is praised in all the churches for his preaching of the gospel. [19] And not only that, but he has also been appointed our traveling companion by the churches in this gracious work administered by us for the glory of the Lord [himself] and for the expression of our eagerness. [20]† This we desire to avoid, that anyone blame us about this lavish gift administered by us, [21]* for we are concerned for what is honorable not only in the sight of the Lord but also in the sight of others. [22] And with them we have sent our brother whom we often tested in many ways and found earnest, but who is now much more earnest because of his great confidence in you. [23] As for Titus, he is my partner and co-worker for you; as for our brothers, they are apostles of the churches, the glory of Christ. [24]† So give proof before the churches of your love and of our boasting about you to them.

God's Indescribable Gift.† [1] Now about the service to the holy ones, it is superfluous for me to write to you, [2]*† for I know your eagerness, about which I boast of you to the Macedonians, that Achaia has been ready since last year; and your zeal has stirred up most of them. [3]† Nonetheless, I sent the brothers so that our boast about you might not prove empty in this case, so

8, 6: Titus: 1 Cor 16 seemed to leave the organization up to the Corinthians, but apparently Paul has sent Titus to initiate the collection as well; 8, 16-17 will describe Titus' attitude as one of shared concern and cooperation.

8, 7: The charitable service Paul is promoting is seen briefly and in passing within the perspective of Paul's theology of the charisms. Earnestness (spoudē): this or related terms occur also in v 22 ("earnest") and 8, 8.16.17 ("concern").

8, 9: The dialectic of Jesus' experience, expressed earlier in terms of life and death (5, 15), sin and righteousness (5, 21), is now rephrased in terms of poverty and wealth. Many scholars think this is a reference to Jesus' preexistence with God (his "wealth") and to his incarnation and death (his "poverty"), and they point to the similarity between this verse and Phil 2, 6-8. Others interpret the wealth and poverty as succeeding phases of Jesus' earthly existence, e.g., his sense of intimacy with God and then the desolation and the feeling of abandonment by God in his death (cf Mk 15, 34).

8, 12-15: Paul introduces the principle of equality into the discussion. The goal is not impoverishment but sharing of resources; balance is achieved at least over the course of time. In v 15 Paul grounds his argument unexpectedly in the experience of Israel gathering manna in the desert: equality was achieved, independently of personal exertion, by God, who gave with an even hand according to need. Paul touches briefly here on the theme of "living from God."

8, 16-24: In recommending Titus and his companions, Paul stresses their personal and apostolic qualities, their good dispositions toward the Corinthians, and their authority as messengers of the churches and representatives of Christ.

8, 18: The brother: we do not know the identity of this coworker of Paul, nor of the third companion mentioned below in v 22.

8, 20-22: That anyone blame us: 12, 16-18 suggests that misunderstandings may indeed have arisen concerning Paul's management of the collection through the messengers mentioned here, but those same verses seem to imply that the Corinthians by and large would recognize the honesty of Paul's conduct in this area as in others (cf 6, 3).

8, 24: As Paul began by holding up the Macedonians as examples to be imitated, he closes by exhorting the Corinthians to show their love (by accepting the envoys and by cooperating as the Macedonians do), thus justifying the pride Paul demonstrates because of them before other churches.

9, 1-15: Quite possibly this was originally an independent letter, though it deals with the same subject and continues many of the same themes. In that case, it may have been written a few weeks later than ch 8, while the delegation there mentioned was still on its way.

9, 2: Achaia: see the note on Rom 15, 26.

9, 3: I sent the brothers: the Greek aorist tense here could be epistolary, referring to the present; in that case Paul would be sending them now, and ch 9 would merely conclude the letter of recommendation begun in ch 8. But the aorist may also refer to a sending that is past as Paul writes; then ch 9, with its apparently fresh beginning, is a follow-up message entrusted to another carrier.

it necessary to encourage the brothers advance for your promised gift, so that in this way it might be ready as a boun-

whoever sows bountifully will also reap bountifully. 7* Each must do as already determined, without sadness or compulsion, for God loves a cheerful giver.
8† Moreover, God is able to make every grace abundant for you, so that in all things, always having all you need, you may have an abundance for every good

Accusation of Weakness.† 1† Now I myself, Paul, urge you through the gentleness and clemency of Christ, I who am humble when face to face with you,
but brave toward you when absent,
2*† I beg you that, when present, I may not have to be brave with that confidence with which I intend to act boldly against some who consider us as acting according to the flesh. 3† For, although we are in the flesh, we do not battle according to the flesh, 4* for the weapons of our battle are not of flesh but are enormously powerful, capable of destroying fortresses. We destroy arguments 5 and every pretension raising itself against the knowledge of God, and take every thought captive in obedience to Christ, 6* and we are ready to punish

9, 8-10: The behavior to which he exhorts them is grounded in God's own pattern of behavior. God is capable of overwhelming generosity, as scripture itself attests (9), so that they need not fear being short. He will provide in abundance, both supplying their natural needs and increasing their righteousness. Paul challenges them to godlike generosity and reminds them of the fundamental motive for encouragement: God himself cannot be outdone.

9, 11-15: Paul's vision broadens to take in all the interested parties in one dynamic picture. His language becomes liturgically colored and conveys a sense of fullness. With a final play on the words charis and eucharistia (see the note on 8, 1), he describes a circle that closes on itself: the movement of grace overflowing from God to them and handed on from them through Paul to others is completed by the prayer of praise and thanksgiving raised on their behalf to God.

10, 1—13, 10: These final chapters have their own unity of structure and theme and could well have formed the body of a separate letter. They constitute an apologia on Paul's part, i.e., a legal defense of his behavior and his ministry; the writing is emotionally charged and highly rhetorical. In the central section (11, 16—12, 10), the apologia takes the form of a boast. This section is prepared for by a prologue (11, 1-15) and followed by an epilogue (12, 11-18), which are similar in content and structure. These sections, in turn, are framed by an introduction (10, 1-18) and a conclusion (12, 19—13, 10), both of which assert Paul's apostolic authority and confidence and define the purpose of the letter. The structure that results from this disposition of the material is chiastic, i.e., the first element corresponds to the last, the second to the second last, etc., following the pattern a b c b' a'.

10, 1-18: Paul asserts his apostolic authority and expresses the confidence this generates in him. He writes in response to certain opinions that have arisen in the community and certain charges raised against him and in preparation for a forthcoming visit in which he intends to set things in order. This section gives us an initial glimpse of the situation in Corinth that Paul must address; much of its thematic material will be taken up again in the finale (12, 19—13, 10).

10, 1-2: A strong opening plunges us straight into the conflict. Contrasts dominate here: presence versus absence, gentleness-clemency-humility versus boldness-confidence-bravery. Through the gentleness and clemency of Christ: the figure of the gentle Christ, presented in a significant position before any specifics of the situation are suggested, forms a striking contrast to the picture of the bold and militant Paul (2-6); this tension is finally resolved in 13, 3-4. Absent . . . present: this same contrast, with a restatement of the purpose of the letter, recurs in 13, 10, which forms an inclusion with 10, 1-2.

10, 2b-4a: Flesh: the Greek word sarx can express both the physical life of the body without any pejorative overtones (as in "we are in the flesh," 3) and our natural life insofar as it is marked by limitation and weakness (as in the other expressions) in contrast to the higher life and power conferred by the Spirit; cf the note on 1 Cor 3, 1. The wordplay is intended to express the paradoxical situation of a life already taken over by the Spirit but not yet seen as such except by faith. Lack of empirical evidence of the Spirit permits misunderstanding and misjudgment, but Paul resolutely denies that his behavior and effectiveness are as limited as some suppose.

10, 3b-6: Paul is involved in combat. The strong military language and imagery are both an assertion of his confidence in the divine power at his disposal and a declaration of war against those who underestimate his resources. The threat is echoed in 13, 2-3.

every disobedience, once your obedience is complete.

7*† Look at what confronts you.
Whoever is confident of belonging to Christ should consider that as he belongs to Christ, so do we. 8* And even if I should boast a little too much of our authority, which the Lord gave for building you up and not for tearing you down, I shall not be put to shame. 9† May I not seem as one frightening you through letters.
10* For someone will say, "His letters are severe and forceful, but his bodily presence is weak, and his speech contemptible." 11* Such a person must understand that what we are in word through letters when absent, that we also are in action when present.

12*† Not that we dare to class or compare ourselves with some of those who recommend themselves. But when they measure themselves by one another and compare themselves with one another, they are without understanding. 13† But we will not boast beyond measure but will keep to the limits God has apportioned us, namely, to reach even to you. 14 For we are not overreaching ourselves, as though we did not reach you; we indeed first came to you with the gospel of Christ.
15 We are not boasting beyond measure, in other people's labors; yet our hope is that, as your faith increases, our influence among you may be greatly enlarged, within our proper limits, 16* so that we may preach the gospel even beyond you, not boasting of work already done in another's sphere.
17*† "Whoever boasts, should boast in the Lord." 18*† For it is not the one who recommends himself who is approved, but the one whom the Lord recommends.

CHAPTER 11

Preaching without Charge.† 1*† If only you would put up with a little foolishness from me! Please put up with me.
2*† For I am jealous of you with the jealousy of God, since I betrothed you to one husband to present you as a chaste virgin to Christ. 3*† But I am afraid that,
as the serpent deceived Eve by his cunning, your thoughts may be corrupted from a sincere [and pure] commitment to Christ. 4*† For if someone comes and preaches another Jesus than the one we preached, or if you receive a different spirit from the one you received or a different gospel from the one you accepted, you put up with it well enough.

10, 7-8: Belonging to Chnst . . . so do we: these phrases already announce the pattern of Paul's boast in 11, 21b-29, especially 11, 22-23. For building you up and not for tearing you down: Paul draws on the language by which Jeremiah described the purpose of the prophetic power the Lord gave to him (Jer 1, 9-10; 12, 16-17; 24, 6). Though Paul's power may have destructive effects on others (2-6), its intended effect on the community is entirely constructive (cf 13, 10). I shall not be put to shame: his assertions will not be refuted; they will be revealed as true at the judgment.

10, 9-10: Paul cites the complaints of some who find him lacking in personal forcefulness and holds out the threat of a personal parousia (both "return" and "presence") that will be forceful, indeed will be a demonstration of Christ's own power (cf 13, 2-4).

10, 12-18: Paul now qualifies his claim to boldness, indicating its limits. He distinguishes his own behavior from that of others, revealing those "others" as they appear to him: as self-recommending, immoderately boastful, encroaching on territory not assigned to them, and claiming credit not due to them.

10, 13: Will keep to the limits: the notion of proper limits is expressed here by two terms with overlapping meanings, metron and kanōn, which are played off against several expressions denoting overreaching or expansion beyond a legitimate sphere.

10, 17: Boast in the Lord: there is a legitimate boasting, in contrast to the immoderate boasting to which vv 13 and 15 allude. God's work through Paul in the community is the object of his boast (13-16; 1, 12-14) and constitutes his recommendation (3, 1-3). Cf the notes on 1, 12-14 and 1 Cor 1, 29-31.

10, 18: Approved: to be approved is to come successfully through the process of testing for authenticity (cf 13, 3-7 and the note on 8, 2). Whom the Lord recommends: self-commendation is a premature and unwarranted anticipation of the final judgment, which the Lord alone will pass (cf 1 Cor 4, 3-5). Paul alludes to this judgment throughout chs 10-13, frequently in final or transitional positions; cf 11, 15; 12, 19a; 13, 3-7.

11, 1-15: Although these verses continue to reveal information about Paul's opponents and the differences he perceives between them and himself, 11, 1 signals a turn in Paul's thought. This section constitutes a prologue to the boasting that he will undertake in 11, 16—12, 10, and it bears remarkable similarities to the section that follows the central boast, 12, 11-18.

11, 1: Put up with a little foolishness from me: this verse indicates more clearly than the general statement of intent in 10, 13 the nature of the project Paul is about to undertake. He alludes ironically to the Corinthians' toleration for others. Foolishness: Paul qualifies his project as folly from beginning to end; see the note on 11, 16—12, 10.

11, 2: Paul gives us a sudden glimpse of the theological values that are at stake. The jealousy of God: the perspective is that of the covenant, described in imagery of love and marriage, as in the prophets; cf 1 Cor 10, 22. I betrothed you: Paul, like a father (cf 12, 14), betroths the community to Christ as his bride (cf Eph 5, 21-33) and will present her to him at his second coming. Cf Mt 25, 1-13 and the nuptial imagery in Rv 21.

11, 3: As the serpent deceived Eve: before Christ can return for the community Paul fears a repetition of the primal drama of seduction. Corruption of minds is satanic activity (see 2, 11; 4, 4). Satanic imagery recurs in 11, 13-15.20; 12, 7b.16-17; see the notes on these passages.

11, 4: Preaches another Jesus: the danger is specified, and Paul's opponents are identified with the cunning serpent. The battle for minds has to do with the understanding of Jesus, the Spirit, the gospel; the Corinthians have flirted with another understanding than the one that Paul handed on to them as traditional and normative.

5*† For I think that I am not in any way inferior to these "superapostles."
6*† Even if I am untrained in speaking,
I am not so in knowledge; in every way
we have made this plain to you in all things.
7*† Did I make a mistake when I humbled myself so that you might be exalted, because I preached the gospel of God to you without charge? 8 I plundered other churches by accepting from them in order to minister to you. 9* And when I was with you and in need, I did not burden anyone, for the brothers who came from Macedonia supplied my needs. So I refrained and will refrain from burdening you in any way. 10* By the truth of Christ in me, this boast of mine shall not be silenced in the regions of Achaia. 11*† And why? Because I do not love you? God knows I do!
12 And what I do I will continue to do,
in order to end this pretext of those who seek a pretext for being regarded as we are in the mission of which they boast.
13† For such people are false apostles, deceitful workers, who masquerade as apostles of Christ. 14 And no wonder, for even Satan masquerades as an angel of light. 15 So it is not strange that his ministers also masquerade as ministers of righteousness. Their end will correspond to their deeds.
Paul's Boast: His Labors.† 16† I repeat, no one should consider me foolish;
but if you do, accept me as a fool, so that I too may boast a little. 17 What I am saying I am not saying according to the Lord but as in foolishness, in this boastful state. 18 Since many boast according to the flesh, I too will boast.
19 For you gladly put up with fools, since you are wise yourselves. 20† For you put up with it if someone enslaves you, or devours you, or gets the better of you,
or puts on airs, or slaps you in the face.
21† To my shame I say that we were too weak!
But what anyone dares to boast of (I am speaking in foolishness) I also dare.
22*† Are they Hebrews? So am I. Are they Israelites? So am I. Are they descendants of Abraham? So am I.
23*† Are they ministers of Christ? (I

† 11, 5: These "superapostles": this term, employed again in 12, 11b, designates the opponents of whom Paul has spoken in ch 10 and again in 11, 4. They appear to be intruders at Corinth. Their preaching is marked at least by a different emphasis and style, and they do not hesitate to accept support from the community. Perhaps these itinerants appeal to the authority of church leaders in Jerusalem and even carry letters of recommendation from them. But it is not those distant leaders whom Paul is attacking here. The intruders are "superapostles" not in the sense of the "pillars" at Jerusalem (Gal 2), but in their own estimation. They consider themselves superior to Paul as apostles and ministers of Christ, and they are obviously enjoying some success among the Corinthians. Paul rejects their claim to be apostles in any superlative sense (hyperlian), judging them bluntly as "false apostles," ministers of Satan masquerading as apostles of Christ (13-15). On the contrary, he himself will claim to be a superminister of Christ (hyper egó, 23).

11, 6: Apparently found deficient in both rhetorical ability (cf 10, 10) and knowledge (cf 10, 5), Paul concedes the former charge but not the latter. In every way: in all their contacts with him revelation has been taking place. Paul, through whom God reveals the knowledge of himself (2, 14), and in whom the death and life of Jesus are revealed (4, 10-11; cf 6, 4), also demonstrates his own role as the bearer of true knowledge. Cf 1 Cor 1, 18—2, 16.

11, 7-10: Abruptly Paul passes to another reason for complaints: his practice of preaching without remuneration (cf 1 Cor 9, 3-18). He deftly defends his practice by situating it from the start within the pattern of Christ's own self-humiliation (cf 10, 1) and reduces objections to absurdity by rhetorical questions (cf 12, 13).

11, 11-12: Paul rejects lack of affection as his motive (possibly imputed to him by his opponents) and states his real motive, a desire to emphasize the disparity between himself and the others (cf 19-21). The topic of his gratuitous service will be taken up once more in 12, 13-18. 1 Cor 9, 15-18 gives a different but complementary explanation of his motivation.

11, 13-15: Paul picks up again the imagery of v 3 and applies it to the opponents: they are false apostles of Christ, really serving another master. Deceitful . . . masquerade: deception and simulation, like cunning (3), are marks of the satanic. Angel of light: recalls the contrast between light and darkness, Christ and Beliar at 6, 14-15. Ministers of righteousness: recalls the earlier contrast between the ministry of condemnation and that of righteousness (3, 9). Their end: the section closes with another allusion to the judgment, when all participants in the final conflict will be revealed or unmasked and dealt with as they deserve.

11, 16—12, 10: Paul now accepts the challenge of his opponents and indulges in boasting similar to theirs, but with differences that he has already signaled in 10, 12-18 and that become clearer as he proceeds. He defines the nature of his project and unmistakably labels it as folly at the beginning and the end (11, 16-23; 12, 11). Yet his boast does not spring from ignorance (11, 21; 12, 6) nor is it concerned merely with human distinctions (11, 18). Paul boasts "in moderation" (10, 13.15) and "in the Lord" (10, 17).

11, 16-29: The first part of Paul's boast focuses on labors and afflictions, in which authentic service of Christ consists.

11, 16-21: These verses recapitulate remarks already made about the foolishness of boasting and the excessive toleration of the Corinthians. They form a prelude to the boast proper.

11, 20: Paul describes the activities of the "others" in terms that fill out the picture drawn in vv 3-4.13-15. Much of the vocabulary suggests fleshly or even satanic activity. Enslaves: cf Gal 2, 4. Devours: cf 1 Pt 5, 8. Gets the better: the verb lambanō means "to take," but is used in a variety of senses; here it may imply financial advantage, as in the English colloquialism "to take someone." It is similarly used at 12, 16 and is there connected with cunning and deceit. Puts on airs: the same verb is rendered "raise oneself" (10, 5) and "be too elated" (12, 7).

11, 21: Paul ironically concedes the charge of personal weakness from 10, 1-18 but will refute the other charge there mentioned, that of lack of boldness, accepting the challenge to demonstrate it by his boast.

11, 22: The opponents apparently pride themselves on their "Jewishness." Paul, too, can claim to be a Jew by race, religion, and promise. Descendants of Abraham: elsewhere Paul distinguishes authentic from inauthentic heirs of Abraham and the promise (Rom 4, 13-18; 9, 7-13; 11, 1; Gal 3, 9.27-29; cf Jn 8, 33-47). Here he grants his opponents this title in order to concentrate on the principal claim that follows.

11, 23a: Ministers of Christ . . . I am still more: the central point of the boast (cf the note on 11, 5). Like an insane person: the climax of his folly.

11, 23b-29: Service of the humiliated and crucified Christ is demonstrated by trials endured for him. This rhetorically impressive catalogue enumerates many of the labors and perils Paul encountered on his missionary journeys.

am talking like an insane person.) I am still more, with far greater labors, far more imprisonments, far worse beatings, and numerous brushes with death.
24* Five times at the hands of the Jews
I received forty lashes minus one.
25* Three times I was beaten with rods, once I was stoned, three times I was shipwrecked, I passed a night and a day on the deep; 26 on frequent journeys, in dangers from rivers, dangers from robbers, dangers from my own race, dangers from Gentiles, dangers in the city, dangers in the wilderness, dangers at sea, dangers among false brothers; 27* in toil and hardship, through many sleepless nights, through hunger and thirst, through frequent fastings, through cold and exposure. 28 And apart from these things, there is the daily pressure upon me of my anxiety for all the churches. 29* Who is weak, and I am not weak? Who is led to sin, and I am not indignant?

Paul's Boast: His Weakness.† 30 If I must boast, I will boast of the things that show my weakness. 31† The God and Father of the Lord Jesus knows, he who is blessed forever, that I do not lie.
32 At Damascus, the governor under King Aretas guarded the city of Damascus, in order to seize me, 33* but I was lowered in a basket through a window in the wall and escaped his hands.

CHAPTER 12

1† I must boast; not that it is profitable, but I will go on to visions and revelations of the Lord. 2 I know someone in Christ who, fourteen years ago (whether in the body or out of the body
I do not know, God knows), was caught up to the third heaven. 3 And I know that this person (whether in the body or out of the body I do not know, God knows) 4* was caught up into Paradise and heard ineffable things, which no one may utter. 5† About this person I will boast, but about myself I will not boast, except about my weaknesses. 6 Although if I should wish to boast, I would not be foolish, for I would be telling the truth. But I refrain, so that no one may think more of me than what he sees in me or hears from me 7*† because of the abundance of the revelations. Therefore, that I might not become too elated, a thorn in the flesh was given to me, an angel of Satan, to beat me, to keep me from being too elated. 8*† Three times I begged the Lord about this, that it might leave me, 9*† but he said to me, "My grace is sufficient for you, for power is made perfect in weakness." I will rather boast most gladly of my weaknesses, in order that the power of Christ may dwell with me.
10*† Therefore, I am content with weak-

† 11, 30—12, 10: The second part of Paul's boast, marked by a change of style and a shift in focus. After recalling the project in which he is engaged, he states a new topic: his weaknesses as matter for boasting. Everything in this section, even the discussion of privileges and distinctions, will be integrated into this perspective.

11, 31-32: The episode at Damascus is symbolic. It aptly illustrates Paul's weakness but ends in deliverance (cf 4, 7-11).

12, 1-4: In the body or out of the body: he seemed no longer confined to bodily conditions, but he does not claim to understand the mechanics of the experience. Caught up: i.e., in ecstasy. The third heaven . . . Paradise: ancient cosmologies depicted a multitiered universe. Jewish intertestamental literature contains much speculation about the number of heavens. Seven is the number usually mentioned, but the Testament of Levi (2, 7-10; 3, 1-4) speaks of three; God himself dwelt in the third of these. Without giving us any clear picture of the cosmos, Paul indicates a mental journey to a nonearthly space, set apart by God, in which secrets were revealed to him. Ineffable things: i.e., privileged knowledge, which it was not possible or permitted to divulge.

12, 5-7: This person: the indirect way of referring to himself has the effect of emphasizing the distance between that experience and his everyday life, just as the indirect someone in Christ (2) and all the passive verbs emphasize his passivity and receptivity in the experience. The revelations were not a personal achievement, nor were they meant to draw attention to any quality of his own.

12, 7b: That I might not become too elated: God assures that there is a negative component to his experience, so that he cannot lose proper perspective; cf 1, 9; 4, 7-11. A thorn in the flesh: variously interpreted as a sickness or physical disability, a temptation, or a handicap connected with his apostolic activity. But since Hebrew "thorn in the flesh," like English "thorn in my side," refers to persons (cf Nm 33, 55; Ez 28, 24), Paul may be referring to some especially persistent and obnoxious opponent. The language of vv 7-8 permits this interpretation. If this is correct, the frequent appearance of singular pronouns in depicting the opposition may not be merely a stylistic variation; the singular may be provoked and accompanied by the image of one individual in whom criticism of Paul's preaching, way of life, and apostolic consciousness is concentrated, and who embodies all the qualities Paul attributes to the group. An angel of Satan: a personal messenger from Satan; cf the satanic language already applied to the opponents in 11, 3.13-15.20.

12, 8: Three times: his prayer was insistent, like that of Jesus in Gethsemane, a sign of how intolerable he felt the thorn to be.

12, 9: But he said to me: Paul's petition is denied; release and healing are withheld for a higher purpose. The Greek perfect tense indicates that Jesus' earlier response still holds at the time of writing. My grace is sufficient for you: this is not a statement about the sufficiency of grace in general. Jesus speaks directly to Paul's situation. Is made perfect: i.e., is given most fully and manifests itself fully.

12, 9b-10a: Paul draws the conclusion from the autobiographical anecdote and integrates it into the subject of this part of the boast. Weaknesses: the apostolic hardships he must endure, including active personal hostility, as specified in a final catalogue (10a). That the power of Christ may dwell with me: Paul pinpoints the ground for the paradoxical strategy he has adopted in his self-defense.

12, 10b: When I am weak, then I am strong: Paul recognizes a twofold pattern in the resolution of the weakness-power (and death-life) dialectic, each of which looks to Jesus as the model and is experienced in him. The first is personal, involving a reversal in oneself (Jesus, 13, 4a; Paul, 1, 9-10; 4, 10-11; 6, 9). The second is apostolic, involving an effect on others (Jesus, 5, 14-15; Paul, 1, 6; 4, 12; 13, 9). The specific kind of "effectiveness in ministry" that Paul promises to demonstrate on his arrival (13, 4b; cf 10, 1-11) involves elements of both; this, too, will be modeled on Jesus' experience and a participation in that experience (9; 13, 3b).

nesses, insults, hard ships, persecutions, and constraints, for the sake of Christ; for when I am weak, then I am strong.

Selfless Concern for the Church.† 11* I have been foolish. You compelled me, for I ought to have been commended by you. For I am in no way inferior to these "superapostles," even though I am nothing. 12*† The signs of an apostle were performed among you with all endurance, signs and wonders, and mighty deeds. 13*† In what way were you less privileged than the rest of the churches, except that on my part I did not burden you? Forgive me this wrong!

14 Now I am ready to come to you this third time. And I will not be a burden, for I want not what is yours, but you. Children ought not to save for their parents, but parents for their children. 15 I will most gladly spend and be utterly spent for your sakes. If I love you more, am I to be loved less? 16* But granted that I myself did not burden you, yet I was crafty and got the better of you by deceit. 17 Did I take advantage of you through any of those I sent to you? 18* I urged Titus to go and sent the brother with him. Did Titus take advantage of you? Did we not walk in the same spirit? And in the same steps?

Final Warnings and Appeals.† 19† Have you been thinking all along that we are defending ourselves before you? In the sight of God we are speaking in Christ, and all for building you up, beloved. 20*† For I fear that when I come I may find you not such as I wish, and that you may find me not as you wish; that there may be rivalry, jealousy, fury, selfishness, slander, gossip, conceit, and disorder. 21† I fear that when I come again my God may humiliate me before you, and I may have to mourn over many of those who sinned earlier and have not repented of the impurity, immorality, and licentiousness they practiced.

1*† This third time I am coming to you. "On the testimony of two or three witnesses a fact shall be established." 2† I warned those who sinned earlier and all the others, and I warn them now while absent, as I did when present on my second visit, that if I come again I will not be lenient, 3† since you are looking for proof of Christ speaking in me.

12, 11-18: This brief section forms an epilogue or concluding observation to Paul's boast, corresponding to the prologue in 11, 1-15. A four-step sequence of ideas is common to these two sections: Paul qualifies his boast as folly (11, 1; 12, 11a), asserts his noninferiority to the "superapostles" (11, 5; 12, 11b), exemplifies this by allusion to charismatic endowments (11, 6; 12, 12), and finally denies that he has been a financial burden to the community (11, 7-12; 12, 13-18).

12, 12: Despite weakness and affliction (suggested by the mention of endurance), his ministry has been accompanied by demonstrations of power (cf 1 Cor 2, 3-4). Signs of an apostle: visible proof of belonging to Christ and of mediating Christ's power, which the opponents require as touchstones of apostleship (11; cf 13, 3).

12, 13-18: Paul insists on his intention to continue refusing support from the community (cf 11, 8-12). In defending his practice and his motivation, he once more protests his love (cf 11, 11) and rejects the suggestion of secret self-enrichment. He has recourse here again to language applied to his opponents earlier: "cunning" (11, 3), "deceit" (11, 13), "got the better of you" (see the note on 11, 20), "take advantage" (2, 11).

12, 19—13, 10: This concludes the development begun in ch 10. In the chiastic arrangement of the material (see the note on 10, 1—13, 10), this final part corresponds to the opening; there are important similarities of content between the two sections as well.

12, 19: This verse looks back at the previous chapters and calls them by their proper name, a defense, an apologia (cf 1 Cor 9, 3). Yet Paul insists on an important distinction: he has indeed been speaking for their benefit, but the ultimate judgment to which he submits is God's (cf 1 Cor 4, 3-5). This verse also leads into the final section, announcing two of its themes: judgment and building up.

12, 21: Again: one can also translate, "I fear that when I come my God may again humiliate me." Paul's allusion to the humiliation and mourning that may await him recall the mood he describes in 2, 1-4, but there is no reference here to any individual such as there is in 2, 5-11. The crisis of ch 2 has happily been resolved by integration of the offender and repentance (7, 4-16), whereas 12, 21 is preoccupied with still unrepentant sinners. The sexual sins recall 1 Cor 5-7.

13, 1: This third time I am coming: designation of the forthcoming visit as the "third" (cf 12, 14) may indicate that, in addition to his founding sojourn in Corinth, Paul had already made the first of two visits mentioned as planned in 1, 15, and the next visit will be the long-postponed second of these. If so, the materials in 1, 12—2, 13 plus 7, 4-16 and chs 10-13 may date from the same period of time, presumably of some duration, between Paul's second and third visit, though it is not clear that they are addressing the same crisis. The chronology is too unsure and the relations between sections of 2 Cor too unclear to yield any certainty. The hypothesis that chs 10-13 are themselves the "tearful letter" mentioned at 2, 3-4 creates more problems than it solves.

13, 2: I warned those who sinned earlier: mention of unrepentant sinners (12, 21 and here) and of an oral admonition given them on an earlier visit complicates the picture at the very end of Paul's development. It provides, in fact, a second explanation for the show of power that has been threatened from the beginning (10, 1-6), but a different reason for it quite unsuspected until now. It is not clear whether Paul is merely alluding to a dimension of the situation that he has not previously had occasion to mention, or whether some other community crisis, not directly connected with that behind chs 10-13, has influenced the final editing. I will not be lenient: contrast Paul's hesitation and reluctance to inflict pain in 1, 23 and 2, 1-4. The next visit will bring the showdown.

13, 3-4: Paul now gives another motive for severity when he comes, the charge of weakness leveled against him as an apostle. The motive echoes more closely the opening section (10, 1-18) and the intervening development (especially 11, 30—12, 10). Proof of Christ speaking in me: the threat of 10, 1-2 is reworded to recall Paul's conformity with the pattern of Christ, his insertion into the interplay of death and life, weakness and power (cf the note on 12, 10b).

He is not weak toward you but powerful in you. [4] For indeed he was crucified out of weakness, but he lives by the power of God. So also we are weak in him, but toward you we shall live with him by the power of God.
[5]† Examine yourselves to see whether you are living in faith. Test yourselves.
Do you not realize that Jesus Christ is in you?—unless, of course, you fail the test. [6] I hope you will discover that we have not failed. [7] But we pray to God that you may not do evil, not that we may appear to have passed the test but that you may do what is right, even though we may seem to have failed.
[8] For we cannot do anything against the truth, but only for the truth. [9] For we rejoice when we are weak but you are strong. What we pray for is your improvement.
[10]*† I am writing this while I am away,
so that when I come I may not have to be severe in virtue of the authority that the Lord has given me to build up and not to tear down.

V: CONCLUSION†

[11] Finally, brothers, rejoice. Mend your ways, encourage one another,
agree with one another, live in peace,
and the God of love and peace will be with you. [12]* Greet one another with a holy kiss. All the holy ones greet you.
[13]* The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ and the love of God and the fellowship of the holy Spirit be with all of you.

† 13, 5-9: Paul turns the challenge mentioned in v 3 on them: they are to put themselves to the test to demonstrate whether Christ is in them. These verses involve a complicated series of plays on the theme of dokimē (testing, proof, passing and failing a test). Behind this stands the familiar distinction between present human judgment and final divine judgment. This is the final appearance of the theme (cf 10, 18; 11, 15; 12, 19).

13, 10: Authority . . . to build up and not to tear down: Paul restates the purpose of his letter in language that echoes 10, 2.8, emphasizing the positive purpose of his authority in their regard. This verse forms an inclusion with the topic sentence of the section (12, 19), as well as with the opening of this entire portion of the letter (10, 1-2).

13, 11-13: These verses may have originally concluded chs 10-13, but they have nothing specifically to do with the material of that section. It is also possible to consider them a conclusion to the whole of 2 Cor in its present edited form. The exhortations are general, including a final appeal for peace in the community. The letter ends calmly, after its many storms, with the prospect of ecclesial unity and divine blessing. The final verse is one of the clearest trinitarian passages in the New Testament.

The Letter to the

GALATIANS

The Galatians to whom the letter is addressed were Paul's converts, most likely among the descendants of Celts who had invaded western and central Asia Minor in the third century B.C. and had settled in the territory around Ancyra (modern Ankara, Turkey). Paul had passed through this area on his second missionary journey (Acts 16, 6) and again on his third (Acts 18, 23). It is less likely that the recipients of this letter were Paul's churches in the southern regions of Pisidia, Lycaonia, and Pamphylia where he had preached earlier in the Hellenized cities of Perge, Iconium, Pisidian Antioch, Lystra, and Derbe (Acts 13, 13—14, 27); this area was part of the Roman province of Galatia, and some scholars think that South Galatia was the destination of this letter.

If it is addressed to the Galatians in the north, the letter was probably written around A.D. 54 or 55, most likely from Ephesus after Paul's arrival there for a stay of several years on his third missionary journey (Acts 19; 20, 31). On the South Galatian theory, the date would be earlier, perhaps A.D. 48-50. Involved is the question of how one relates the events of 2, 1-10 to the "Council of Jerusalem" described in Acts 15 (see the notes on each passage).

In any case, the new Christians whom Paul is addressing were converts from paganism (4, 8-9) who were now being enticed by other missionaries to add the observances of the Jewish law, including the rite of circumcision, to the cross of Christ as a means of salvation. For, since Paul's visit, some other interpretation of Christianity had been brought to these neophytes, probably by converts from Judaism (the name "Judaizers" is sometimes applied to them); it has specifically been suggested that they were Jewish Christians who had come from the austere Essene sect.

These interlopers insisted on the necessity of following certain precepts of the Mosaic law along with faith in Christ. They were undermining Paul's authority also, asserting that he had not been trained by Jesus himself, that his gospel did not agree with that of the original and true apostles in Jerusalem, that he had kept from his converts in Galatia the necessity of accepting circumcision and other key obligations of the Jewish law, in order more easily to win them to Christ, and that his gospel was thus not the full and authentic one held by "those of repute" in Jerusalem (2, 2). Some scholars also see in chapters 5 and 6 another set of opponents against whom Paul writes, people who in their emphasis on the Spirit set aside all norms for conduct and became libertines in practice.

When Paul learned of the situation, he wrote this defense of his apostolic authority and of the correct understanding of the faith. He set forth the unique importance of Christ and his redemptive sacrifice on the cross, the freedom that Christians enjoy from the old burdens of the law, the total sufficiency of Christ and of faith in Christ as the way to God and to eternal life, and the beauty of the new life of the Spirit. Galatians is thus a summary of basic Pauline theology. Its themes were more fully and less polemically developed in the Letter to the Romans.

Autobiographically, the letter gives us Paul's own accounts of how he came to faith (1, 15-24), the agreement in "the truth of the gospel" (2, 5.14) that he shared with the Jewish Christian leaders in Jerusalem, James, Kephas, and John (2, 1-10), and the rebuke he had to deliver to Kephas in Antioch for inconsistency, contrary to the gospel, on the issue of table fellowship in the racially mixed church of Jewish and Gentile Christians in Antioch (2, 11-14; cf 15-21). At the conclusion of the letter (6, 11-18), Paul wrote in his own hand (cf 2 Thes 3, 17-18) a vivid summary of the message to the Galatians.

In his vigorous emphasis on the absolute preeminence of Christ and his cross as God's way to salvation and holiness, Paul stresses Christian freedom and the ineffectiveness of the Mosaic law for gaining divine favor and blessings (3, 19-29). The pious Jew saw in the law a way established by God to win divine approval by a life of meticulous observance of ritual, social, and moral regulations. But Paul's profound insight into the higher designs of God in Christ led him to understand and welcome the priority of promise and faith (shown in the experience of Abraham, 3, 6-18) and the supernatural gifts of the Spirit (3, 2-5; 5, 16—6, 10). His enthusiasm for this new vision of the life of grace in Christ and of the uniquely salvific role of Christ's redemptive death on the cross shines through this whole letter.

The principal divisions of the Letter to the Galatians are the following:

- I: Address (1, 1-5)
- II: Loyalty to the Gospel (1, 6-10)
- III: Paul's Defense of His Gospel and His Authority (1, 11—2, 21)
- IV: Faith and Liberty (3, 1—4, 31)
- V: Exhortation to Christian Living (5, 1—6, 10)
- VI: Conclusion (6, 11-18)

I: ADDRESS

CHAPTER 1

Greeting.† 1*† Paul, an apostle not from human beings nor through a human being but through Jesus Christ and God the Father who raised him from the dead, 2† and all the brothers who are with me, to the churches of Galatia: 3 grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ, 4*† who gave himself for our sins that he might rescue us from the present evil age in accord with the will of our God and Father, 5* to whom be glory forever and ever. Amen.

II: LOYALTY TO THE GOSPEL†

6*† I am amazed that you are so quickly forsaking the one who called you by [the] grace [of Christ] for a different gospel 7 (not that there is another). But there are some who are disturbing you and wish to pervert the gospel of Christ. 8*† But even if we or an angel from heaven should preach [to you] a gospel other than the one that we preached to you, let that one be accursed! 9 As we have said before, and now I say again, if anyone preaches to you a gospel other than the one that you received, let that one be accursed!

10*† Am I now currying favor with human beings or God? Or am I seeking to please people? If I were still trying to please people, I would not be a slave of Christ.

10: 2 Cor 5, 11 / 1 Thes 2, 4.

1, 1-5: See the note on Rom 1, 1-7, concerning the greeting.

1, 1: Apostle: because of attacks on his authority in Galatia, Paul defends his apostleship. He is not an apostle commissioned by a congregation (Phil 2, 25; 2 Cor 8, 23) or even by prophets (1 Tm 1, 18 and 4, 14) but through Jesus Christ and God the Father.

1, 2: All the brothers: fellow believers in Christ, male and female; cf 3, 27-28. Paul usually mentions the co-sender(s) at the start of a letter, but the use of all is unique, adding weight to the letter. Galatia: central Turkey more likely than the Roman province of Galatia; see Introduction.

1, 4: The greeting in v 3 is expanded by a christological formula that stresses deliverance through the Lord Jesus from a world dominated by Satan; cf 2 Cor 4, 4; Eph 2, 2; 6, 12.

1, 6-10: In place of the usual thanksgiving (see the note on Rom 1, 8), Paul, with little to be thankful for in the Galatian situation, expresses amazement at the way his converts are deserting the gospel of Christ for a perverted message. He reasserts the one gospel he has preached (7-9) and begins to defend himself (10).

1, 6: The one who called you: God or Christ, though in actuality Paul was the divine instrument to call the Galatians.

1, 8: Accursed: in Greek, anathema; cf Rom 9, 3; 1 Cor 12, 3; 16, 22.

1, 10: This charge by Paul's opponents, that he sought to conciliate people with flattery and to curry favor with God, might refer to his mission practices (cf 1 Cor 9, 19-23) but the word still suggests it refers to his pre-Christian days (cf 14; Phil 3, 6). The self-description slave of Christ is one Paul often uses in a greeting (Rom 1, 1).

III: PAUL'S DEFENSE OF HIS GOSPEL AND HIS AUTHORITY†

His Call by Christ. 11* Now I want you to know, brothers, that the gospel preached by me is not of human origin. 12† For I did not receive it from a human being, nor was I taught it, but it came through a revelation of Jesus Christ.

13*† For you heard of my former way of life in Judaism, how I persecuted the church of God beyond measure and tried to destroy it, 14* and progressed in Judaism beyond many of my contemporaries among my race, since I was even more a zealot for my ancestral traditions. 15* But when [God], who from my mother's womb had set me apart and called me through his grace, was pleased 16*† to reveal his Son to me, so that I might proclaim him to the Gentiles, I did not immediately consult flesh and blood, 17† nor did I go up to Jerusalem to those who were apostles before me; rather, I went into Arabia and then returned to Damascus.

18*† Then after three years I went up to Jerusalem to confer with Kephas and remained with him for fifteen days. 19*† But I did not see any other of the apostles, only James the brother of the Lord. 20* (As to what I am writing to you, behold, before God, I am not lying.) 21* Then I went into the regions of Syria and Cilicia. 22 And I was unknown personally to the churches of Judea that are in Christ; 23* they only kept hearing that "the one who once was persecuting us is now preaching the faith he once tried to destroy." 24 So they glorified God because of me.

CHAPTER 2

The Council of Jerusalem.† 1*† Then after fourteen years I again went up to Jerusalem with Barnabas, taking Titus along also. 2*† I went up in accord with a revelation, and I presented to them the gospel that I preach to the Gentiles—but privately to those of repute—so that I might not be running, or have run, in vain. 3*† Moreover, not even Ti-

1, 11—2, 21: Paul's presentation on behalf of his message and of his apostleship reflects rhetorical forms of his day: he first narrates the facts about certain past events (1, 12—2, 14) and then states his contention regarding justification by faith as the gospel message (2, 15-21). Further arguments follow from both experience and scripture in chs 3 and 4, before he draws out the ethical consequences (5, 1—6, 10). The specific facts that he takes up here to show that his gospel is not a human invention (1, 11) but came through a revelation of Jesus Christ (1, 12) deal with his own calling as a Christian missionary (1, 13-17), his initial relations with the apostles in Jerusalem (1, 18-24), a later journey to Jerusalem (2, 1-10), and an incident in Antioch involving Kephas and persons from James (2, 11-14). The content of Paul's revealed gospel is then set forth in the heart of the letter (2, 15-21).

1, 12: Although Paul received his gospel through a revelation from Christ, this did not exclude his use of early Christian confessional formulations. See the note on 1, 4.

1, 13-17: Along with Phil 3, 4-11, which also moves from autobiography to its climax in a discussion on justification by faith (cf Gal 2, 15-21), this passage is Paul's chief account of the change from his former way of life (13) to service as a Christian missionary (16); cf Acts 9, 1-22; 22, 4-16; 26, 9-18. Paul himself does not use the term "conversion" but stresses revelation (12.16). In v 15 his language echoes the Old Testament prophetic call of Jeremiah. Unlike the account in Acts (cf 22, 4-16), the calling of Paul here includes the mission to proclaim Christ to the Gentiles (16).

1, 16: Flesh and blood: human authorities (cf Mt 16, 17, 1 Cor 15, 50). Paul's apostleship comes from God (1).

1, 17: Arabia: probably the region of the Nabataean Arabs, east and south of Damascus.

1, 18-24: Paul's first journey to Jerusalem as a Christian, according to Galatians (cf Acts 9, 23-31 and the note on Acts 12, 25). He is quite explicit about contacts there, testifying under oath (20). On returning to Syria (perhaps specifically Damascus, cf v 17) and Cilicia (including his home town Tarsus, cf Acts 9, 30; 22, 3), Paul most likely engaged in missionary work. He underscores the fact that Christians in Judea knew of him only by reputation.

1, 18: After three years: two years and more, since Paul's call. To confer with Kephas may mean simply "pay a visit" or more specifically "get information from" him about Jesus, over a two-week period. Kephas: Aramaic name of Simon (Peter); cf Mt 16, 16-18 and the notes there.

1, 19: James the brother of the Lord: not one of the twelve, but a brother of Jesus (see the note on Mk 6, 3). He played an important role in the Jerusalem church (see the note on Gal 2, 9), the leadership of which he took over from Peter (Acts 12, 17). Paul may have regarded James as an apostle.

2, 1-10: Paul's second journey to Jerusalem, according to Galatians, involved a private meeting with those of repute (2). At issue was a Gentile, Titus, and the question of circumcision, which false brothers (4) evidently demanded for him. Paul insists that the gospel he preaches (2; cf 1, 9.11) remained intact with no addition by those of repute (6); that Titus was not compelled to accept circumcision (3); and that he and the reputed pillars in Jerusalem agreed on how each would advance the missionary task (7-10). Usually, 1-10 is equated with the "Council of Jerusalem," as it is called, described in Acts 15. See the notes on Acts 15, 6-12 and 15, 13-35, the latter concerning the "decree" that Paul does not mention.

2, 1: After fourteen years: thirteen or more years, probably reckoned from the return to Syria and Cilicia (1, 21), though possibly from Paul's calling as a Christian (1, 15). Barnabas: cf 9.13; 1 Cor 9, 6. A Jewish Christian missionary, with whom Paul worked (Acts 4, 36-37; 11, 22.25.30; 12, 25; 13, 1-3; 15, 2). Titus: a missionary companion of Paul (2 Cor 2, 13; 7, 6.13-15; 8, 6.16.23; 12, 18), non-Jewish (Gal 2, 3), never mentioned in Acts.

2, 2: A revelation: cf 1, 1.12. Paul emphasizes it was God's will, not Jerusalem authority, that led to the journey. Acts 15, 2 states that the church in Antioch appointed Paul and Barnabas for the task. Those of repute: leaders of the Jerusalem church; the term, while positive, may be slightly ironic (cf 6.9). Run, in vain: while Paul presents a positive picture in what follows, his missionary work in Galatia would have been to no purpose if his opponents were correct that circumcision is needed for complete faith in Christ.

2, 3: Not even a Gentile Christian like Titus was compelled to receive the rite of circumcision. The Greek text could be interpreted that he voluntarily accepted circumcision, but this is unlikely in the overall argument.

tus, who was with me, although he was a Greek, was compelled to be circumcised, [4]† but because of the false brothers secretly brought in, who slipped in to spy on our freedom that we have in Christ Jesus, that they might enslave us—[5]† to them we did not submit even for a moment, so that the truth of the gospel might remain intact for you. [6]* But from those who were reputed to be important (what they once were makes no difference to me; God shows no partiality)—those of repute made me add nothing. [7]† On the contrary, when they saw that I had been entrusted with the gospel to the uncircumcised, just as Peter to the circumcised, [8] for the one who worked in Peter for an apostolate to the circumcised worked also in me for the Gentiles, [9]† and when they recognized the grace bestowed upon me, James and Kephas and John, who were reputed to be pillars, gave me and Barnabas their right hands in partnership, that we should go to the Gentiles and they to the circumcised. [10]*† Only, we were to be mindful of the poor, which is the very thing I was eager to do.

Peter's Inconsistency at Antioch.† [11]† And when Kephas came to Antioch, I opposed him to his face because he clearly was wrong. [12]† For, until some people came from James, he used to eat with the Gentiles; but when they came, he began to draw back and separated himself, because he was afraid of the circumcised. [13]† And the rest of the Jews [also] acted hypocritically along with him, with the result that even Barnabas was carried away by their hypocrisy. [14]† But when I saw that they were not on the right road in line with the truth of the gospel, I said to Kephas in front of all, "If you, though a Jew, are living like a Gentile and not like a Jew, how can you compel the Gentiles to live like Jews?"

Faith and Works.† [15] We, who are Jews by nature and not sinners from among the Gentiles, [16]*† [yet] who know that a person is not justified by works of the law but through faith in Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Christ Jesus that we may be justified by faith in Christ and not by works of the law, because by works of the law no one will be justified. [17]† But if, in seeking to be justified in Christ, we ourselves are found to be sinners, is Christ then a minister of sin? Of course not! [18]† But if I am building up again those things that I tore down, then I show myself to be a

2, 4: False brothers: Jewish Christians who took the position that Gentile Christians must first become Jews through circumcision and observance of the Mosaic law in order to become Christians; cf Acts 15, 1.

2, 5: The truth of the gospel: the true gospel, in contrast to the false one of the opponents (1, 6-9); the gospel of grace, used as a norm (14).

2, 7-9: Some think that actual "minutes" of the meeting are here quoted. Paul's apostleship to the Gentiles (1, 16) is recognized alongside that of Peter to the Jews. Moreover, the right to proclaim the gospel without requiring circumcision and the Jewish law is sealed by a handshake. That Paul and colleagues should go to the Gentiles did not exclude his preaching to the Jews as well (Rom 1, 13-16) or Kephas to Gentile areas.

2, 9: James and Kephas and John: see the notes on 1, 18 and 19; on Peter and John as leaders in the Jerusalem church, cf Acts 3, 1 and 8, 14. The order here, with James first, may reflect his prominence in Jerusalem after Peter (Kephas) departed (Acts 12, 17).

2, 10: The poor: Jerusalem Christians or a group within the church there (cf Rom 15, 26). The collection for them was extremely important in Paul's thought and labor (cf Rom 15, 25-28; 1 Cor 16, 1-4; 2 Cor 8 and 9).

2, 11-14: The decision reached in Jerusalem (3-7) recognized the freedom of Gentile Christians from the Jewish law. But the problem of table fellowship between Jewish Christians, who possibly still kept kosher food regulations, and Gentile believers was not yet settled. When Kephas first came to the racially mixed community of Jewish and Gentile Christians in Antioch (12), he ate with non-Jews. Pressure from persons arriving later from Jerusalem caused him and Barnabas to draw back. Paul therefore publicly rebuked Peter's inconsistency toward the gospel (14). Some think that what Paul said on that occasion extends through v 16 or v 21.

2, 11: Clearly was wrong: literally, "stood condemned," by himself and also by Paul. His action in breaking table fellowship was especially grievous if the eating involved the meal at the Lord's supper (cf 1 Cor 11, 17-25).

2, 12: Some people came from James: strict Jewish Christians (cf Acts 15, 1.5; 21, 20-21), either sent by James (1, 19; 2, 9) or claiming to be from the leader of the Jerusalem church. The circumcised: presumably Jewish Christians, not Jews.

2, 13: The Jews: Jewish Christians, like Barnabas. Hypocrisy: literally, "pretense," "play-acting"; moral insincerity.

2, 14: Compel the Gentiles to live like Jews: that is, conform to Jewish practices, such as circumcision (3-5) or regulations about food (12).

2, 15-21: Following on the series of incidents cited above, Paul's argument, whether spoken to Kephas at Antioch or only now articulated, is pertinent to the Galatian situation, where believers were having themselves circumcised (6, 12-13) and obeying other aspects of Jewish law (4, 9-10; 5, 1-4). He insists that salvation is by faith in Christ, not by works of the law. His teaching on the gospel concerns justification by faith (16) in relation to sin (17), law (19), life in Christ (19-20), and grace (21).

2, 16: No one will be justified: Ps 143, 2 is reflected.

2, 17: A minister of sin: literally, "a servant of sin" (cf Rom 15, 8), an agent of sin, one who promotes it. This is possibly a claim by opponents that justification on the basis of faith in Christ makes Christ an abettor of sin when Christians are found to be sinners. Paul denies the conclusion (cf Rom 6, 1-4).

2, 18: To return to observance of the law as the means to salvation would entangle one not only in inevitable transgressions of it but also in the admission that it was wrong to have abandoned the law in the first place.

transgressor. [19]*† For through the law
I died to the law, that I might live for God. I have been crucified with Christ;
[20]* yet I live, no longer I, but Christ lives
in me; insofar as I now live in the flesh,
I live by faith in the Son of God who has loved me and given himself up for me. [21]* I do not nullify the grace of God; for if justification comes through the law, then Christ died for nothing.

IV: FAITH AND LIBERTY

CHAPTER 3

Justification by Faith.† [1]† O stupid Galatians! Who has bewitched you, before whose eyes Jesus Christ was publicly portrayed as crucified? [2]† I want to learn only this from you: did you receive the Spirit from works of the law,
or from faith in what you heard?
[3]† Are you so stupid? After beginning with the Spirit, are you now ending with the flesh? [4]† Did you experience so many things in vain?—if indeed it was in vain. [5] Does, then, the one who supplies the Spirit to you and works mighty deeds among you do so from works of the law or from faith in what you heard?
[6]*† Thus Abraham "believed God, and it was credited to him as righteousness."

[7]† Realize then that it is those who have faith who are children of Abraham. [8] Scripture, which saw in advance that God would justify the Gentiles by faith, foretold the good news to Abraham, saying, "Through you shall all the nations be blessed." [9]* Consequently, those who have faith are blessed along with Abraham who had faith. [10]*† For all who depend on works of the law are under a curse; for it is written, "Cursed be everyone who does not persevere in doing all the things written in the book of the law."
[11]* And that no one is justified before God by the law is clear, for "the one who is righteous by faith will live."
[12]* But the law does not depend on faith;
rather, "the one who does these things will live by them." [13]* Christ ransomed us from the curse of the law by becoming a curse for us, for it is written,
"Cursed be everyone who hangs on a tree," [14]* that the blessing of Abraham might be extended to the Gentiles through Christ Jesus, so that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith.

The Law Did Not Nullify the Promise.† [15]* Brothers, in human terms I say that no one can annul or amend even a human will once ratified.

2, 19: Through the law I died to the law: this is variously explained: the law revealed sin (Rom 7, 7-9) and led to death and then to belief in Christ; or, the law itself brought the insight that law cannot justify (16; Ps 143, 2); or, the "law of Christ" (6, 2) led to abandoning the Mosaic law; or, the law put Christ to death (cf 3, 13) and so provided a way to our salvation, through baptism into Christ, through which we die (crucified with Christ; see Rom 6, 6). Cf also 3, 19-25 on the role of the law in reference to salvation.

3, 1-14: Paul's contention that justification comes not through the law or the works of the law but by faith in Christ and in his death (2, 16.21) is supported by appeals to Christian experience (1-5) and to scripture (6-14). The gift of God's Spirit to the Galatians came from the gospel received in faith, not from doing what the law enjoins. The story of Abraham shows that faith in God brings righteousness (6; Gn 15, 6). The promise to Abraham (8; Gn 12, 3) extends to the Gentiles (14).

3, 1: Stupid: not just senseless, for they were in danger of deserting their salvation.

3, 2: Faith in what you heard: Paul's message received with faith. The Greek can also mean "the proclamation of the faith" or "a hearing that comes from faith."

3, 3: On the contrast of Spirit and flesh, cf Rom 8, 1-11. Having received the Spirit, they need not be circumcised now.

3, 4: Experience so many things: probably the mighty deeds of v 5 but possibly the experience of sufferings.

3, 6: Abraham . . . righteousness: see Gn 15, 6; Rom 4, 3. The Galatians like Abraham heard with faith and experienced justification. This first argument forms the basis for the further scriptural evidence that follows.

3, 7-9: Faith is what matters, for Abraham and the children of Abraham, in contrast to the claims of the opponents that circumcision and observance of the law are needed to bring the promised blessing of Gn 12, 3; cf Gn 18, 18; Sir 44, 21; Acts 3, 25.

3, 10-14: Those who depend not on promise and faith but on works of the law are under a curse because they do not persevere in doing all the things written in the book of the law (10; Dt 27, 26) in order to gain life (12; Lv 18, 5; cf Rom 10, 5). But scripture teaches that no one is justified before God by the law (11; Hb 2, 4, adapted from the Greek version of Habakkuk; cf Rom 1, 17; Heb 10, 38). Salvation, then, depends on faith in Christ who died on the cross (13), taking upon himself a curse found in Dt 21, 23 (about executed criminals hanged in public view), to free us from the curse of the law (13). That the Gentile Galatians have received the promised Spirit (14) by faith and in no other way returns the argument to the experience cited in vv 1-5.

3, 15-18: A third argument to support Paul's position that salvation is not through the law but by promise (1-14) comes from legal practice and scriptural history. A legal agreement or human will, duly ratified, is unalterable (15). God's covenant with Abraham and its repeated promises (Gn 12, 2-3.7. 13, 15; 17, 7-8; 22, 16-18; 24, 7) is not superseded by the law, which came much later, in the time of Moses. The inheritance (of the Spirit and the blessings) is by promise, not by law (18). Paul's argument hinges on the fact that the same Greek word, diathēkē, can be rendered as will or testament (15) and as covenant (17).

16*† Now the promises were made to Abraham and to his descendant. It does not say, "And to descendants," as referring to many, but as referring to one,
"And to your descendant," who is Christ. 17*† This is what I mean: the law, which came four hundred and thirty years afterward, does not annul a covenant previously ratified by God, so as to cancel the promise. 18*† For if the inheritance comes from the law, it is no longer from a promise; but God bestowed it on Abraham through a promise.

19*† Why, then, the law? It was added for transgressions, until the descendant came to whom the promise had been made; it was promulgated by angels at the hand of a mediator. 20* Now there is no mediator when only one party is involved, and God is one. 21* Is the law
then opposed to the promises [of God]?
Of course not! For if a law had been given that could bring life, then righteousness would in reality come from the law. 22* But scripture confined all things under the power of sin, that through faith in Jesus Christ the promise might be given to those who believe.

What Faith Has Brought Us.† 23* Before faith came, we were held in custody under law, confined for the faith that was to be revealed.
24*† Consequently, the law was our disciplinarian for Christ, that we might be justified by faith. 25* But now that faith has come, we are no longer under a disciplinarian. 26*† For through faith you are all children of God in Christ Jesus.
27*† For all of you who were baptized into Christ have clothed yourselves with Christ. 28* There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither slave nor free person, there is not male and female;
for you are all one in Christ Jesus.
29* And if you belong to Christ, then you are Abraham's descendant, heirs according to the promise.

CHAPTER 4

God's Free Children in Christ.† 1† I mean that as long as the heir is not of age, he is no different from a slave,
although he is the owner of everything, 2 but he is under the supervision of guardians and administrators until the date set by his father. 3*† In the same way we also, when we were not of age,
were enslaved to the elemental powers of the world. 4* But when the fullness of time had come, God sent his Son,
born of a woman, born under the law,
5* to ransom those under the law, so that we might receive adoption. 6*† As proof

5: 3, 13.26.
6: 3, 26; Rom 8, 15.

† 3, 16: Descendant: literally, "and to his seed." The Hebrew, as in Gn 12, 7; 15, 18; 22, 17-18, is a collective singular, traditionally rendered as a plural, descendants, but taken by Paul in its literal number to refer to Christ as descendant of Abraham.

3, 17: Four hundred and thirty years afterward: follows Ex 12, 40 in the Greek (Septuagint) version, in contrast to Gn 15, 13 and Acts 7, 6, for chronology.

3, 18: This refutes the opponents' contention that the promises of God are fulfilled only as a reward for human observance of the law.

3, 19-22: A digression: if the Mosaic law, then, does not save or bring life, why was it given? Elsewhere, Paul says the law served to show what sin is (Rom 3, 20; 7, 7-8). Here the further implication is that the law in effect served to produce transgressions. Moreover, it was received at second hand by angels, through a mediator, not directly from God (19). The law does not, however, oppose God's purposes, for it carries out its function (22), so that righteousness comes by faith and promise, not by human works of the law.

3, 19: The descendant: Christ (16). By angels: Dt 33, 2-4 stressed their presence as enhancing the importance of the law; Paul uses their role to diminish its significance (cf Acts 7, 38.53). A mediator: Moses. But in a covenant of promise, where all depends on the one God, no mediator is needed (20).

3, 23-29: Paul adds a further argument in support of righteousness or justification by faith and through God's promise rather than by works of the law (2, 16; 3, 22): as children of God, baptized into Christ, the Galatians are all Abraham's descendant and heirs of the promise to Abraham (8.14.16-18.29). The teaching in 23-25, that since faith (Christianity) has come, we are no longer under the law, could be taken with the previous paragraph on the role of the Mosaic law, but it also fits here as a contrast between the situation before faith (23) and the results after faith has come (25-29).

3, 24-25: Disciplinarian: the Greek paidagōgos referred to a slave who escorted a child to school but did not teach or tutor; hence, a guardian or monitor. Applying this to the law fits the role of the law described in vv 19-25.

3, 26: Children of God: literally "sons," in contrast to the young child under the disciplinarian in vv 24-25. The term includes males and females (28).

3, 27-28: Likely a formula used at baptism that expresses racial, social-economic, and sexual equality in Christ (cf Col 3, 11).

3, 27: Clothed yourselves with Christ: literally, "have put on Christ"; cf Rom 13, 14; Eph 4, 24; Col 3, 10. Baptismal imagery, traceable to the Old Testament (Jb 29, 14; Is 59, 17) but also found in pagan mystery cults.

4, 1-7: What Paul has argued in 3, 26-29 is now elaborated in terms of the Christian as the heir (1.7; cf 3, 18.29) freed from control by others. Again, as in 3, 2-5, the proof that Christians are children of God is the gift of the Spirit of Christ relating them intimately to God.

4, 1.3: Not of age: an infant or minor.

4, 3: The elemental powers of the world: while the term can refer to the "elements" like earth, air, fire, and water or to elementary forms of religion, the sense here is more likely that of celestial beings that were thought in pagan circles to control the world; cf 8; Col 2, 8.20.

4, 6: Children: see the note on 3, 26; here in contrast to the infant or young person not of age (1.3). Abba: cf Mk 14, 36 and the note; Rom 8, 15.

that you are children, God sent the spirit of his Son into our hearts, crying out, "Abba, Father!" 7* So you are no longer a slave but a child, and if a child then also an heir, through God.

Do Not Throw This Freedom Away.† 8*† At a time when you did not know God, you became slaves to things that by nature are not gods; 9* but now that you have come to know God, or rather to be known by God, how can you turn back again to the weak and destitute elemental powers? Do you want to be slaves to them all over again? 10*† You are observing days, months, seasons, and years. 11† I am afraid on your account that perhaps I have labored for you in vain.

Appeal to Former Loyalty.† 12*† I implore you, brothers, be as I am, because I have also become as you are. You did me no wrong; 13† you know that it was because of a physical illness that I originally preached the gospel to you, 14 and you did not show disdain or contempt because of the trial caused you by my physical condition, but rather you received me as an angel of God, as Christ Jesus. 15† Where now is that blessedness of yours? Indeed, I can testify to you that, if it had been possible, you would have torn out your eyes and given them to me. 16 So now have I become your enemy by telling you the truth? 17*† They show interest in you, but not in a good way; they want to isolate you, so that you may show interest in them. 18 Now it is good to be shown interest for good reason at all times, and not only when I am with you. 19* My children, for whom I am again in labor until Christ be formed in you! 20 I would like to be with you now and to change my tone, for I am perplexed because of you.

An Allegory on Christian Freedom.† 21 Tell me, you who want to be under the law, do you not listen to the law? 22* For it is written that Abraham had two sons, one by the slave woman and the other by the freeborn woman. 23* The son of the slave woman was born naturally, the son of the freeborn through a promise. 24* Now this is an allegory. These women represent two covenants. One was from Mount Sinai, bearing children for slavery; this is Hagar. 25† Hagar represents Sinai, a mountain in Arabia; it corresponds to the present Jerusalem, for she is in slavery along with her children. 26* But the Jerusalem above is freeborn, and she is our mother. 27*† For it is written:

> "Rejoice, you barren one who bore no children;
> break forth and shout, you who were not in labor;
> for more numerous are the children of the deserted one > than of her who has a husband."

28* Now you, brothers, like Isaac, are children of the promise. 29 But just as then the child of the flesh persecuted

4, 8-11: On the basis of the arguments advanced from 3, 1 through 4, 7, Paul now launches his appeal to the Galatians with the question, how can you turn back to the slavery of the law (9)? The question is posed with reference to bondage to the elemental powers (see the note on 4, 3) because the Galatians had originally been converted to Christianity from paganism, not Judaism (8). The use of the direct question is like 3, 3-5.

4, 8: Things that by nature are not gods: or "gods that by nature do not exist."

4, 10: This is likely a reference to ritual observances from the Old Testament, promoted by opponents: sabbaths or Yom Kippur, new moon, Passover or Pentecost, sabbatical years.

4, 11: Cf 2, 2. If the Galatians become slaves . . . all over again to the law (9), Paul will have worked in vain among them.

4, 12-20: A strongly personal section. Paul appeals to past ties between the Galatians and himself. He speaks sharply of the opponents (17-18) and pastorally to the Galatians (19-20).

4, 12: Because I have also become as you are: a terse phrase in Greek, meaning "Be as I, Paul, am," i.e., living by faith, independent of the law, for, in spite of my background in Judaism (1, 13), I have become as you Galatians are now, a brother in Christ.

4, 13: Physical illness: because its nature is not described, some assume an eye disease (15); others, epilepsy; some relate it to 2 Cor 12, 7-9. Originally: this may also be translated "formerly" or "on the first (of two) visit(s)"; cf Acts 16, 6; 18, 23.

4, 15: That blessedness of yours: possibly a reference to the Galatians' initial happy reception of Paul (14) and of his gospel (1, 6; 3, 1-4) and their felicitation at such blessedness, but the phrase could also refer ironically to earlier praise by Paul of the Galatians, no longer possible when they turn from the gospel to the claims of the opponents (17-18; 1, 7). If the word is a more literal reference to a beatitude, Gal 3, 26-28 may be in view.

4, 17: Isolate you: that is, from the blessings of the gospel and/or from Paul.

4, 21-31: Paul supports his appeal for the gospel (9; 1, 6-9; 2, 16; 3, 2) by a further argument from scripture (cf 3, 6-18). It involves the relationship of Abraham (3, 6-16) to his wife, Sarah, the freeborn woman, and to Hagar, the slave woman, and the contrast between the sons born to each: Isaac, child of promise, and Ishmael, son of Hagar (Gn 16 and 21). Only through Isaac is the promise of God preserved. This allegory (24), with its equation of the Sinai covenant and Mosaic law with slavery and of the promise of God with freedom, Paul uses only in light of previous arguments. His quotation of Gn 21, 10 at v 30 suggests on a scriptural basis that the Galatians should expel those who are troubling them (1, 7).

4, 25: Hagar represents Sinai . . . : some manuscripts have what seems a geographical note, "For Sinai is a mountain in Arabia."

4, 27: Is 54, 1 in the Septuagint translation is applied to Sarah as the barren one (in Gn 15) who ultimately becomes the mother not only of Isaac but now of numerous children, i.e., of all those who believe, the children of the promise (28).

the child of the spirit, it is the same now.
30* But what does the scripture say?
"Drive out the slave woman and her son!
For the son of the slave woman shall not share the inheritance with the son" of the freeborn. 31* Therefore, brothers, we are children not of the slave woman but of the freeborn woman.

V: EXHORTATION TO CHRISTIAN LIVING

CHAPTER 5

The Importance of Faith.† 1*† For freedom Christ set us free; so stand firm and do not submit again to the yoke of slavery.
2* It is I, Paul, who am telling you that if you have yourselves circumcised, Christ will be of no benefit to you. 3*† Once again I declare to every man who has himself circumcised that he is bound to observe the entire law. 4 You are separated from Christ, you who are trying to be justified by law; you have fallen from grace. 5* For through the Spirit, by faith, we await the hope of righteousness. 6*† For in Christ Jesus, neither circumcision nor uncircumcision counts for anything, but only faith working through love.
Be Not Misled.† 7† You were running well; who hindered you from following [the] truth? 8*† That enticement does not come from the one who called you. 9* A little yeast leavens the whole batch of dough. 10* I am confident of you in the Lord that you will not take a different view, and that the one who is troubling you will bear the condemnation, whoever he may be. 11*† As for me, brothers, if I am still preaching circumcision, why am I still being persecuted? In that case, the stumbling block of the cross has been abolished. 12† Would that those who are upsetting you might also castrate themselves!
Freedom for Service.† 13*† For you were called for freedom, brothers. But do not use this freedom as an opportunity for the flesh; rather, serve one another through love. 14*† For the whole law is fulfilled in one statement, namely, "You shall love your neighbor as yourself." 15 But if you go on biting and devouring one another, beware that you are not consumed by one another.
16*† I say, then: live by the Spirit and you will certainly not gratify the desire of the flesh. 17* For the flesh has desires against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh; these are opposed to each other, so that you may not do what you want. 18* But if you are guided by the Spirit, you are not under the law.
19*† Now the works of the flesh are obvious: immorality, impurity, licentiousness, 20* idolatry, sorcery, hatreds, rivalry, jealousy, outbursts of fury, acts of selfishness, dissensions, factions, 21† occasions of envy, drinking bouts, orgies, and the like. I warn you, as I warned you before, that those who do such things will not inherit the kingdom of God. 22* In contrast, the fruit of the

5, 1-6: Paul begins the exhortations, continuing through 6, 10, with an appeal to the Galatians to side with freedom instead of slavery (1). He reiterates his message of justification or righteousness by faith instead of law and circumcision (2-5); cf 2, 16; 3, 3. Faith, not circumcision, is what counts (6).

5, 1: Freedom: Paul stresses as the conclusion from the allegory in 4, 21-31 this result of Christ's work for us. It is a principle previously mentioned (2, 4), the responsible use of which v 13 will emphasize.

5, 3: Cf 3, 10-12. Just as those who seek to live by the law must carry out all its contents, so those who have faith and live by promise must stand firm in their freedom (1.13).

5, 6: Cf Rom 2, 25-26; 1 Cor 7, 19; Gal 6, 15. The Greek for faith working through love or "faith expressing itself through love" can also be rendered as "faith energized by (God's) love."

5, 7-12: Paul addresses the Galatians directly: with questions (7.11), a proverb (9), a statement (8), and biting sarcasm (12), seeking to persuade the Galatians to break with those trying to add law and circumcision to Christ as a basis for salvation.

5, 7: Running well: as in an athletic contest; cf 2, 2; 1 Cor 9, 24-26; Phil 2, 16; 3, 14.

5, 8: The one who called you: see the note on 1, 6.

5, 11: Preaching circumcision: this could refer to Paul's pre-Christian period (possibly as a missionary for Judaism); more probably it arose as a charge from opponents, based perhaps on the story in Acts 16, 1-3 that Paul had circumcised Timothy "on account of the Jews." Unlike the Gentile Titus in Gal 2, 3, Timothy was the son of a Jewish mother. The stumbling block of the cross: cf 1 Cor 1, 23.

5, 12: A sarcastic half-wish that their knife would go beyond mere circumcision; cf Phil 3, 2 and the note there.

5, 13-26: In light of another reminder of the freedom of the gospel (13; cf 1), Paul elaborates on what believers are called to do and be: they fulfill the law by love of neighbor (14-15), walking in the Spirit (16-26), as is illustrated by concrete fruit of the Spirit in their lives.

5, 13: Serve . . . through love: cf v 6.

5, 14: Lv 19, 18, emphasized by Jesus (Mt 22, 39; Lk 10, 27); cf Rom 13, 8-10.

5, 16-25: Spirit . . . flesh: cf 3, 3 and the note on Rom 8, 1-13.

5, 19-23: Such lists of vices and virtues (cf Rom 1, 29-31; 1 Cor 6, 9-10) were common in the ancient world. Paul contrasts works of the flesh (19) with fruit (not "works") of the Spirit (22). Not law, but the Spirit, leads to such traits.

5, 21: Occasions of envy: after the Greek word phthonoi, "envies," some manuscripts add a similar sounding one, phonoi, "murders."

Spirit is love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, generosity, faithfulness, 23* gentleness, self-control. Against such there is no law. 24* Now those who belong to Christ [Jesus] have crucified their flesh with its passions and desires. 25* If we live in the Spirit, let us also follow the Spirit. 26* Let us not be conceited, provoking one another, envious of one another.

Life in the Community of Christ.† 1* Brothers, even if a person is caught in some transgression, you who are spiritual should correct that one in a gentle spirit, looking to yourself, so that you also may not be tempted. 2*† Bear one another's burdens, and so you will fulfill the law of Christ. 3* For if anyone thinks he is something when he is nothing, he is deluding himself. 4† Each one must examine his own work, and then he will have reason to boast with regard to himself alone, and not with regard to someone else; 5* for each will bear his own load.

6*† One who is being instructed in the word should share all good things with his instructor. 7 Make no mistake: God is not mocked, for a person will reap only what he sows, 8* because the one who sows for his flesh will reap corruption from the flesh, but the one who sows for the spirit will reap eternal life from the spirit. 9* Let us not grow tired of doing good, for in due time we shall reap our harvest, if we do not give up. 10*† So then, while we have the opportunity, let us do good to all, but especially to those who belong to the family of the faith.

VI: CONCLUSION

Final Appeal.† 11*† See with what large letters I am writing to you in my own hand! 12*† It is those who want to make a good appearance in the flesh who are trying to compel you to have yourselves circumcised, only that they may not be persecuted for the cross of Christ. 13† Not even those having themselves circumcised observe the law themselves; they only want you to be circumcised so that they may boast of your flesh. 14*† But may I never boast except in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, through which the world has been crucified to me, and I to the world. 15*† For neither does circumcision mean anything, nor does uncircumcision, but only a new creation. 16*† Peace and mercy be to all who follow this rule and to the Israel of God.

17*† From now on, let no one make troubles for me; for I bear the marks of Jesus on my body.

18* The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit, brothers. Amen.

6, 1-10: The ethical exhortations begun at 5, 1 continue with a variety of admonitions to the community (brothers see the note on 1, 2). Nearly every sentence contains a separate item of practical advice; the faith and freedom of the gospel underlie each maxim. Tensions and temptation within communal life have previously been addressed in 5, 15.26, and v 1 continues with a case in which a person is caught in some transgression such as those in 5, 19-21; cf 2, 17.

6, 2: The law of Christ: cf Rom 8, 2; 1 Cor 9, 21; Gal 5, 14. The principle of love for others is meant. To bear one another's burdens is to "serve one another through love" (5, 13).

6, 4-5: Self-examination is the cure for self-deception. Compare what you are with what you were before, and give the glory to God; cf Rom 6, 19-22. Load: used elsewhere of a soldier's pack. Correcting one's own conduct avoids burdening others with it.

6, 6: Implies oral instruction in the faith by catechists; these are to be remunerated for their service; cf Rom 15, 27.

6, 10: The family of the faith: the Christian household or church. Doing good has a universal object (to all), but the local community makes specific the reality of those to be served.

6, 11-18: A postscript in Paul's own hand, as was his practice (see 1 Cor 16, 21; 2 Thes 3, 17). Paul summarizes his appeal against his opponents (12-13), then returns to his message of glorying in the cross, not in circumcision, as the means of salvation (14-15; cf 5, 11). A benediction follows at v 16. In the polemical spirit that the attack on his apostleship called forth (1, 11—2, 21), Paul reasserts his missionary credentials (17) before giving a final benediction (18).

6, 11: Large letters: in contrast to the finer hand of the scribe who wrote the letter up to this point. The larger Greek letters make Paul's message even more emphatic. Some find a hint of poor eyesight on Paul's part. See the note on 4, 13.

6, 12-15: The Jewish Christian opponents wished not to be persecuted, possibly by Jews. But since Judaism seems to have had a privileged status as a religion in the Roman empire, circumcised Christians might, if taken as Jews, thereby avoid persecution from the Romans. In any case, Paul instead stresses conformity with the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ; cf 2, 19-21; 5, 11.

6, 13: Those having themselves circumcised: other manuscripts read, "those who have had themselves circumcised."

6, 14: Through which: or "through whom."

6, 15: New creation: or "new creature"; cf 2 Cor 5, 17.

6, 16: This rule: the principle in vv 14 and 15. The Israel of God: while the church may be meant (the phrase can be translated "to all who follow this rule, even the Israel of God" cf 10; 1 Cor 10, 18), the reference may also be to God's ancient people, Israel; cf Pss 125, 5; 128, 6.

6, 17: The marks of Jesus: slaves were often branded by marks (stigmata) burned into their flesh to show to whom they belonged; so also were devotees of pagan gods. Paul implies that instead of outdated circumcision, his body bears the scars of his apostolic labors (2 Cor 11, 22-31), such as floggings (Acts 16, 22; 2 Cor 11, 25) and stonings (Acts 14, 19), that mark him as belonging to the Christ who suffered (cf Rom 6, 3; 2 Cor 4, 10; Col 1, 24) and will protect his own.

The Letter to the

EPHESIANS

Ephesians is the great Pauline letter about the church. It deals, however, not so much with a congregation in the city of Ephesus in Asia Minor as with the worldwide church, the head of which is Christ (4, 15), the purpose of which is to be the instrument for making God's plan of salvation known throughout the universe (3, 9-10). Yet this ecclesiology is anchored in God's saving love, shown in Jesus Christ (2, 4-10), and the whole of redemption is rooted in the plan and accomplishment of the triune God (1, 3-14). The language is often that of doxology (1, 3-14) and prayer (cf 1, 15-23; 3, 14-19), indeed of liturgy and hymns (3, 20-21; 5, 14).

The majestic chapters of Ephesians emphasize the unity in the church of Christ that has come about for both Jews and Gentiles within God's household (1, 15—2, 22, especially 2, 11-22) and indeed the "seven unities" of church, Spirit, hope; one Lord, faith, and baptism; and the one God (4, 4-6). Yet the concern is not with the church for its own sake but rather as the means for mission in the world (3, 1—4, 24). The gifts Christ gives its members are to lead to growth and renewal (4, 7-24). Ethical admonition is not lacking either; all aspects of human life and relationships are illumined by the light of Christ (4, 25—6, 20).

The letter is seemingly addressed by Paul to Christians in Ephesus (1, 1), a place where the apostle labored for well over two years (Acts 19, 10). Yet there is a curiously impersonal tone to the writing for a community with which Paul was so intimately acquainted (cf 3, 2 and 4, 21). There are no personal greetings (cf 6, 23). More significantly, important early manuscripts omit the words "in Ephesus" (see the note on 1, 1). Many therefore regard the letter as an encyclical or "circular letter" sent to a number of churches in Asia Minor, the addressees to be designated in each place by its bearer, Tychicus (6, 21-22). Others think that Ephesians is the letter referred to in Colossians 4, 16 as "to the Laodiceans."

Paul, who is designated as the sole author at 1, 1, is described in almost unparalleled terms with regard to the significant role he has in God's plan for bringing the Gentiles to faith in Christ (3, 1-12). Yet at the time of writing he is clearly in prison (3, 1; 4, 1; 6, 20), suffering afflictions (3, 13). Traditionally this "Captivity Epistle" has, along with Colossians, Philippians, and Philemon, been dated to an imprisonment in Rome, likely in A.D. 61-63. Others appeal to an earlier imprisonment, perhaps in Caesarea (Acts 23, 27—27, 2). Since the early nineteenth century, however, much of critical scholarship has considered the letter's style and use of words (especially when compared with Colossians), its concept of the church, and other points of doctrine put forward by the writer as grounds for serious doubt about authorship by Paul. The letter may then be the work of a secretary writing at the apostle's direction or of a later disciple who sought to develop Paul's ideas for a new situation around A.D. 80-100.

The principal divisions of the Letter to the Ephesians are the following:

- I: Address (1, 1-14)
- II: Unity of the Church in Christ (1, 15—2, 22)
- III: World Mission of the Church (3, 1—4, 24)
- IV: Daily Conduct, an Expression of Unity (4, 25—6, 20)
- V: Conclusion (6, 21-24)

I: ADDRESS

CHAPTER 1

Greeting.† [1]† Paul, an apostle of Christ Jesus by the will of God, to the holy ones who are [in Ephesus] faithful in Christ Jesus: [2] grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

The Father's Plan of Salvation.† [3]† Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who has blessed us in Christ with every spiritual blessing in the heavens, [4] as he chose us in him, before the foundation of the world, to be holy and without blemish before him. In love [5]* he destined us for adoption to himself through Jesus Christ, in accord with the favor of his will, [6]* for the praise of the glory of his grace that he granted us in the beloved.

Fulfillment through Christ. [7]* In him we have redemption by his blood, the forgiveness of transgressions, in accord with the riches of his grace [8]* that he lavished upon us. In all wisdom and insight, [9]† he has made known to us the mystery of his will in accord with his favor that he set forth in him [10] as a plan for the fullness of times, to sum up all things in Christ, in heaven and on earth.

Inheritance through the Spirit. [11]* In him we were also chosen, destined in accord with the purpose of the one who accomplishes all things according to the intention of his will, [12]† so that we might exist for the praise of his glory, we who first hoped in Christ. [13]† In him you also, who have heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation, and have believed in him, were sealed with the promised holy Spirit, [14]† which is the first installment of our inheritance toward redemption as God's possession, to the praise of his glory.

II: UNITY OF THE CHURCH IN CHRIST

The Church as Christ's Body.† [15]† Therefore, I, too, hearing of your faith in the Lord Jesus and of your love for all the holy ones, [16] do not cease giving thanks for you, remembering you in my prayers, [17]* that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give you a spirit of wisdom and revelation resulting in knowledge of him. [18]* May the eyes of [your] hearts be enlightened, that you may know

1, 1-2: For the epistolary form used at the beginning of letters, see the note on Rom 1, 1-7. Twenty-two of the thirty Greek words in vv 1-2 also occur in Col 1, 1-2.

1, 1: [In Ephesus]: the phrase is lacking in important early witnesses such as P^{46} (3rd cent.), and Sinaiticus and Vaticanus (4th cent.), appearing in the latter two as a fifth-century addition. Basil and Origen mention its absence from manuscripts. See Introduction. Without the phrase, the Greek can be rendered, as in Col 1, 2, "to the holy ones and faithful brothers in Christ."

1, 3-14: While a Pauline letter usually continues after the greeting with a prayer of thanksgiving, as in 15-23 below, Ephesians first inserts a blessing of God for the blessings Christians have experienced, as in 2 Cor 1, 3-4 and 1 Pt 1, 3-12. The blessing here, akin to a Jewish berakah, is rich in images almost certainly drawn from hymns and liturgy. Many ideas here are also found in Col 1, 3-23. Certain phrases are frequently repeated, such as in Christ (3.10.12) or in him (4.7.9.11.13) or in the Beloved (6) and (for) the praise of (his) glory (6.12.14). Some terms like chose (4) and destined (5) reflect Old Testament theology (Dt 7, 7; 9, 4-6; 23, 5) or Pauline themes (redemption, 7.14; grace, 6.7) or specific emphases in Col (forgiveness, Col 1, 14).

A triadic structure is discernible in vv 3-14: God the Father (3-6.8.11), Christ (3.5.7-10.12), and the Spirit (13-14). The spiritual blessings Christians have received through Christ (3) are gratefully enumerated: the call to holiness (4; cf Col 1, 22); the gift of divine adoption establishing a unique spiritual relationship with God the Father through Christ (5; cf Gal 4, 5); liberation from sin through Christ's sacrificial death (7); revelation of God's plan of salvation in Christ (9; cf 3, 3-4; Rom 16, 25); the gift of election and faith in Christ bestowed upon Jewish Christians (see the note on 12, we who first hoped in Christ); and finally, the same gift granted to Gentiles (13, you also). In the Christ-centered faith and existence of the Christian communities the apostle sees the predetermined plan of God to bring all creation under the final rule of Christ (4-5.9-10) being made known (9) and carried through, to God's glory (6.12.14).

1, 9: Mystery: as in Rom 16, 25; Col 1, 26.27 and elsewhere, a secret of God now revealed in the plan to save and sum up all things in Christ (10); cf 3, 3-6.

1, 12: We who first hoped: probably Jewish Christians (contrast 13, you, the Gentiles); possibly the people of Israel, "we who already enjoyed the hope of Christ," or perhaps present hope in contrast to future redemption (cf 14).

1, 13: Sealed: by God, in baptism; cf 4, 30; 2 Cor 1, 22.

1, 14: First installment: down payment by God on full salvation, as at 2 Cor 1, 22.

1, 15-23: See the note on Rom 1, 8 for the thanksgiving form in a letter. Much of the content parallels thoughts in Col 1, 3-20. The prayer moves from God and Christ (17.20-21) to the Ephesians (17-19) and the church (22-23). Paul asks that the blessing imparted by God the Father (3) to the Ephesians will be strengthened in them through the message of the gospel (13.17-19). Those blessings are seen in the context of God's might in establishing the sovereignty of Christ over all other creatures (19-21) and in appointing him head of the church (22-23). For the allusion to angelic spirits in v 21, see Rom 8, 38 and Col 1, 16. Here, as in 1 Cor 15, 24-25 and Col 2, 15, every such principality and power is made subject to Christ.

1, 15: Your faith . . . your love: some manuscripts omit the latter phrase, but cf Col 1, 4.

what is the hope that belongs to his call,
what are the riches of glory in his inheritance among the holy ones, [19]*
and what is the surpassing greatness of his power for us who believe, in accord with the exercise of his great might, [20]* which he worked in Christ, raising him from the dead and seating him at his right hand in the heavens, [21]*
far above every principality, authority, power, and dominion, and every name that is named not only in this age but also in the one to come. [22]* And he put all things beneath his feet and gave him
as head over all things to the church, [23]*† which is his body, the fullness of the one who fills all things in every way.

CHAPTER 2†

Generosity of God's Plan.† [1]† You were dead in your transgressions and sins [2]† in which you once lived following the age of this world, following the ruler of the power of the air, the spirit that is now at work in the disobedient. [3]* All of us once lived among them in the desires of our flesh, following the wishes of the flesh and the impulses, and we were by nature children of wrath, like the rest. [4] But God, who is rich in mercy, because of the great love he had for us, [5]† even when we were dead in our transgressions, brought us to life with Christ (by grace you have been saved), [6] raised us up with him, and seated us with him in the heavens in Christ Jesus, [7]* that in the ages to come he might show the immeasurable riches of his grace in his kindness to us in Christ Jesus. [8]* For by grace you have been saved through faith, and this is not from you; it is the gift of God; [9]* it is not from works, so no one may boast. [10]* For we are his handiwork, created in Christ Jesus for the good works that God has prepared in advance, that we should live in them.

One in Christ.† [11] Therefore, remember that at one time you, Gentiles in the flesh, called the uncircumcision by those called the circumcision, which is done in the flesh by human hands, [12]† were at that time without Christ, alienated from the community of Israel and strangers to the covenants of promise, without hope and without God in the world. [13] But now in Christ Jesus you who once were far off have become near by the blood of Christ.

†1, 23: His body: the church (22): cf the note on Col 1, 18. Only in Eph and Col is Christ the head of the body, in contrast to the view in 1 Cor 12 and Rom 12, 4-8 where Christ is equated with the entire body or community. Fullness: see the note on Col 1, 19. Some take the one who fills as God, others as Christ (cf 4, 10). If in Christ "dwells the fullness of the deity bodily" (Col 2, 9), then, as God "fills" Christ, Christ in turn fills the church and the believer (3, 19; 5, 18). But the difficult phrases here may also allow the church to be viewed as the "complement" of Christ who is "being filled" as God's plan for the universe is carried out through the church (cf 3, 9-10).

2, 1-22: The gospel of salvation (1, 13) that God worked in Christ (1, 20) is reiterated in terms of what God's great love (4), expressed in Christ, means for us. The passage sometimes addresses you, Gentiles (1-2.8.11-13.19.22), but other times speaks of all of us who believe (3-7.10.14.18). In urging people to remember their grim past when they were dead in sins (1-3.11-12) and what they are now in Christ (4-10.13), the author sees both Jew and Gentile reconciled with God, now one new person, a new humanity, one body, the household of God, a temple and dwelling place of God's Spirit (15-16.19-22). The presentation falls into two parts, the second stressing more the meaning for the church.

2, 1-10: The recipients of Paul's letter have experienced, in their redemption from transgressions and sins, the effect of Christ's supremacy over the power of the devil (1-2; cf 6, 11-12), who rules not from the netherworld but from the air between God in heaven and human beings on earth. Both Jew and Gentile have experienced, through Christ, God's free gift of salvation that already marks them for a future heavenly destiny (3-7). The language dead, raised us up, and seated us . . . in the heavens closely parallels Jesus' own passion and Easter experience. The terms in vv 8-9 describe salvation in the way Paul elsewhere speaks of justification: by grace, through faith, the gift of God, not from works; cf Gal 2, 16-21; Rom 3, 24-26. Christians are a newly created people in Christ, fashioned by God for a life of goodness (10).

2, 1-7: These verses comprise one long sentence in Greek, the main verb coming in v 5, God brought us to life, the object you/us dead in . . . transgressions being repeated in 1 and 5; cf Col 2, 13.

2, 2: Age of this world: or "aeon," a term found in gnostic thought, possibly synonymous with the rulers of this world, but also reflecting the Jewish idea of "two ages," this present evil age and "the age to come"; cf 1 Cor 3, 19; 5, 10; 7, 31; Gal 1, 4; Ti 2, 12. The disobedient: literally, "the sons of disobedience," a Semitism as at Is 30, 9.

2, 5: Our relation through baptism with Christ, the risen Lord, is depicted in terms of realized eschatology, as already exaltation, though v 7 brings in the future aspect too.

2, 11-22: The Gentiles lacked Israel's messianic expectation, lacked the various covenants God made with Israel, lacked hope of salvation and knowledge of the true God (11-12); but through Christ all these religious barriers between Jew and Gentile have been transcended (13-14) by the abolition of the Mosaic covenant-law (15) for the sake of uniting Jew and Gentile into a single religious community (15-16), imbued with the same holy Spirit and worshiping the same Father (18). The Gentiles are now included in God's household (19) as it arises upon the foundation of apostles assisted by those endowed with the prophetic gift (3, 5), the preachers of Christ (20; cf 1 Cor 12, 28). With Christ as the capstone (20; cf Is 28, 16; Mt 21, 42), they are being built into the holy temple of God's people where the divine presence dwells (21-22).

2, 12: The community of Israel: or "commonwealth"; cf 4, 18. The covenants: cf Rom 9, 4: with Abraham, with Moses, with David.

14*† For he is our peace, he who made both one and broke down the dividing wall of enmity, through his flesh, 15*† abolishing the law with its commandments and legal claims, that he might create in himself one new person in place of the two, thus establishing peace, 16* and might reconcile both with God, in one body, through the cross, putting that enmity to death by it.
17* He came and preached peace to you who were far off and peace to those who were near, 18* for through him we both have access in one Spirit to the Father.
19* So then you are no longer strangers and sojourners, but you are fellow citizens with the holy ones and members of the household of God, 20*† built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, with Christ Jesus himself as the capstone. 21* Through him the whole structure is held together and grows into a temple sacred in the Lord; 22* in him you also are being built together into a dwelling place of God in the Spirit.

CHAPTER 3

Commission to Preach God's Plan.† 1*† Because of this, I, Paul, a prisoner of Christ [Jesus] for you Gentiles—2*† if, as I suppose, you have heard of the stewardship of God's grace that was given to me for your benefit, 3*† [namely, that] the mystery was made known to me by revelation, as I have written briefly earlier. 4 When you read this you can understand my insight into the mystery of Christ, 5* which was not made known to human beings in other generations as it has now been revealed to his holy apostles and prophets by the Spirit, 6* that the Gentiles are coheirs, members of the same body, and copartners in the promise in Christ Jesus through the gospel.
7* Of this I became a minister by the gift of God's grace that was granted me
in accord with the exercise of his power.
8* To me, the very least of all the holy ones, this grace was given, to preach to the Gentiles the inscrutable riches of Christ, 9*† and to bring to light [for all]
what is the plan of the mystery hidden from ages past in God who created all things, 10*† so that the manifold wisdom of God might now be made known through the church to the principalities and authorities in the heavens. 11 This was according to the eternal purpose that he accomplished in Christ Jesus our Lord, 12* in whom we have boldness of speech and confidence of access through faith in him. 13* So I ask you not to lose heart over my afflictions for you; this is your glory.

Prayer for the Readers.† 14† For this reason I kneel before the Father, 15 from whom every family in heaven and on earth is named, 16* that he may

2, 14-16: The elaborate imagery here combines pictures of Christ as our peace (Is 9, 5), his crucifixion, the ending of the Mosaic law (cf Col 2, 14), reconciliation (2 Cor 5, 18-21), and the destruction of the dividing wall such as kept people from God in the temple or a barrier in the heavens.

2, 15: One new person: a corporate body, the Christian community, made up of Jews and Gentiles, replacing ancient divisions; cf Rom 1, 16.

2, 20: Capstone: the Greek can also mean cornerstone or keystone.

3, 1-13: Paul reflects on his mission to the Gentiles. He alludes to his call and appointment to the apostolic office (2-3) and how his insight through revelation, as well as that of the other apostles and charismatic prophets in the church (4-5), has deepened understanding of God's plan of salvation in Christ. Paul is the special herald (7) of a new promise to the Gentiles (6): that the divine plan includes them in the spiritual benefits promised to Israel. Not only is this unique apostolic role his; Paul also has been given the task of explaining to all the divine plan of salvation (8-9), once hidden. Through the church, God's plan to save through Christ is becoming manifest to angelic beings (10; cf 1, 21), in accord with God's purpose (11). The fulfillment of the plan in Christ gives the whole church more confidence through faith in God (12). The readers of this letter are also thereby encouraged to greater confidence despite Paul's imprisonment (13).

3, 1: A prisoner of Christ: see Introduction. Paul abruptly departs from his train of thought at the end of v 1, leaving an incomplete sentence.

3, 2: Stewardship: the Greek is the same term employed at 1, 10 for the plan that God administers (Col 1, 25) and in which Paul plays a key role.

3, 3-4: The mystery: God's resolve to deliver Gentiles along with Israel through Christ; cf the notes on 1, 10; 3, 9.

3, 9: [For all]: while some think this phrase was added so as to yield the sense "to enlighten all about the plan . . . ," it is more likely that some manuscripts and Fathers omitted it accidentally or to avoid the idea that all conflicted with Paul's assignment to preach to the Gentiles (8) specifically.

3, 10: Principalities and authorities: see the note on 1, 15-23 regarding v 21.

3, 14-21: The apostle prays that those he is addressing may, like the rest of the church, deepen their understanding of God's plan of salvation in Christ. It is a plan that affects the whole universe (15) with the breadth and length and height and depth of God's love in Christ (18) or possibly the universe in all its dimensions. The apostle prays that they may perceive the redemptive love of Christ for them and be completely immersed in the fullness of God (19). The prayer concludes with a doxology to God (20-21).

3, 14-15: Every family: in the Greek there is wordplay on the word for the Father (patra, patēr). The phrase could also mean "God's whole family" (cf 2, 21).

grant you in accord with the riches of his glory to be strengthened with power through his Spirit in the inner self, [17]* and that Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith; that you, rooted and grounded in love, [18]* may have strength to comprehend with all the holy ones what is the breadth and length and height and depth, [19]* and to know the love of Christ
that surpasses knowledge, so that you may be filled with all the fullness of God.

[20]* Now to him who is able to accomplish far more than all we ask or imagine, by the power at work within us, [21] to him be glory in the church and in Christ Jesus to all generations, forever and ever. Amen.

CHAPTER 4

Unity in the Body.† [1]* I, then, a prisoner for the Lord, urge you to live in a manner worthy of the call you have received, [2]* with all humility and gentleness, with patience, bearing with one another through love, [3]* striving to preserve the unity of the spirit through the bond of peace: [4]† one body and one Spirit, as you were also called to the one hope of your call; [5] one Lord, one faith, one baptism; [6]* one God and Father of all, who is over all and through all and in all.

Diversity of Gifts. [7]* But grace was given to each of us according to the measure of Christ's gift. [8]*† Therefore,
it says:

> "He ascended on high and took > prisoners captive;
> he gave gifts to men."

[9] What does "he ascended" mean except that he also descended into the lower [regions] of the earth? [10] The one who descended is also the one who ascended far above all the heavens, that he might fill all things.

[11]*† And he gave some as apostles,
others as prophets, others as evangelists, others as pastors and teachers, [12]† to equip the holy ones for the work of ministry, for building up the body of Christ, [13]† until we all attain to the unity of faith and knowledge of the Son of God, to mature manhood, to the extent of the full stature of Christ, [14] so that we may no longer be infants, tossed by waves and swept along by every wind of teaching arising from human trickery, from their cunning in the interests of deceitful scheming.
[15]† Rather, living the truth in love, we should grow in every way into him who is the head, Christ, [16] from whom the whole body, joined and held together by every supporting ligament, with the proper functioning of each part, brings about the body's growth and builds itself up in love.

Renewal in Christ.† [17]* So I declare and testify in the Lord that you must no longer live as the Gentiles do, in the futility of their minds; [18]* darkened in understanding, alienated from the life

4, 1-16: A general plea for unity in the church. Christians have been fashioned through the Spirit into a single harmonious religious community (one body, 4.12; cf 16), belonging to a single Lord (in contrast to the many gods of the pagan world), and by one way of salvation through faith, brought out especially by the significance of baptism (1-6; cf Rom 6, 1-11). But Christian unity is more than adherence to a common belief. It is manifested in the exalted Christ's gifts to individuals to serve so as to make the community more Christlike (11-16). This teaching on Christ as the source of the gifts is introduced in v 8 by a citation of Ps 68, 18, which depicts Yahweh triumphantly leading Israel to salvation in Jerusalem. It is here understood of Christ, ascending above all the heavens, the head of the church; through his redemptive death, resurrection, and ascension he has become the source of the church's spiritual gifts. The "descent" of Christ (9-10) refers more probably to the incarnation (cf Phil 2, 6-8) than to Christ's presence after his death in the world of the dead (cf 1 Pt 3, 19).

4, 4-6: The "seven unities" (church, Spirit, hope; Lord, faith in Christ [1, 13], baptism; one God) reflect the triune structure of later creeds in reverse.

4, 8-10: While the emphasis is on an ascension and gift-giving by Christ, there is also a reference in taking prisoners captive to the aeons and powers mentioned at 1, 21; 2, 2; 3, 10; and 6, 12.

4, 11: Concerning this list of ministers, cf 1 Cor 12, 28 and Rom 12, 6-8. Evangelists: missionary preachers (cf Acts 21, 8 and 2 Tm 4, 5), not those who wrote gospels. Pastors and teachers: a single group in the Greek, shepherding congregations.

4, 12: The ministerial leaders in v 11 are to equip the whole people of God for their work of ministry.

4, 13: Mature manhood: literally, "a perfect man" (cf Col 1, 28), possibly the "one new person" of 2, 15, though there anthrôpos suggests humanity, while here anêr is the term for male. This personage becomes visible in the church's growing to its fullness in the unity of those who believe in Christ.

4, 15-16: The head, Christ: cf Col 1, 18 and contrast 1 Cor 12, 12-27 and Rom 12, 4-5 where Christ is identified with the whole body, including the head. The imagery may derive from ancient views in medicine, the head coordinating and caring for the body, each ligament (perhaps the ministers of v 11) supporting the whole. But as at 2, 19-22, where the temple is depicted as a growing organism, there may also be the idea here of growing toward the capstone, Christ.

4, 17-24: Paul begins to indicate how the new life in Christ contrasts with the Gentiles' old way of existence. Literally, the old self (22) and the new self (24) are "the old man" and "the new man" (anthrópos, person), as at 2, 15; cf the note on 4, 13.

of God because of their ignorance, because of their hardness of heart, [19]* they have become callous and have handed themselves over to licentiousness for the practice of every kind of impurity to excess. [20] That is not how you learned Christ, [21] assuming that you have heard of him and were taught in him, as truth is in Jesus, [22]* that you should put away the old self of your former way of life, corrupted through deceitful desires, [23]* and be renewed in the spirit of your minds, [24]*† and put on the new self, created in God's way in righteousness and holiness of truth.

IV: DAILY CONDUCT, AN EXPRESSION OF UNITY†

Rules for the New Life. [25]* Therefore, putting away falsehood, speak the truth, each one to his neighbor, for we are members one of another. [26]† Be angry but do not sin; do not let the sun set on your anger, [27] and do not leave room for the devil. [28]† The thief must no longer steal, but rather labor, doing honest work with his [own] hands, so that he may have something to share with one in need. [29] No foul language should come out of your mouths, but only such as is good for needed edification, that it may impart grace to those who hear. [30]† And do not grieve the holy Spirit of God, with which you were sealed for the day of redemption. [31]* All bitterness, fury, anger, shouting, and reviling must be removed from you, along with all malice. [32]* [And] be kind to one another, compassionate, forgiving one another as God has forgiven you in Christ.

[1]† So be imitators of God, as beloved children, [2] and live in love, as Christ loved us and handed himself over for us as a sacrificial offering to God for a fragrant aroma. [3]* Immorality or any impurity or greed must not even be mentioned among you, as is fitting among holy ones, [4]* no obscenity or silly or suggestive talk, which is out of place, but instead, thanksgiving. [5]* Be sure of this, that no immoral or impure or greedy person, that is, an idolater, has any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God.

Duty to Live in the Light. [6]† Let no one deceive you with empty arguments, for because of these things the wrath of God is coming upon the disobedient. [7] So do not be associated with them. [8] For you were once darkness, but now you are light in the Lord. Live as children of light, [9]* for light produces every kind of goodness and righteousness and truth. [10]* Try to learn what is pleasing to the Lord. [11]* Take no part in the fruitless works of darkness; rather expose them, [12] for it is shameful even to mention the things done by them in secret; [13]* but everything exposed by the light becomes visible, [14]*† for everything that becomes visible is light. Therefore, it says:

> "Awake, O sleeper,
> and arise from the dead,
> and Christ will give you light."

[15]† Watch carefully then how you live, not as foolish persons but as wise, [16] making the most of the opportunity, because the days are evil. [17] Therefore, do not continue in ignorance, but try to understand what is the will of the Lord. [18] And do not get drunk on wine, in which lies debauchery, but be filled with the Spirit, [19]* addressing one another [in] psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and playing to the Lord in your hearts, [20]* giving thanks always and for everything in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ to God the Father.

Wives and Husbands.† 21*† Be subordinate to one another out of reverence for Christ. 22* Wives should be subordinate to their husbands as to the Lord. 23* For the husband is head of his wife just as Christ is head of the church, he himself the savior of the body. 24 As the church is subordinate to Christ, so wives should be subordinate to their husbands in everything. 25* Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ loved the church and handed himself over for her 26* to sanctify her, cleansing her by the bath of water with the word, 27* that he might present to himself the church in splendor, without spot or wrinkle or any such thing, that she might be holy and without blemish. 28 So [also] husbands should love their wives as their own bodies. He who loves his wife loves himself. 29 For no one hates his own flesh but rather nourishes and cherishes it, even as Christ does the church, 30* because we are members of his body.

31* "For this reason a man shall leave [his] father and [his] mother and be joined to his wife, and the two shall become one flesh."

32* This is a great mystery, but I speak in reference to Christ and the church. 33 In any case, each one of you should love his wife as himself, and the wife should respect her husband.

CHAPTER 6

Children and Parents. 1* Children, obey your parents [in the Lord], for this is right. 2* "Honor your father and mother." This is the first commandment with a promise, 3 "that it may go well with you and that you may have a long life on earth." 4* Fathers, do not provoke your children to anger, but bring them up with the training and instruction of the Lord.

Slaves and Masters. 5* Slaves, be obedient to your human masters with fear and trembling, in sincerity of heart, as to Christ, 6* not only when being watched, as currying favor, but as slaves of Christ, doing the will of God from the heart, 7 willingly serving the Lord and not human beings, 8 knowing that each will be requited from the Lord for whatever good he does, whether he is slave or free. 9* Masters, act in the same way towards them, and stop bullying, knowing that both they and you have a Master in heaven and that with him there is no partiality.

Battle against Evil.† 10 Finally, draw your strength from the Lord and from his mighty power. 11* Put on the armor of God so that you may be able to stand firm against the tactics of the devil. 12* For our struggle is not with flesh and blood but with the principalities, with the powers, with the world rulers of this present darkness, with the evil spirits in the heavens. 13* Therefore, put on the armor of God, that you may be able to resist on the evil day and, having done everything, to hold your ground. 14* So stand fast with your loins girded in truth, clothed with righteousness as a breastplate, 15* and your feet shod in readiness for the gospel of peace. 16* In all circumstances, hold faith as a shield, to quench all [the] flaming arrows of the evil one. 17* And take the helmet of salvation and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God.

Constant Prayer. 18* With all prayer and supplication, pray at every opportunity in the Spirit. To that end, be watchful with all perseverance and sup-

17: Is 59, 17; 1 Thes 5, 8.

† 5, 21—6, 9: Cf the notes on Col 3, 18—4, 1 and 1 Pt 2, 18—3, 7 for a similar listing of household duties where the inferior is admonished first (wives, 5, 22; children, 6, 1; slaves, 6, 5), then the superior (husbands, 5, 25; fathers, 6, 4; masters, 6, 9). Paul varies this pattern by an emphasis on mutuality (see 5, 20); use of Old Testament material about father and mother in 6, 2; the judgment to come for slave-owners (you have a Master in heaven, 6, 9); and above all the initial principle of subordination to one another under Christ, thus effectively undermining exclusive claims to domination by one party. Into the section on wives and husbands an elaborate teaching on Christ and the church has been woven (5, 22-33).

5, 21-33: The apostle exhorts married Christians to a strong mutual love. Holding with Gn 2, 24 that marriage is a divine institution (31), Paul sees Christian marriage as taking on a new meaning symbolic of the intimate relationship of love between Christ and the church. The wife should serve her husband in the same spirit as that of the church's service to Christ (22.24), and the husband should care for his wife with the devotion of Christ to the church (25-30). Paul gives to the Genesis passage its highest meaning in the light of the union of Christ and the church, of which Christlike loyalty and devotion in Christian marriage are a clear reflection (31-33).

6, 10-20: A general exhortation to courage and prayer. Drawing upon the imagery and ideas of Is 11, 5; 59, 16-17; and Wis 5, 17-23, Paul describes the Christian in terms of the dress and equipment of Roman soldiers. He observes, however, that the Christian's readiness for combat is not directed against human beings but against the spiritual powers of evil (10-17; cf 1, 21; 2, 2; 3, 10). Unique importance is placed upon prayer (18-20).

plication for all the holy ones [19]* and also for me, that speech may be given me to open my mouth, to make known with boldness the mystery of the gospel [20]* for which I am an ambassador in chains, so that I may have the courage to speak as I must.

V: CONCLUSION

A Final Message.† [21]* So that you also may have news of me and of what I am doing, Tychicus, my beloved brother and trustworthy minister in the Lord, will tell you everything. [22]* I am sending him to you for this very purpose, so that you may know about us and that he may encourage your hearts.

[23] Peace be to the brothers, and love with faith, from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. [24]* Grace be with all who love our Lord Jesus Christ in immortality.

The Letter to the

PHILIPPIANS

Philippi, in northeastern Greece, was a city of some importance in the Roman province of Macedonia. Lying on the great road from the Adriatic coast to Byzantium, the Via Egnatia, and in the midst of rich agricultural plains near the gold deposits of Mt. Pangaeus, it was in Paul's day a Roman town (Acts 16, 21), with a Greek-Macedonian population and a small group of Jews (see Acts 16, 13). Originally founded in the sixth century B.C. as Krenides by the Thracians, the town was taken over after 360 B.C. by Philip II of Macedon, the father of Alexander the Great, and was renamed for himself, "Philip's City." The area became Roman in the second century B.C. On the plains near Philippi in October 42 B.C., Antony and Octavian decisively defeated the forces of Brutus and Cassius, the slayers of Julius Caesar. Octavian (Augustus) later made Philippi a Roman colony and settled many veterans of the Roman armies there.

Paul, according to Acts (16, 9-40), established at Philippi the first Christian community in Europe. He came to Philippi, via its harbor town of Neapolis (modern Kavalla), on his second missionary journey, probably in A.D. 49 or 50, accompanied by Silas and Timothy (Acts 15, 40; 16, 3; cf Phil 1, 1) and Luke, if he is to be included in the "we" references of Acts 16, 10-17. The Acts account tells of the conversion of a business woman, Lydia; the exorcism of a slave girl; and, after an earthquake, while Paul and Silas were imprisoned in Philippi, the faith and baptism of a jailer and his family. None of these persons, however, is directly mentioned in Philippians (cf the notes on 4, 2 and 4, 3). Acts 16 concludes its account by describing how Paul (and Silas), asked by the magistrates to leave Philippi, went on to Thessalonica (Acts 17, 1-10), where several times his loyal Philippians continued to support him with financial aid (Phil 4, 16). Later, Paul may have passed through Philippi on his way from Ephesus to Greece (Acts 20, 1-2), and he definitely stopped there on his fateful trip to Jerusalem (Acts 20, 6).

Paul's letter to the Christians at Philippi was written while he was in a prison somewhere (1, 7.13.14.17), indeed in danger of death (1, 20-23). Although under guard for preaching Christ, Paul rejoices at the continuing progress of the gospel (1, 12-26) and expresses gratitude for the Philippians' renewed concern and help in an expression of thanks most clearly found at 4, 10-20. Much of the letter is devoted to instruction about unity and humility within the Christian community at Philippi (1, 27—2, 18) and exhortations to growth, joy, and peace in their life together (4, 1-9). The letter seems to be drawing to a close at the end of what we number as ch 2, as Paul reports the plans of his helper Timothy and of Epaphroditus (whom the Philippians had sent to aid Paul) to come to Philippi (2, 19—3, 1), and even Paul's own expectation that he will go free and come to Philippi (1, 25-26; 2, 24). Yet quite abruptly at 3, 2, Paul erupts into warnings against false teachers who threaten to impose on the Philippians the burdens of the Mosaic law, including circumcision. The section that follows, 3, 2-21, is a vigorous attack on these Judaizers (cf Gal 2, 11—3, 29) or Jewish Christian teachers (cf 2 Cor 11, 12-23), giving us insights into Paul's own life story (3, 4-6) and into the doctrine of justification, the Christian life, and ultimate hope (3, 7-21).

The location of Paul's imprisonment when he wrote to the Philippians, and thus the date of the letter, are uncertain. The traditional view has been that it stems from Paul's confinement in Rome, between A.D. 59 and 63 (cf Acts 28, 14-31). One modern view suggests the period when he was imprisoned at Caesarea, on the coast of Palestine, A.D. 57 or 58 (Acts 23, 23—26, 32); another suggests Corinth (cf 2 Cor 11, 9). Much recent scholarship favors Ephesus, around A.D. 55, a situation referred to in 2 Cor 1, 8 concerning "the affliction that came to us" in Asia Minor (cf also 1 Cor 15, 32). The reference at 1, 13 to the "praetorium" (cf also 4, 22) can be understood to mean the imperial guard or government house at Ephesus (or Caesarea), or the praetorian camp in Rome. Involved in a decision are the several journeys back and forth between Philippi and wherever Paul is imprisoned, mentioned in the letter (2, 25-28; 4, 14); this factor causes many to prefer Ephesus because of its proximity to Philippi. The Ephesian hypothesis dates the composition of Philippians to the mid-50s when most of Paul's major letters were written.

There is also a likelihood, according to some scholars, that the letter as we have it is a composite from parts of three letters by Paul to the Philippians. Seemingly 4, 10-20 is a brief note of appreciation for help sent through Epaphroditus. The long section from 1, 3 to 3, 1 is then another letter, with news of Paul's imprisonment and reports on Timothy and Epaphroditus (who has fallen ill while with Paul), along with exhortations to the Philippians about Christian conduct; and 3, 2-21 a third communication warning about threats to Philippian Christianity. The other verses in ch 4 and 1, 1-2, are variously assigned by critics to these three underlying letters, which an editor presumably put together to produce a picture of Paul writing earnestly from prison (chs 1-2), facing opponents of the faith (ch 3), and with serene joy advising and thanking his Philippians (ch 4). If all four chapters were originally a unity, then one must assume that a break occurred between the writing of 3, 1 and 3, 2, possibly involving the receipt of bad news from Philippi, and that Paul had some reasons for delaying his words of thanks for the aid brought by Epaphroditus till the end of his letter.

This beautiful letter is rich in insights into Paul's theology and his apostolic love and concern for the gospel and his converts. In Philippians, Paul reveals his human sensitivity and tenderness, his enthusiasm for Christ as the key to life and death (1, 21), and his deep feeling for those in Christ who dwell in Philippi. With them he shares his hopes and convictions, his anxieties and fears, revealing the total confidence in Christ that constitutes faith (3, 8-10). The letter incorporates a hymn about the salvation that God has brought about through Christ (2, 6-11), applied by Paul to the relations of Christians with one another (2, 1-5). Philippians has been termed "the letter of joy" (4, 4.10). It is the rejoicing of faith, based on true understanding of Christ's unique role in the salvation of all who profess his lordship (2, 11; 3, 8-12.14.20-21).

The principal divisions of the Letter to the Philippians are the following:

- I: Address (1, 1-11)
- II: Progress of the Gospel (1, 12-26)
- III: Instructions for the Community (1, 27—2, 18)
- IV: Travel Plans of Paul and His Assistants (2, 19—3, 1)
- V: Polemic: Righteousness and the Goal in Christ (3, 2-21)
- VI: Instructions for the Community (4, 1-9)
- VII: Gratitude for the Philippians' Generosity (4, 10-20)
- VIII: Farewell (4, 21-23)

I: ADDRESS

CHAPTER 1

Greeting.† [1]† Paul and Timothy, slaves of Christ Jesus, to all the holy ones in Christ Jesus who are in Philippi, with the overseers and ministers:
[2]*† grace to you and peace from God
our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Thanksgiving.† [3] I give thanks to my God at every remembrance of you, [4]praying always with joy in my every prayer for all of you, [5]because of your partnership for the gospel from the first day until now. [6]*† I am confident of this,
that the one who began a good work in you will continue to complete it until the day of Christ Jesus. [7]It is right that I should think this way about all of you, because I hold you in my heart, you who are all partners with me in grace, both in my imprisonment and in the defense and confirmation of the gospel. [8]* For God is my witness, how I long for all of you with the affection of Christ Jesus.
[9]* And this is my prayer: that your love may increase ever more and more in knowledge and every kind of perception, [10]* to discern what is of value, so that you may be pure and blameless for the day of Christ, [11]* filled with the fruit of righteousness that comes through Jesus Christ for the glory and praise of God.

II: PROGRESS OF THE GOSPEL†

[12]* I want you to know, brothers, that my situation has turned out rather to advance the gospel, [13]*† so that my imprisonment has become well known in Christ throughout the whole praetorium and to all the rest, [14]† and so that the majority of the brothers, having taken encouragement in the Lord from my imprisonment, dare more than ever to proclaim the word fearlessly.

[15]Of course, some preach Christ from envy and rivalry, others from good will.
[16]The latter act out of love, aware that I am here for the defense of the gospel;
[17]the former proclaim Christ out of selfish ambition, not from pure motives, thinking that they will cause me trouble
in my imprisonment. [18]*† What difference does it make, as long as in every way, whether in pretense or in truth, Christ is being proclaimed? And in that I rejoice.

Indeed I shall continue to rejoice, [19]*† for I know that this will result in

1, 1-2: See the note on Rom 1, 1-7, concerning the greeting.

1, 1: Slaves: Paul usually refers to himself at the start of a letter as an apostle. Here he substitutes a term suggesting the unconditional obligation of himself and Timothy to the service of Christ, probably because, in view of the good relationship with the Philippians, he wishes to stress his status as a co-servant rather than emphasize his apostolic authority. Reference to Timothy is a courtesy: Paul alone writes the letter, as the singular verb throughout shows (3-26), and the reference (2, 19-24) to Timothy in the third person. Overseers: the Greek term episkopos literally means "one who oversees" or "one who supervises," but since the second century it has come to designate the "bishop," the official who heads a local church. In New Testament times this office had not yet developed into the form that it later assumed, though it seems to be well on the way to such development in the Pastorals; see 1 Tm 3, 2 and Ti 1, 7, where it is translated bishop. At Philippi, however (and at Ephesus, according to Acts 20, 28), there was more than one episkopos, and the precise function of these officials is uncertain. In order to distinguish this office from the later stages into which it developed, the term is here translated as overseers. Ministers: the Greek term diakonoi is used frequently in the New Testament to designate "servants," "attendants," or "ministers." Paul refers to himself and to other apostles as "ministers of God" (2 Cor 6, 4) or "ministers of Christ" (2 Cor 11, 23). In the Pastorals (1 Tm 3, 8.12) the diakonos has become an established official in the local church; hence the term is there translated as deacon. The diakonoi at Philippi seem to represent an earlier stage of development of the office; we are uncertain about their precise functions. Hence the term is here translated as ministers. See Rom 16, 1, where Phoebe is described as a diakonos (minister) of the church of Cenchreae.

1, 2: The gifts come from Christ the Lord, not simply through him from the Father; compare the christology in 2, 6-11.

1, 3-11: As in Rom 1, 8-15 and all the Pauline letters except Galatians, a thanksgiving follows, including a direct prayer for the Philippians (9-11); see the note on Rom 1, 8. On their partnership for the gospel (5), cf 29-30; 4, 10-20. Their devotion to the faith and to Paul made them his pride and joy (4, 1). The characteristics thus manifested are evidence of the community's continuing preparation for the Lord's parousia (6.10). Paul's especially warm relationship with the Philippians is suggested here (7.8) as elsewhere in the letter. The eschatology serves to underscore a concern for ethical growth (9-11), which appears throughout the letter.

1, 6: The day of Christ Jesus: the parousia or triumphant return of Christ, when those loyal to him will be with him and share in his eternal glory; cf 10; 2, 16; 3, 20-21; 1 Thes 4, 17; 5, 10; 2 Thes 1, 10; 1 Cor 1, 8.

1, 12-26: The body of the letter begins with an account of Paul's present situation, i.e., his imprisonment (12-13; see Introduction), and then goes on with advice for the Philippians (1, 27—2, 18). The advance of the gospel (12) and the progress of the Philippians in the faith (25) frame what is said.

1, 13: Praetorium: either the praetorian guard in the city where Paul was imprisoned or the governor's official residence in a Roman province (cf Mk 15, 16; Acts 23, 35). See Introduction on possible sites.

1, 14-18: Although Paul is imprisoned, Christians there nonetheless go on preaching Christ. But they do so with varied motives, some with personal hostility toward Paul, others out of personal ambition.

1, 18: Rejoice: a major theme in the letter; see Introduction.

1, 19-25: Paul earnestly debates his prospects of martyrdom or continued missionary labor. While he may long to depart this life and thus be with Christ (23), his overall and final expectation is that he will be delivered from this imprisonment and continue in the service of the Philippians and of others (19.25; 2, 24). In either case, Christ is central (20.21); if to live means Christ for Paul, death means to be united with Christ in a deeper sense.

1, 19: Result in deliverance for me: an echo of Jb 13, 16, hoping that God will turn suffering to ultimate good and deliverance from evil.

deliverance for me through your prayers and support from the Spirit of Jesus Christ. [20]* My eager expectation and hope is that I shall not be put to shame in any way, but that with all boldness, now as always, Christ will be magnified in my body, whether by life or by death. [21]* For to me life is Christ, and death is gain. [22]* If I go on living in the flesh, that means fruitful labor for me. And I do not know which I shall choose. [23]* I am caught between the two. I long to depart this life and be with Christ, [for] that is far better. [24] Yet that I remain [in] the flesh is more necessary for your benefit. [25] And this I know with confidence, that I shall remain and continue in the service of all of you for your progress and joy in the faith, [26] so that your boasting in Christ Jesus may abound on account of me when I come to you again.

III: INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE COMMUNITY

Steadfastness in Faith.† [27]* Only, conduct yourselves in a way worthy of the gospel of Christ, so that, whether I come and see you or am absent, I may hear news of you, that you are standing firm in one spirit, with one mind struggling together for the faith of the gospel, [28] not intimidated in any way by your opponents. This is proof to them of destruction, but of your salvation. And this is God's doing. [29]* For to you has been granted, for the sake of Christ, not only to believe in him but also to suffer for him. [30]*† Yours is the same struggle as you saw in me and now hear about me.

CHAPTER 2

Plea for Unity and Humility.† [1] If there is any encouragement in Christ, any solace in love, any participation in the Spirit, any compassion and mercy, [2]* complete my joy by being of the same mind, with the same love, united in heart, thinking one thing. [3]* Do nothing
out of selfishness or out of vainglory;
rather, humbly regard others as more important than yourselves, [4]* each looking out not for his own interests, but [also] everyone for those of others.

[5]† Have among yourselves the same attitude that is also yours in Christ Jesus,

[6]*† Who, though he was in the form of God,
did not regard equality with God
something to be grasped.
[7]*† Rather, he emptied himself,
taking the form of a slave,
coming in human likeness;
and found human in appearance, [8]*† he humbled himself,
becoming obedient to death,
even death on a cross.
[9]*† Because of this, God greatly exalted him

1, 27-30: Ethical admonition begins at this early point in the letter, emphasizing steadfastness and congregational unity in the face of possible suffering. The opponents (28) are those in Philippi, probably pagans, who oppose the gospel cause. This is proof . . . (28) may refer to the whole outlook and conduct of the Philippians, turning out for their salvation but to the judgment of the opponents (cf 2 Cor 2, 15-16), or possibly the sentence refers to the opinion of the opponents, who hold that the obstinacy of the Christians points to the destruction of such people as defy Roman authority (though in reality, Paul holds, such faithfulness leads to salvation).

1, 30: A reference to Paul's earlier imprisonment in Philippi (Acts 16, 19-24; 1 Thes 2, 2) and to his present confinement.

2, 1-11: The admonition to likemindedness and unity (2-5) is based on the believers' threefold experience with Christ, God's love, and the Spirit. The appeal to humility (3) and to obedience (12) is rooted in christology, specifically in a statement about Christ Jesus (6-11) and his humbling of self and obedience to the point of death (8).

2, 5: Have . . . the same attitude that is also yours in Christ Jesus: or, "that also Christ Jesus had." While it is often held that Christ here functions as a model for moral imitation, it is not the historical Jesus but the entire Christ event that vv 6-11 depict. Therefore, the appeal is to have in relations among yourselves that same relationship you have in Jesus Christ, i.e., serving one another as you serve Christ (4).

2, 6-11: Perhaps an early Christian hymn quoted here by Paul. The short rhythmic lines fall into two parts, vv 6-8 where the subject of every verb is Christ, and vv 9-11 where the subject is God. The general pattern is thus of Christ's humiliation and then exaltation. More precise analyses propose a division into six three-line stanzas (6; 7abc; 7d-8; 9; 10; 11) or into three stanzas (6-7ab; 7cd-8; 9-11). Phrases such as even death on a cross (8c) are considered by some to be additions (by Paul) to the hymn, as are vv 10c and 11c.

2, 6: Either a reference to Christ's preexistence and those aspects of divinity that he was willing to give up in order to serve in human form, or to what the man Jesus refused to grasp at to attain divinity. Many see an allusion to the Genesis story: unlike Adam, Jesus, though . . . in the form of God (Gn 1, 26-27), did not reach out for equality with God, in contrast with the first Adam in Gn 3, 5-6.

2, 7: Taking the form of a slave, coming in human likeness or ". . . taking the form of a slave. // Coming in human likeness, and found human in appearance." While it is common to take vv 6 and 7 as dealing with Christ's preexistence and v 8 with his incarnate life, so that lines 7b and c are parallel, it is also possible to interpret so as to exclude any reference to preexistence (see the note on 2, 6) and to take vv 6-8 as presenting two parallel stanzas about Jesus' human state (6-7b; 7cd-8); in the latter alternative, coming in human likeness begins the second stanza and parallels 6a to some extent.

2, 8: There may be reflected here language about the servant of the Lord, Is 52, 13—53, 12, especially 53, 12.

2, 9: The name: "Lord" (11), revealing the true nature of the one who is named.

and bestowed on him the name
that is above every name, 10*† that at the name of Jesus
every knee should bend,
of those in heaven and on earth
and under the earth, 11*† and every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord,
to the glory of God the Father.

Obedience and Service in the World.† 12*† So then, my beloved, obedient as you have always been, not only when I am present but all the more now when I am absent, work out your salvation with fear and trembling. 13* For God is the one who, for his good purpose, works in you both to desire and to work. 14* Do everything without grumbling or questioning, 15*† that you may be blameless and innocent, children of God without blemish in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation, among whom you shine like lights in the world, 16* as you hold on to the word of life, so that my boast for the day of Christ may be that I did not run in vain or labor in vain. 17*† But, even if I am poured out as a libation upon the sacrificial service of your faith, I rejoice and share my joy with all of you. 18* In the same way you also should rejoice and share your joy with me.

IV: TRAVEL PLANS OF PAUL AND HIS ASSISTANTS†

Timothy and Paul. 19*† I hope, in the Lord Jesus, to send Timothy to you soon, so that I too may be heartened by hearing news of you. 20 For I have no one comparable to him for genuine interest in whatever concerns you. 21* For they all seek their own interests, not those of Jesus Christ. 22 But you know his worth, how as a child with a father he served along with me in the cause of the gospel. 23 He it is, then, whom I hope to send as soon as I see how things go with me, 24† but I am confident in the Lord that I myself will also come soon.

Epaphroditus. 25*† With regard to Epaphroditus, my brother and coworker and fellow soldier, your messenger and minister in my need, I consider it necessary to send him to you. 26 For he has been longing for all of you and was distressed because you heard that he was ill. 27 He was indeed ill, close to death; but God had mercy on him, not just on him but also on me, so that I might not have sorrow upon sorrow. 28 I send him therefore with the greater eagerness, so that, on seeing him, you may rejoice again, and I may have less anxiety. 29* Welcome him then in the Lord with all joy and hold such people in esteem, 30 because for the sake of the work of Christ he came close to death, risking his life to make up for those services to me that you could not perform.

Concluding Admonitions. 1*† Finally, my brothers, rejoice in the Lord. Writing the same things to you is no burden for me but is a safeguard for you.

2, 10-11: Every knee should bend . . . every tongue confess: into this language of Is 45, 23 there has been inserted a reference to the three levels in the universe, according to ancient thought, heaven, earth, under the earth.

2, 11: Jesus Christ is Lord: a common early Christian acclamation; cf 1 Cor 12, 3; Rom 10, 9. But doxology to God the Father is not overlooked here (11c) in the final version of the hymn.

2, 12-18: Paul goes on to draw out further ethical implications for daily life (14-18) from the salvation God works in Christ.

2, 12: Fear and trembling: a common Old Testament expression indicating awe and seriousness in the service of God (cf Ex 15, 16; Jdt 2, 28; Ps 2, 11; Is 19, 16).

2, 15-16: Generation . . . as you hold on to . . . : or ". . . generation. Among them shine like lights in the world because you hold the word of life. . . ."

2, 17: Libation: in ancient religious ritual, the pouring out on the ground of a liquid offering as a sacrifice. Paul means that he may be facing death.

2, 19—3, 1: The plans of Paul and his assistants for future travel are regularly a part of a Pauline letter near its conclusion; cf Rom 15, 22-29; 1 Cor 16, 5-12.

2, 19: Timothy: already known to the Philippians (Acts 16, 1-15; cf 1 Cor 4, 17; 16, 10).

2, 24: I myself will also come soon: cf 1, 19-25 for the significance of this statement.

2, 25: Epaphroditus: sent by the Philippians as their messenger (literally, "apostle") to aid Paul in his imprisonment, he had fallen seriously ill; Paul commends him as he sends him back to Philippi.

3, 1: Finally . . . rejoice: the adverb often signals the close of a letter; cf 4, 8; 2 Cor 13, 11. While the verb could also be translated "good-bye" or "farewell," although it is never so used in Greek epistolography, the theme of joy has been frequent in the letter (1, 18; 2, 2.18); note also 4, 4 and the addition of "always" there as evidence for the meaning "rejoice." To write the same things may refer to what Paul has previously taught in Philippi or to what he has just written or to what follows.

V: POLEMIC: RIGHTEOUSNESS AND THE GOAL IN CHRIST†

Against Legalistic Teachers.† 2*† Beware of the dogs! Beware of the evil-workers! Beware of the mutilation! 3*† For we are the circumcision, we who worship through the Spirit of God, who boast in Christ Jesus and do not put our confidence in flesh, 4* although I myself have grounds for confidence even in the flesh.

Paul's Autobiography. If anyone else thinks he can be confident in flesh, all the more can I. 5*† Circumcised on the eighth day, of the race of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, a Hebrew of Hebrew parentage, in observance of the law a Pharisee, 6* in zeal I persecuted the church, in righteousness based on the law I was blameless.

Righteousness from God. 7*† [But] whatever gains I had, these I have come to consider a loss because of Christ. 8 More than that, I even consider everything as a loss because of the supreme good of knowing Christ Jesus my Lord. For his sake I have accepted the loss of all things and I consider them so much rubbish, that I may gain Christ 9* and be found in him, not having any righteousness of my own based on the law but that which comes through faith in Christ, the righteousness from God, depending on faith 10* to know him and the power of his resurrection and [the] sharing of his sufferings by being conformed to his death, 11* if somehow I may attain the resurrection from the dead.

Forward in Christ.† 12*† It is not that I have already taken hold of it or have already attained perfect maturity, but I continue my pursuit in hope that I may possess it, since I have indeed been taken possession of by Christ [Jesus]. 13 Brothers, I for my part do not consider myself to have taken possession. Just one thing: forgetting what lies behind but straining forward to what lies ahead, 14* I continue my pursuit toward the goal, the prize of God's upward calling, in Christ Jesus. 15 Let us, then, who are "perfectly mature" adopt this attitude. And if you have a different attitude, this too God will reveal to you. 16† Only, with regard to what we have attained, continue on the same course.

Wrong Conduct and Our Goal.† 17*† Join with others in being imitators of me, brothers, and observe those who thus conduct themselves according to the model you have in us. 18* For many, as I have often told you and now tell you even in tears, conduct themselves as enemies of the cross of Christ. 19* Their end is destruction. Their God is their stomach; their glory is in their "shame." Their minds are occupied with earthly things. 20*† But our citizenship is in heaven, and from it we also await a savior, the Lord Jesus Christ.

3, 2-21: An abrupt change in content and tone, either because Paul at this point responds to disturbing news he has just heard about a threat to the faith of the Philippians in the form of false teachers, or because part of another Pauline letter was inserted here; see Introduction. The chapter describes these teachers in strong terms as dogs. The persons meant are evidently different from the rival preachers of 1, 14-18 and the opponents of 1, 28. Since vv 2-4 emphasize Jewish terms like circumcision (2-3.5), some relate them to the "Judaizers" of the Letter to the Galatians. Other phrases make them appear more like the false teachers of 2 Cor 11, 12-15, the evil-workers. The latter part of the chapter depicts the many who are enemies of Christ's cross in terms that may sound more Gentile or even "gnostic" than Jewish (18-19). Accordingly, some see two groups of false teachers in ch 3, others one group characterized by a claim of having attained "perfect maturity" (12-15).

3, 2-11: Paul sets forth the Christian claim, especially using personal, autobiographical terms that are appropriate to the situation. He presents his own experience in coming to know Christ Jesus in terms of righteousness or justification (cf Rom 1, 16-17; 3, 21—5, 11; Gal 2, 5-11), contrasting the righteousness from God through faith and that of one's own based on the law as two exclusive ways of pleasing God.

3, 2: Beware of the mutilation: literally, "incision," an ironic wordplay on "circumcision"; cf Gal 5, 12. There may be an association with the self-inflicted mutilations of the prophets of Baal (1 Kgs 18, 28) and of devotees of Cybele who slashed themselves in religious frenzy.

3, 3: We are the circumcision: the true people of God, seed and offspring of Abraham (Gal 3, 7.29; 6, 15). Spirit of God: some manuscripts read "worship God by the Spirit."

3, 5: Circumcised on the eighth day: as the law required (Gn 17, 12; Lv 12, 3).

3, 7: Loss: his knowledge of Christ led Paul to reassess the ways of truly pleasing and serving God. His reevaluation indicates the profound and lasting effect of his experience of the meaning of Christ on the way to Damascus some twenty years before (Gal 1, 15-16; Acts 9, 1-22).

3, 12-16: To be taken possession of by Christ does not mean that one has already arrived at perfect spiritual maturity. Paul and the Philippians instead press on, trusting in God.

3, 12: Attained perfect maturity: possibly an echo of the concept in the mystery religions of being an initiate, admitted to divine secrets.

3, 16: Some manuscripts add, probably to explain Paul's cryptic phrase, "thinking alike."

3, 17-21: Paul and those who live a life centered in Christ, envisaging both his suffering and resurrection, provide a model that is the opposite of opponents who reject Christ's cross (cf 1 Cor 1, 23).

3, 17: Being imitators of me: not arrogance, but humble simplicity, since all his converts know that Paul is wholly dedicated to imitating Christ (1 Cor 11, 1; cf also Phil 4, 9; 1 Thes 1, 6; 2 Thes 3, 7.9; 1 Cor 4, 6).

3, 20: Citizenship: Christians constitute a colony of heaven, as Philippi was a colonia of Rome (Acts 16, 12). The hope Paul expresses involves the final coming of Christ, not a status already attained, such as the opponents claim.

21* He will change our lowly body to conform with his glorified body by the power that enables him also to bring all things into subjection to himself.

VI: INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE COMMUNITY†

CHAPTER 4

Live in Concord. 1* Therefore, my brothers, whom I love and long for, my joy and crown, in this way stand firm
in the Lord, beloved.
2† I urge Euodia and I urge Syntyche to come to a mutual understanding in the Lord. 3*† Yes, and I ask you also,
my true yokemate, to help them, for they have struggled at my side in promoting the gospel, along with Clement and my other co-workers, whose names are in the book of life.
Joy and Peace. 4*† Rejoice in the Lord always. I shall say it again: rejoice! 5*† Your kindness should be known to all. The Lord is near. 6* Have no anxiety at all, but in everything, by prayer and petition, with thanksgiving,
make your requests known to God.
7* Then the peace of God that surpasses all understanding will guard your hearts and minds in Christ Jesus.
8*† Finally, brothers, whatever is true, whatever is honorable, whatever is just, whatever is pure, whatever is lovely, whatever is gracious, if there is any excellence and if there is anything worthy of praise, think about these things. 9*† Keep on doing what you have learned and received and heard and seen in me. Then the God of peace will be with you.

VII: GRATITUDE FOR THE PHILIPPIANS' GENEROSITY†

10* I rejoice greatly in the Lord that now at last you revived your concern for me. You were, of course, concerned about me but lacked an opportunity.
11* Not that I say this because of need,
for I have learned, in whatever situation
I find myself, to be self-sufficient.
12 I know indeed how to live in humble circumstances; I know also how to live with abundance. In every circumstance and in all things I have learned the secret of being well fed and of going hungry, of living in abundance and of being in need. 13* I have the strength for everything through him who empowers
me. 14 Still, it was kind of you to share in my distress.
15† You Philippians indeed know that at the beginning of the gospel, when I left Macedonia, not a single church shared with me in an account of giving and receiving, except you alone. 16 For even when I was at Thessalonica you sent me something for my needs, not only once but more than once. 17 It is not that I am eager for the gift; rather,
I am eager for the profit that accrues to your account. 18*† I have received full payment and I abound. I am very well supplied because of what I received from you through Epaphroditus, "a fragrant aroma," an acceptable sacrifice, pleasing to God. 19* My God will fully supply whatever you need, in accord with his glorious riches in Christ Jesus.
20* To our God and Father, glory for ever and ever. Amen.

20: Rom 16, 27; Eph 5, 20.

4, 1-9: This series of ethical admonitions rests especially on the view of Christ and his coming (cf 5) in 3, 20-21. Paul's instructions touch on unity within the congregation, joy, prayer, and the Christian outlook on life.

4, 2: Euodia . . . Syntyche: two otherwise unknown women in the Philippian congregation; on the advice to them, cf 2, 2-4.

4, 3: Yokemate: or "comrade," although the Greek syzygos could also be a proper name. Clement: otherwise unknown, although later writers sought to identify him with Clement, bishop of Rome (Eusebius, Ecclesiastical History 3.15.1).

4, 4: Rejoice: see the note on 3, 1.

4, 5: Kindness: considerateness, forbearance, fairness. The Lord is near: most likely a reference to Christ's parousia (1, 6.10; 3, 20-21; 1 Cor 16, 22), although some sense an echo of Ps 119, 151 and the perpetual presence of the Lord.

4, 6: The language employs terms from Roman Stoic thought.

4, 9: Cf the note on 3, 17.

4, 10-20: Paul, more directly than anywhere else in the letter (cf 1, 3-5), here thanks the Philippians for their gift of money sent through Epaphroditus (2, 25). Paul's own policy was to be self-sufficient as a missionary, supporting himself by his own labor (1 Thes 2, 5-9; 1 Cor 9, 15-18; cf Acts 18, 2-3). In spite of this reliance on self and on God to provide (11-13), Paul accepted gifts from the Philippians not only once but more than once (16) when he was in Thessalonica (Acts 17, 1-9), as he does now, in prison (my distress, 14). While commercial terms appear in the passage, like an account of giving and receiving (15) and received full payment (18), Paul is most concerned about the spiritual growth of the Philippians (10.17.19); he emphasizes that God will care for their needs, through Christ.

4, 15: The beginning of the gospel: it was at Philippi that Paul first preached Christ in Europe, going on from there to Thessalonica and Beroea (Acts 16, 9—17, 14).

4, 18: Aroma . . . sacrifice: Old Testament cultic language (cf Gn 8, 21; Ex 29, 18.25.41; Lv 1, 9.13; Ez 20, 41) applied to the Philippians' gift; cf Eph 5, 2; 2 Cor 2, 14-16.

VIII: FAREWELL†

21 Give my greetings to every holy one in Christ Jesus. The brothers who are with me send you their greetings; 22 * † all the holy ones send you their greetings, especially those of Caesar's household. 23 The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit.

• 22: 1, 13.

† 4, 21-23: On the usual greetings at the conclusion of a letter, see the note on 1 Cor 16, 19-24. Inclusion of greetings from all the holy ones in the place from which Paul writes would involve even the Christians of 1, 14-18 who had their differences with Paul.

4, 22: Those of Caesar's household: minor officials or even slaves and freedmen, found in Ephesus or Rome, among other places.

The Letter to the

COLOSSIANS

This letter is addressed to a congregation at Colossae in the Lycus Valley in Asia Minor, east of Ephesus. At the time of writing, Paul had not visited there, the letter says (1, 4; 2, 1). The community had apparently been established by Epaphras of Colossae (1, 7; 4, 12; Phlm 23). Problems, however, had arisen, brought on by teachers who emphasized Christ's relation to the universe (cosmos). Their teachings stressed angels (2, 18; "principalities and powers," 2, 15), which were connected with astral powers and cultic practices (see the note on 2, 16) and rules about food and drink and ascetical disciplines (2, 16.18). These teachings, Paul insists, detract from the person and work of Christ for salvation as set forth magnificently in a hymnic passage at 1, 15-20 and reiterated throughout the letter. Such teachings are but "shadows"; Christ is "reality" (2, 17).

For help in dealing with these problems that the new teachers posed at Colossae, Epaphras sought out Paul, who was then imprisoned (4, 10.18) at a place that the letter does not mention. Paul, without entering into debate over the existence of angelic spirits or their function, simply affirms that Christ possesses the sum total of redemptive power (1, 19) and that the spiritual renewal of the human person occurs through contact in baptism with the person of Christ, who died and rose again (2, 9-14). It is unnecessary for the Christian to be concerned about placating spirits (2, 15) or avoiding imagined defilement through ascetical practices in regard to food and drink (2, 20-23). True Christian asceticism consists in the conquering of personal sins (3, 5-10) and the practice of love of neighbor in accordance with the standard set by Christ (3, 12-16).

Paul commends the community as a whole (1, 3-8); this seems to indicate that, though the Colossians have been under pressure to adopt the false doctrines, they have not yet succumbed. The apostle expresses his prayerful concern for them (1, 9-14). His preaching has cost him persecution, suffering, and imprisonment, but he regards these as reflective of the sufferings of Christ, a required discipline for the sake of the gospel (see the note on 1, 24; cf 1, 29; 2, 1). His instructions to the Christian family and to slaves and masters require a new spirit of reflection and action. Love, obedience, and service are to be rendered "in the Lord" (3, 18—4, 1).

Colossians follows the outline of a typical Pauline letter. It is distinguished by the poetic lines in 1, 15-20 concerning who Christ is and what Christ means in creation and redemption. This hymn may be compared with similar passages in Philippians 2, 6-11; 1 Timothy 3, 16; and John 1, 1-18. It was apparently familiar liturgical material to the author, the audience, and the false teachers. In 1, 21—2, 7, however, Paul interprets the relation between the body of Christ, which he insists is the church (1, 18), and the world or cosmos to be one not simply of Christ's preexistence and rule but one of missionary advance into the world by the spreading of the word (1, 25.28). In this labor of the missionary body of Christ, Paul as a minister plays a prime part in bringing Christ and the gospel as hope to the Gentiles (1, 23.25.27). To "every creature under heaven" the word is to be proclaimed, so that everyone receives Christ, is established in faith, and walks in Christ (1, 28; 2, 6.7).

Paul wrote the Letter to the Colossians while in prison, but his several imprisonments leave the specific place and date of composition uncertain. On this point the same problem exists as with Ephesians and Philippians (see the Introductions to these letters). Traditionally the house arrest at Rome, in which Paul enjoyed a certain restricted freedom in preaching (see Acts 28, 16-28), or a second Roman imprisonment has been claimed as the setting. Others suggest a still earlier imprisonment at Caesarea (see Acts 23, 12—27, 1) or in Ephesus (see Acts 19). Still others regard the letter as the work of some pupil or follower of Paul, writing in his name. In any case, the contents are often closely paralleled by thoughts in Ephesians.

The principal divisions of the Letter to the Colossians are the following:

I: Address (1, 1-14)
II: The Preeminence of Christ (1, 15—2, 3)
III: Warnings against False Teachers (2, 4-23)
IV: The Ideal Christian Life in the World (3, 1—4, 6)
V: Conclusion (4, 7-18)

I: ADDRESS

CHAPTER 1

Greeting.† 1 Paul, an apostle of Christ Jesus by the will of God, and Timothy our brother, 2 to the holy ones and faithful brothers in Christ in Colossae: grace to you and peace from God our Father.

Thanksgiving.† 3 We always give thanks to God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, when we pray for you, 4 for we have heard of your faith in Christ Jesus and the love that you have for all the holy ones 5* because of the hope reserved for you in heaven. Of this you have already heard through the word of truth, the gospel, 6 that has come to you. Just as in the whole world it is bearing fruit and growing, so also among you, from the day you heard it and came to know the grace of God in truth, 7*† as you learned it from Epaphras our beloved fellow slave, who is a trustworthy minister of Christ on your behalf 8 and who also told us of your love in the Spirit.

Prayer for Continued Progress.† 9 Therefore, from the day we heard this, we do not cease praying for you and asking that you may be filled with the knowledge of his will through all spiritual wisdom and understanding 10 to live in a manner worthy of the Lord, so as to be fully pleasing, in every good work bearing fruit and growing in the knowledge of God, 11 strengthened with every power, in accord with his glorious might, for all endurance and patience, with joy 12*† giving thanks to the Father, who has made you fit to share in the inheritance of the holy ones in light. 13 He delivered us from the power of darkness and transferred us to the kingdom of his beloved Son, 14* in whom we have redemption, the forgiveness of sins.

1, 1-2: For the epistolary form used by Paul at the beginning of his letters, see the note on Rom 1, 1-7. On holy ones or "God's people," see the note on Rom 1, 7. Awareness of their calling helps this group to be faithful brothers and sisters in Christ, i.e., dedicated to the tasks implied in their calling.

1, 3-8: On thanksgiving at the start of a letter, see the note on Rom 1, 8. The apostle, recalling his own prayers for them and the good report about them he has received (3-4), congratulates the Colossians upon their acceptance of Christ and their faithful efforts to live the gospel (3, 6-8). To encourage them he mentions the success of the gospel elsewhere (6) and assures them that his knowledge of their community is accurate, since he has been in personal contact with Epaphras (7-8), who likely had evangelized Colossae and other cities in the Lycus Valley of Asia Minor (cf 4, 12.13; Phlm 23). On faith, love, and hope (4.5.8), see the note on 1 Cor 13, 13; cf 1 Thes 1, 3; 5, 8.

1, 7: Epaphras: now with Paul but a Colossian, founder of the church there.

1, 9-14: Moved by Epaphras' account, the apostle has prayed and continues to pray fervently for the Colossians that, in their response to the gospel, they may be filled with the knowledge of God's will (9; cf 3, 10). Paul expects a mutual interaction between their life according to the gospel and this knowledge (10), yielding results (fruit, 10; cf 6) in every good work: growth, strength, endurance, patience, with joy (11), and the further giving of thanks (12).

1, 12-14: A summary about redemption by the Father precedes the statement in vv 15-20 about the beloved Son who is God's love in person (13). Christians share the inheritance . . . in light with the holy ones, here probably the angels (12). The imagery reflects the Exodus (delivered . . . transferred) and Jesus' theme of the kingdom. Redemption is explained as forgiveness of sins (cf Acts 2, 38; Rom 3, 24-25; Eph 1, 7).

II: THE PREEMINENCE OF CHRIST

His Person and Work†

15*†He is the image of the invisible God,
the firstborn of all creation.
16*†For in him were created all things
in heaven and on earth,
the visible and the invisible,
whether thrones or dominions or principalities or powers;
all things were created through him and for him.
17 He is before all things,
and in him all things hold together.
18*†He is the head of the body, the church.
He is the beginning, the firstborn
from the dead,
that in all things he himself might be preeminent.
19† For in him all the fullness was pleased to dwell, 20*† and through him to reconcile all things for him,
making peace by the blood of his cross [through him], whether those on earth or those in heaven.

21*† And you who once were alienated and hostile in mind because of evil deeds 22 he has now reconciled in his fleshly body through his death, to present you holy, without blemish, and irreproachable before him, 23 provided that you persevere in the faith, firmly grounded, stable, and not shifting from the hope of the gospel that you heard, which has been preached to every creature under heaven, of which I, Paul, am a minister.

Christ in Us.† 24† Now I rejoice in my sufferings for your sake, and in my flesh
I am filling up what is lacking in the afflictions of Christ on behalf of his body, which is the church, 25 of which I am a minister in accordance with God's stewardship given to me to bring to completion for you the word of God, 26* the mystery hidden from ages and from generations past. But now it has been manifested to his holy ones, 27* to whom God chose to make known the riches of the glory of this mystery
among the Gentiles; it is Christ in you,
the hope for glory. 28* It is he whom we proclaim, admonishing everyone and teaching everyone with all wisdom, that we may present everyone perfect in Christ. 29* For this I labor and struggle,
in accord with the exercise of his power
working within me.

1, 15-20: As the poetic arrangement indicates, these lines are probably an early Christian hymn, known to the Colossians and taken up into the letter from liturgical use (cf Phil 2, 6-11; 1 Tm 3, 16). They present Christ as the mediator of creation (15-18a) and of redemption (18b-20). There is a parallelism between firstborn of all creation (15) and firstborn from the dead (18). While many of the phrases were at home in Greek philosophical use and even in gnosticism, the basic ideas also reflect Old Testament themes about Wisdom found in Prv 8, 22-31; Wis 7, 22—8, 1; and Sir 1, 4. See also the notes on what is possibly a hymn in Jn 1, 1-18.

1, 15: Image: cf Gn 1, 27. Whereas the man and the woman were originally created in the image and likeness of God (see also Gn 1, 26), Christ as image (2 Cor 4, 4) of the invisible God (Jn 1, 18) now shares this new nature in baptism with those redeemed (cf 3, 10-11).

1, 16-17: Christ (though not mentioned by name) is preeminent and supreme as God's agent in the creation of all things (cf Jn 1, 3), as prior to all things (17; cf Heb 1, 3).

1, 18: Church: such a reference seemingly belongs under "redemption" in the following lines, not under the "creation" section of the hymn. Stoic thought sometimes referred to the world as "the body of Zeus." Pauline usage is to speak of the church as the body of Christ (1 Cor 12, 12-27; Rom 12, 4-5). Some think that the author of Colossians has inserted the reference to the church here so as to define "head of the body" in Paul's customary way. See v 24. Preeminent: when Christ was raised by God as firstborn from the dead (cf Acts 26, 23; Rv 1, 5), he was placed over the community, the church, that he had brought into being, but he is also indicated as crown of the whole new creation, over all things. His further role is to reconcile all things (20) for God or possibly "to himself."

1, 19: Fullness: in gnostic usage this term referred to a spiritual world of beings above, between God and the world; many later interpreters take it to refer to the fullness of the deity (2, 9); the reference could also be to the fullness of grace (cf Jn 1, 16).

1, 20: The blood of his cross: the most specific reference in the hymn to redemption through Christ's death, a central theme in Paul; cf 2, 14-15; 1 Cor 1, 17.18.23. [Through him]: the phrase, lacking in some manuscripts, seems superfluous but parallels the reference to reconciliation through Christ earlier in the verse.

1, 21-23: Paul, in applying this hymn to the Colossians, reminds them that they have experienced the reconciling effect of Christ's death. He sees the effects of the cross in the redemption of human beings, not of cosmic powers such as those referred to in vv 16 and 20 (all things). Paul also urges adherence to Christ in faith and begins to point to his own role as minister (23), sufferer (24), and proclaimer (27-28) of this gospel.

1, 24—2, 3: As the community at Colossae was not personally known to Paul (see Introduction), he here invests his teaching with greater authority by presenting a brief sketch of his apostolic ministry and sufferings as they reflect those of Christ on behalf of the church (24). The preaching of God's word (25) carries out the divine plan (the mystery, 26) to make Christ known to the Gentiles (27). It teaches the God-given wisdom about Christ (28), whose power works mightily in the apostle (29). Even in those communities that do not know him personally (2, 1), he can increase the perception of God in Christ, unite the faithful more firmly in love, and so bring encouragement to them (2). He hopes that his apostolic authority will make the Colossians perceive more readily the defects in the teaching of others who have sought to delude them, the next concern in the letter.

1, 24: What is lacking: although variously interpreted, this phrase does not imply that Christ's atoning death on the cross was defective. It may refer to the apocalyptic concept of a quota of "messianic woes" to be endured before the end comes; cf Mk 13, 8.19-20.24 and the note on Mt 23, 29-32. Others suggest that Paul's mystical unity with Christ allowed him to call his own sufferings the afflictions of Christ.

CHAPTER 2

[1]† For I want you to know how great a struggle I am having for you and for those in Laodicea and all who have not seen me face to face, [2]* that their hearts may be encouraged as they are brought together in love, to have all the richness of fully assured understanding, for the knowledge of the mystery of God, Christ, [3]* in whom are hidden all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge.

III: WARNINGS AGAINST FALSE TEACHERS†

A General Admonition. [4]* I say this so that no one may deceive you by specious arguments. [5]* For even if I am absent in the flesh, yet I am with you in spirit, rejoicing as I observe your good order and the firmness of your faith in Christ. [6] So, as you received Christ Jesus the Lord, walk in him, [7]* rooted in him and built upon him and established in the faith as you were taught, abounding in thanksgiving. [8]*† See to it that no one captivate you with an empty, seductive philosophy according to human tradition, according to the elemental powers of the world and not according to Christ.

Sovereign Role of Christ. [9]† For in him dwells the whole fullness of the deity bodily, [10] and you share in this fullness in him, who is the head of every principality and power. [11]† In him you were also circumcised with a circumcision not administered by hand, by stripping off the carnal body, with the circumcision of Christ. [12]* You were buried with him in baptism, in which you were also raised with him through faith in the power of God, who raised him from the dead. [13]* And even when you were dead [in] transgressions and the uncircumcision of your flesh, he brought you to life along with him, having forgiven us all our transgressions; [14]† obliterating the bond against us, with its legal claims, which was opposed to us, he also removed it from our midst, nailing it to the cross; [15]† despoiling the principalities and the powers, he made a public spectacle of them, leading them away in triumph by it.

Practices Contrary to Faith. [16]† Let no one, then, pass judgment on you in matters of food and drink or with regard to a festival or new moon or sabbath. [17] These are shadows of things to come; the reality belongs to Christ. [18]† Let no one disqualify you, delighting in self-abasement and worship of angels, taking his stand on visions, inflated without reason by his fleshly mind, [19] and not holding closely to the head, from whom the whole body, supported and held together by its ligaments and bonds, achieves the growth that comes from God.

[20] If you died with Christ to the elemental powers of the world, why do you submit to regulations as if you were still living in the world? [21] "Do not handle! Do not taste! Do not touch!" [22]* These are all things destined to perish with

2, 1: Laodicea: chief city in Phrygia, northwest of Colossae; cf 4, 13.16; Rv 3, 14-22.

2, 4-23: In face of the threat posed by false teachers (4), the Colossians are admonished to adhere to the gospel as it was first preached to them (6), steeping themselves in it with grateful hearts (7). They must reject religious teachings originating in any source except the gospel (8) because in Christ alone will they have access to God, the deity (9). So fully has Christ enlightened them that they need no other source of religious knowledge or virtue (10). They do not require circumcision (11), for in baptism their whole being has been affected by Christ (12) through forgiveness of sin and resurrection to a new life (13; cf 3, 1 and Rom 6, 1-11).

On the cross Christ canceled the record of the debt that stood against us with all its claims (14), i.e., he eliminated the law (cf Eph 2, 15) that human beings could not observe—and that could not save them. He forgave sins against the law (14) and exposed as false and misleading (15) all other powers (cf 1, 16) that purport to offer salvation. Therefore, the Colossians are not to accept judgments from such teachers on food and drink or to keep certain religious festivals or engage in certain cultic practices (16), for the Colossians would thereby risk severing themselves from Christ (19). If, when they accepted the gospel, they believed in Christ as their savior, they must be convinced that their salvation cannot be achieved by appeasing ruling spirits through dietary practices or through a wisdom gained simply by means of harsh asceticism (20-23).

2, 8: Elemental powers of the world: see the note on Gal 4, 3.

2, 9: Fullness of the deity: the divine nature, not just attributes; see the note on 1, 19.

2, 11: A description of baptism (12) in symbolic terms of the Old Testament rite for entry into the community. The false teachers may have demanded physical circumcision of the Colossians.

2, 14: The elaborate metaphor here about how God canceled the legal claims against us through Christ's cross depicts not Christ being nailed to the cross by men but the bond . . . with its legal claims being nailed to the cross by God.

2, 15: The picture derives from the public spectacle and triumph of a Roman emperor's victory parade, where captives marched in subjection. The principalities and the powers are here conquered, not reconciled (cf 1, 16.20). An alternate rendering for by it (the cross) is "by him" (Christ).

2, 16: Festival or new moon or sabbath: yearly, monthly, and weekly observances determined by religious powers associated with a calendar set by the heavenly bodies, sun, moon, and stars (cf 8).

2, 18: Ascetic practices encouraged by the false teachers included subjection of self humbly to their rules, worship of angels, and cultivation of visions, though exact details are unclear.

use; they accord with human precepts and teachings. 23 While they have a semblance of wisdom in rigor of devotion and self-abasement [and] severity to the body, they are of no value against gratification of the flesh.

Mystical Death and Resurrection.† 1* If then you were raised with Christ, seek what is above, where Christ is seated at the right hand of God. 2 Think of what is above, not of what is on earth. 3* For you have died, and your life is hidden with Christ in God. 4 When Christ your life appears, then you too will appear with him in glory.

Renunciation of Vice.† 5*† Put to death, then, the parts of you that are earthly: immorality, impurity, passion, evil desire, and the greed that is idolatry. 6*† Because of these the wrath of God is coming [upon the disobedient]. 7 By these you too once conducted yourselves, when you lived in that way. 8*† But now you must put them all away: anger, fury, malice, slander, and obscene language out of your mouths. 9* Stop lying to one another, since you have taken off the old self with its practices 10*† and have put on the new self, which is being renewed, for knowledge, in the image of its creator. 11*† Here there is not Greek and Jew, circumcision and uncircumcision, barbarian, Scythian, slave, free; but Christ is all and in all.

12* Put on then, as God's chosen ones, holy and beloved, heartfelt compassion, kindness, humility, gentleness, and patience, 13* bearing with one another and forgiving one another, if one has a grievance against another; as the Lord has forgiven you, so must you also do. 14* And over all these put on love, that is, the bond of perfection. 15* And let the peace of Christ control your hearts, the peace into which you were also called in one body. And be thankful. 16* Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly, as in all wisdom you teach and admonish one another, singing psalms, hymns, and spiritual songs with gratitude in your hearts to God. 17* And whatever you do, in word or in deed, do everything in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father through him.

The Christian Family.† 18* Wives, be subordinate to your husbands, as is proper in the Lord. 19 Husbands, love your wives, and avoid any bitterness toward them. 20* Children, obey your parents in everything, for this is pleasing to the Lord. 21* Fathers, do not provoke your children, so they may not become discouraged.

Slaves and Masters.† 22* Slaves, obey your human masters in everything, not only when being watched, as currying favor, but in simplicity of heart, fearing the Lord. 23 Whatever you do, do from the heart, as for the Lord and not for others, 24 knowing that you will receive from the Lord the due payment of the inheritance; be slaves of the Lord Christ. 25* For the wrongdoer will receive recompense for the wrong he committed, and there is no partiality.

3, 1-4: By retaining the message of the gospel that the risen, living Christ is the source of their salvation, the Colossians will be free from false religious evaluations of the things of the world (1-2). They have died to these; but one day when Christ . . . appears, they will live with Christ in the presence of God (3-4).

3, 5-17: In lieu of false asceticism and superstitious festivals, the apostle reminds the Colossians of the moral life that is to characterize their response to God through Christ. He urges their participation in the liturgical hymns and prayers that center upon God's plan of salvation in Christ (16).

3, 5.8: The two lists of five vices each are similar to enumerations at Rom 1, 29-31 and Gal 5, 19-21.

3, 6: The wrath of God: see the note on Rom 1, 18. Many manuscripts add, as at Eph 5, 6, "upon the disobedient."

3, 8-10: Put . . . away; have taken off; have put on: the terms may reflect baptismal practice, taking off garments and putting on new ones after being united with Christ, here translated into ethical terms.

3, 10: Image: see the note on 1, 15.

3, 11: Scythian: a barbarous people from north of the Black Sea.

3, 18—4, 6: After general recommendations that connect family life and the social condition of slavery with the service of Christ (3, 18—4, 1), Paul requests prayers for himself, especially in view of his imprisonment (2-3), and recommends friendly relations and meaningful discussions of Christian teaching with outsiders, i.e., non-Christians (5-6). See the note on Eph 5, 21—6, 9.

3, 22-25: Slaves: within this table of duties in family and societal relations, involving wives and husbands, children and parents (18-21), such as also appears in Eph 5, 22—6, 9, slaves here receive special attention because of the case of Onesimus the slave returning to his master (4, 9; Phlm 10-12).

Prayer and Apostolic Spirit. 2* Persevere in prayer, being watchful in it with thanksgiving; 3* at the same time, pray for us, too, that God may open a door to us for the word, to speak of the mystery of Christ, for which I am in prison, 4 that I may make it clear, as I must speak. 5* Conduct yourselves wisely toward outsiders, making the most of the opportunity. 6 Let your speech always be gracious, seasoned with salt, so that you know how you should respond to each one.

V: CONCLUSION

Tychicus and Onesimus. † 7*† Tychicus, my beloved brother, trustworthy minister, and fellow slave in the Lord, will tell you all the news of me. 8 I am sending him to you for this very purpose, so that you may know about us and that he may encourage your hearts, 9* together with Onesimus, a trustworthy and beloved brother, who is one of you. They will tell you about everything here.

From Paul's Co-Workers. 10*† Aristarchus, my fellow prisoner, sends you greetings, as does Mark the cousin of Barnabas (concerning whom you have received instructions; if he comes to you, receive him), 11† and Jesus, who is called Justus, who are of the circumcision; these alone are my co-workers for the kingdom of God, and they have been a comfort to me. 12*† Epaphras sends you greetings; he is one of you, a slave of Christ [Jesus], always striving for you in his prayers so that you may be perfect and fully assured in all the will of God. 13† For I can testify that he works very hard for you and for those in Laodicea and those in Hierapolis. 14*† Luke the beloved physician sends greetings, as does Demas.

A Message for the Laodiceans. 15† Give greetings to the brothers in Laodicea and to Nympha and to the church in her house. 16† And when this letter is read before you, have it read also in the church of the Laodiceans, and you yourselves read the one from Laodicea. 17*† And tell Archippus, "See that you fulfill the ministry that you received in the Lord."

18*† The greeting is in my own hand, Paul's. Remember my chains. Grace be with you.

4, 7-18: Paul concludes with greetings and information concerning various Christians known to the Colossians.

4, 7: Tychicus: Acts 20, 4 mentions his role in the collection for Jerusalem; Eph 6, 21 repeats what is said here; see also 2 Tm 4, 12; Ti 3, 12.

4, 10: Aristarchus: a Thessalonian who was with Paul at Ephesus and Caesarea and on the voyage to Rome (Acts 19, 29; 20, 4; 27, 2). Mark: also referred to at Phlm 24 and 2 Tm 4, 11 and, as "John Mark," in Acts (12, 12.25; 13, 13; 15, 37-40). See also 1 Pt 5, 13 and the note there. Traditionally the author of the second gospel.

4, 11: Jesus: a then common Jewish name, the Greek form of Joshua.

4, 12: Epaphras: see the notes on 1, 3-8 and 1, 7.

4, 13: Laodicea: see the note on 2, 1. Hierapolis: a city northeast of Laodicea and northwest of Colossae.

4, 14: Luke: only here described as a medical doctor; cf Phlm 24 and 2 Tm 4, 11. Traditionally the author of the third gospel. Demas: cf Phlm 24; he later deserted Paul (2 Tm 4, 10).

4, 15: Nympha and . . . her house: some manuscripts read a masculine for the house-church leader, "Nymphas and . . . his house."

4, 16: The one from Laodicea: either a letter by Paul that has been lost or the Letter to the Ephesians (cf the note on Eph 1, 1, in Ephesus).

4, 17: Fulfill the ministry: usually taken to mean that Archippus, the son of Philemon and Apphia (Phlm 1-2), is "pastor" at Colossae. An alternate interpretation is that Archippus, not Philemon, is the owner of the slave Onesimus and that Paul is asking Archippus to complete the service he has received in the Lord by sending Onesimus back to minister to Paul in his captivity (cf Phlm 20).

4, 18: My own hand: a postscript in Paul's own hand was his custom; cf Gal 6, 11-18 and 2 Thes 3, 17-18.

The First Letter to the

THESSALONIANS

When Paul parted from Barnabas (Acts 15, 36-41) at the beginning of what is called his second missionary journey, he chose Silvanus (Silas) as his traveling companion. Soon afterwards he took Timothy along with him (Acts 16, 1-3). Paul was now clearly at the head of his own missionary band. About A.D. 50, he arrived in Greece for the first time. In making converts in Philippi and, soon afterwards, in Thessalonica, he was beset by persecution from Jews and Gentiles alike. Moving on to Beroea, he was again harassed by enemies from Thessalonica and hurriedly left for Athens (Acts 16, 11—17, 15). Silvanus and Timothy remained behind for a while. Paul soon sent Timothy back to Thessalonica to strengthen that community in its trials (3, 1-5). Timothy and Silvanus finally returned to Paul when he reached Corinth (Acts 18, 1-18), probably in the early summer of A.D. 51. Timothy's return with a report on conditions at Thessalonica served as the occasion for Paul's first letter (3, 6-8).

The letter begins with a brief address (1, 1) and concludes with a greeting (5, 26-28). The body of the letter consists of two major parts. The first (1, 2—3, 13) is a set of three sections of thanksgiving connected by two apologiae (defenses) dealing, respectively, with the missionaries' previous conduct and their current concerns. Paul's thankful optimism regarding the Thessalonians' spiritual welfare is tempered by his insistence on their recognition of the selfless love shown by the missionaries. In an age of itinerant peddlers of new religions, Paul found it necessary to emphasize not only the content of his gospel but also his manner of presenting it, for both attested to God's grace as freely bestowed and powerfully effected.

The second part of the letter (4, 1—5, 25) is specifically hortatory or parenetic. The superabundant love for which Paul has just prayed (3, 12-13) is to be shown practically by living out the norms of conduct that he has communicated to them. Specific "imperatives" of Christian life, principles for acting morally, stem from the "indicative" of one's relationship to God through Christ by the sending of the holy Spirit. Thus, moral conduct is the practical, personal expression of one's Christian faith, love, and hope.

The principal divisions of the First Letter to the Thessalonians are the following:

I: Address (1, 1-10)
II: Previous Relations with the Thessalonians (2, 1—3, 13)
III: Specific Exhortations (4, 1—5, 25)
IV: Final Greeting (5, 26-28)

I: ADDRESS

CHAPTER 1

Greeting. 1*† Paul, Silvanus, and Timothy to the church of the Thessalonians in God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ: grace to you and peace.

Thanksgiving for Their Faith. 2* We give thanks to God always for all of you, remembering you in our prayers, unceasingly 3† calling to mind your work of faith and labor of love and endurance in hope of our Lord Jesus Christ, before our God and Father, 4* knowing, brothers loved by God, how you were chosen.

1, 1: Acts 15, 40; 16, 1-3.19; 17, 14-15; 2 Thes 1, 1-2. 2: 2 Thes 1, 3. 4: 2 Thes 2, 13.

† 1, 1: On the address, see the note on Rom 1, 1-7.

1, 3: Faith . . . love . . . hope: this, along with 5, 8, is the earliest mention in Christian literature of the three "theological virtues" (see 1 Cor 13, 13). The order here stresses eschatological hope, in line with the letter's emphasis on the Lord's second, triumphal coming, or parousia (10; 2, 12.19; 3, 13; 4, 13—5, 11; 5, 23).

5* For our gospel did not come to you in word alone, but also in power and in the holy Spirit and [with] much conviction. You know what sort of people we were [among] you for your sake.
6† And you became imitators of us and of the Lord, receiving the word in great affliction, with joy from the holy Spirit, 7* so that you became a model for all the believers in Macedonia and in Achaia. 8* For from you the word of the Lord has sounded forth not only in Macedonia and [in] Achaia, but in every place your faith in God has gone forth, so that we have no need to say anything. 9* For they themselves openly declare about us what sort of reception we had among you, and how you turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God 10* and to await his Son from heaven, whom he raised from [the] dead, Jesus, who delivers us from the coming wrath.

II: PREVIOUS RELATIONS WITH THE THESSALONIANS

CHAPTER 2

Paul's Ministry Among Them. 1 For you yourselves know, brothers, that our reception among you was not without effect. 2* Rather, after we had suffered and been insolently treated, as you know, in Philippi, we drew courage through our God to speak to you the gospel of God with much struggle.
3 Our exhortation was not from delusion or impure motives, nor did it work through deception. 4*† But as we were judged worthy by God to be entrusted with the gospel, that is how we speak,
not as trying to please human beings,
but rather God, who judges our hearts.
5 Nor, indeed, did we ever appear with flattering speech, as you know, or with a pretext for greed—God is witness—6* nor did we seek praise from human beings, either from you or from others, 7† although we were able to impose our weight as apostles of Christ. Rather, we were gentle among you, as a nursing mother cares for her children. 8 With such affection for you, we were determined to share with you not only the gospel of God, but our very selves as well, so dearly beloved had you become to us. 9* You recall, brothers, our toil and drudgery. Working night and day in order not to burden any of you, we proclaimed to you the gospel of God.
10 You are witnesses, and so is God, how devoutly and justly and blamelessly we behaved toward you believers. 11* As you know, we treated each one of you as a father treats his children, 12* exhorting and encouraging you and insisting that you conduct yourselves as worthy of the God who calls you into his kingdom and glory.

Further Thanksgiving. 13 And for this reason we too give thanks to God unceasingly, that, in receiving the word of God from hearing us, you received not a human word but, as it truly is, the word of God, which is now at work in you who believe. 14† For you, brothers, have become imitators of the churches
of God that are in Judea in Christ Jesus.
For you suffer the same things from your compatriots as they did from the Jews, 15*† who killed both the Lord Jesus and the prophets and persecuted us;
they do not please God, and are opposed to everyone, 16* trying to prevent us from speaking to the Gentiles that they may be saved, thus constantly filling up the measure of their sins. But the wrath of God has finally begun to come upon them.

Paul's Recent Travel Plans.
17* Brothers, when we were bereft of you for a short time, in person, not in heart, we were all the more eager in our great desire to see you in person.
18* We decided to go to you—I, Paul, not only once but more than once—yet Satan thwarted us. 19* For what is our

1, 6: Imitators: the Pauline theme of "imitation" (see 2, 14; 1 Cor 4, 16; 11, 1; 2 Thes 3, 9) is rooted in Paul's view of solidarity in Christ through sharing in Jesus' cross and in the Spirit of the risen Lord.

2, 4: Judged worthy: Paul regards "worthiness" not as grounded in one's own talent or moral self-righteousness but in God's discernment of genuinely selfless attitudes and actions (see 2 Cor 10, 17-18).

2, 7: Gentle: many excellent manuscripts read "infants" (nēpioi), but "gentle" (ēpioi) better suits the context here.

2, 14: Luke's picture of the persecutions at Philippi (by Gentiles) and in Thessalonica and Beroea (by Jews) seems to be considerably schematized (Acts 16, 11-40; 17, 1-15). Paul pictures the Thessalonian community as composed of converts from paganism (1, 9) and speaks here of persecution by their (pagan) compatriots rather than by Jews.

2, 15-16: Paul is speaking of historical opposition on the part of Palestinian Jews in particular and does so only some twenty years after Jesus' crucifixion. Even so, he quickly proceeds to depict the persecutors typologically, in apocalyptic terms. His remarks give no grounds for anti-Semitism to those willing to understand him, especially in view of Paul's pride in his own ethnic and religious background (Rom 9, 1-5; 10, 1; 11, 1-3; Phil 3, 4-6). Sinful conduct (16) is itself an anticipation of the ultimate wrath or judgment of God (Rom 1, 18—2, 5), whether or not it is perceived as such.

hope or joy or crown to boast of in the presence of our Lord Jesus at his coming if not you yourselves? [20] For you are our glory and joy.

[1]* That is why, when we could bear it no longer, we decided to remain alone in Athens [2]* and sent Timothy, our brother and co-worker for God in the gospel of Christ, to strengthen and encourage you in your faith, [3]† so that no one be disturbed in these afflictions. For you yourselves know that we are destined for this. [4]* For even when we were among you, we used to warn you in advance that we would undergo affliction, just as has happened, as you know. [5] For this reason, when I too could bear it no longer, I sent to learn about your faith, for fear that somehow the tempter had put you to the test and our toil might come to nothing.

[6] But just now Timothy has returned to us from you, bringing us the good news of your faith and love, and that you always think kindly of us and long to see us as we long to see you. [7] Because of this, we have been reassured about you, brothers, in our every distress and affliction, through your faith. [8] For we now live, if you stand firm in the Lord.

Concluding Thanksgiving and Prayer.† [9] What thanksgiving, then, can we render to God for you, for all the joy we feel on your account before our God? [10] Night and day we pray beyond measure to see you in person and to remedy the deficiencies of your faith. [11] Now may God himself, our Father, and our Lord Jesus direct our way to you, [12]* and may the Lord make you increase and abound in love for one another and for all, just as we have for you, [13]* so as to strengthen your hearts, to be blameless in holiness before our God and Father at the coming of our Lord Jesus with all his holy ones. [Amen.]

CHAPTER 4

General Exhortations. [1] Finally, brothers, we earnestly ask and exhort you in the Lord Jesus that, as you received from us how you should conduct yourselves to please God—and as you are conducting yourselves—you do so even more. [2]† For you know what instructions we gave you through the Lord Jesus.

Holiness in Sexual Conduct.† [3] This is the will of God, your holiness: that you refrain from immorality, [4] that each of you know how to acquire a wife for himself in holiness and honor, [5]* not in lustful passion as do the Gentiles who do not know God; [6] not to take advantage of or exploit a brother in this matter, for the Lord is an avenger in all these things, as we told you before and solemnly affirmed. [7] For God did not call us to impurity but to holiness. [8]* Therefore, whoever disregards this, disregards not a human being but God, who [also] gives his holy Spirit to you.

Mutual Charity. [9]* On the subject of mutual charity you have no need for anyone to write you, for you yourselves have been taught by God to love one another. [10]* Indeed, you do this for all the brothers throughout Macedonia. Nevertheless we urge you, brothers, to progress even more, [11] and to aspire to live a tranquil life, to mind your own affairs, and to work with your [own] hands, as we instructed you, [12] that you may conduct yourselves properly toward outsiders and not depend on anyone.

Hope for the Christian Dead. [13] We do not want you to be unaware, brothers, about those who have fallen asleep, so that you may not grieve like the rest, who have no hope. [14]* For if we believe that Jesus died and rose, so too will God,

3, 3: We are destined: the Greek phraseology and the context suggest Paul's concern to alert his readers to difficulties he knew they would necessarily face and to enable them to see their present experience in the light of what he warned them would happen in the future. This line of thought is followed in 2 Thes 2, 1-15.

3, 9-10: The tension between Paul's optimism concerning the Thessalonians' faith and his worries about their perseverance remains unresolved. Perhaps this is accounted for not only by the continuing harassment but also by the shortness of his own stay in Thessalonica (even if that were over twice as long as the conventional three weeks that Luke assigns to it, Acts 17, 2).

4, 2: Instructions: these include specific guidelines on the basis of the Lord's authority, not necessarily sayings Jesus actually uttered. More profoundly, as v 8 implies, the instructions are practical principles that Paul worked out in accordance with his understanding of the role of the Spirit.

4, 3-8: Many think that this passage deals with a variety of moral regulations (fornication, adultery, sharp business practices). It can be more specifically interpreted as bringing general norms to bear on a specific problem, namely, marriage within degrees of consanguinity (as between uncle and niece) forbidden in Jewish law but allowed according to a Greek heiress law, which would insure retention of an inheritance within the family and perhaps thereby occasion divorce. In that case, "immorality" (3) should be rendered as "unlawful marriage" and "this matter" (6) as "a lawsuit." The phrase in v 4, "acquire a wife for himself," has often been interpreted to mean "control one's body."

through Jesus, bring with him those who have fallen asleep. 15*† Indeed, we tell you this, on the word of the Lord, that we who are alive, who are left until the coming of the Lord, will surely not precede those who have fallen asleep. 16* For the Lord himself, with a word of command, with the voice of an archangel and with the trumpet of God, will come down from heaven, and the dead in Christ will rise first. 17† Then we who are alive, who are left, will be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air. Thus we shall always be with the Lord. 18 Therefore, console one another with these words.

Vigilance. 1* Concerning times and seasons, brothers, you have no need for anything to be written to you. 2* For you yourselves know very well that the day of the Lord will come like a thief at night. 3 When people are saying, "Peace and security," then sudden disaster comes upon them, like labor pains upon a pregnant woman, and they will not escape.

4* But you, brothers, are not in darkness, for that day to overtake you like a thief. 5† For all of you are children of the light and children of the day. We are not of the night or of darkness. 6* Therefore, let us not sleep as the rest do, but let us stay alert and sober. 7 Those who sleep go to sleep at night, and those who are drunk get drunk at night. 8* But since we are of the day, let us be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love and the helmet that is hope for salvation. 9 For God did not destine us for wrath, but to gain salvation through our Lord Jesus Christ, 10† who died for us, so that whether we are awake or asleep we may live together with him. 11* Therefore, encourage one another and build one another up, as indeed you do.

Church Order. 12 We ask you, brothers, to respect those who are laboring among you and who are over you in the Lord and who admonish you, 13 and to show esteem for them with special love on account of their work. Be at peace among yourselves.

14 We urge you, brothers, admonish the idle, cheer the fainthearted, support the weak, be patient with all. 15* See that no one returns evil for evil; rather, always seek what is good [both] for each other and for all. 16 Rejoice always. 17 Pray without ceasing. 18* In all circumstances give thanks, for this is the will of God for you in Christ Jesus. 19† Do not quench the Spirit. 20 Do not despise prophetic utterances. 21 Test everything; retain what is good. 22 Refrain from every kind of evil.

Concluding Prayer. 23*† May the God of peace himself make you perfectly holy and may you entirely, spirit, soul, and body, be preserved blameless for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. 24 The one who calls you is faithful, and he will also accomplish it. 25 Brothers, pray for us [too].

IV: FINAL GREETING

26† Greet all the brothers with a holy kiss. 27 I adjure you by the Lord that this letter be read to all the brothers. 28 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you.

4, 15: Coming of the Lord: Paul here assumes that the second coming, or parousia, will occur within his own lifetime but insists that the time or season is unknown (5, 1-2). Nevertheless, the most important aspect of the parousia for him was the fulfillment of union with Christ. His pastoral exhortation focuses first on hope for the departed faithful, then (5, 1-3) on the need of preparedness for those who have to achieve their goal.

4, 17: Will be caught up together: literally, snatched up, carried off; cf 2 Cor 12, 2; Rv 12, 5. From the Latin verb here used, rapiemur, has come the idea of "the rapture," when believers will be transported away from the woes of the world; this construction combines this verse with Mt 24, 40-41 (see the note there) // Lk 17, 34-35 and passages from Rv in a scheme of millennial dispensationalism.

5, 5: Children of the light: that is, belonging to the daylight of God's personal revelation and expected to achieve it (an analogous development of imagery that appears in Jn 12, 36).

5, 10: Characteristically, Paul plays on words suggesting ultimate and anticipated death and life. Union with the crucified and risen Lord at his parousia is anticipated in some measure in contrasted states of our temporal life. The essential element he urges is our indestructible personal union in Christ's own life (see Rom 5, 1-10).

5, 19-21: Paul's buoyant encouragement of charismatic freedom sometimes occasioned excesses that he or others had to remedy (see 1 Cor 14; 2 Thes 2, 1-15; 2 Pt 3, 1-16).

5, 23: Another possible translation is, "May the God of peace himself make you perfectly holy and sanctify your spirit fully, and may both soul and body be preserved blameless for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." In either case, Paul is not offering an anthropological or philosophical analysis of human nature. Rather, he looks to the wholeness of what may be called the supernatural and natural aspects of a person's service of God.

5, 26: Kiss: the holy embrace (see Rom 16, 16; 1 Cor 16, 20; 2 Cor 13, 12; 1 Pt 5, 14) was a greeting of respect and affection, perhaps given during a liturgy at which Paul's letter would have been read.

The Second Letter to the

THESSALONIANS

This letter is addressed to the same church as the letter that precedes it in the canon and contains many expressions parallel to those in the First Letter to the Thessalonians, indeed verbatim with them. Yet other aspects of the contents of the Second Letter to the Thessalonians suggest a more impersonal tone and changed circumstances in the situation at Thessalonica.

The letter begins with an address (1, 1-2) that expands only slightly on that of 1 Thes 1, 1. It ends with a greeting insisting on its Pauline authority in the face of false claims made in Paul's name (see the note on 2, 2). The body of the letter falls into three short parts, of which the second is notoriously difficult (ch 2).

The opening thanksgiving and prayer (1, 3-12) speak of the Thessalonians' increasing faith and love in the face of outside persecution. God's eventual judgment against persecutors and his salvation for the faithful are already evidenced by the very fact of persecution. The second part (2, 1-17), the heart of the letter, deals with a problem threatening the faith of the community. A message involving a prophetic oracle and apparently a forged letter, possibly presented at a liturgical gathering (cf 2, 2 and 1 Cor 14, 26-33), to the effect that the day of the Lord and all that it means have already come, has upset the life of the Thessalonian church.

The writer counters their preoccupation with the date of the parousia (or coming again of the Lord Jesus from heaven, 2, 1) by recalling Paul's teaching concerning what must happen first and by going on to describe what will happen at the Lord's coming (2, 8); he indicates the twofold process by which the "activity of Satan" and God's actions (2, 9-11) are working out, namely, a growing division between believers and those who succumb to false prophecy and "the lie." He concludes by insisting on Pauline traditions and by praying for divine strength (2, 13-17). The closing part of the letter (3, 1-16) deals in particular with the apostle's directives and model style of life and with correction of disorderly elements within the community.

Traditional opinion holds that this letter was written shortly after 1 Thessalonians. Occasionally it has been argued that 2 Thessalonians was written first or that the two letters are addressed to different segments within the church at Thessalonica (2 Thessalonians being directed to the Jewish Christians there) or even that 2 Thessalonians was originally written to some other nearby place where Paul carried out mission work, such as Philippi or Beroea. Increasingly in recent times, however, the opinion has been advanced that 2 Thessalonians is a pseudepigraph, that is, a letter written authoritatively in Paul's name, to maintain apostolic traditions in a later period, perhaps during the last two decades of the first century.

In any case, the presumed audience of Second Thessalonians and certain features of its style and content require that it be read and studied in a Pauline context, particularly that provided by 1 Thessalonians. At the same time, and especially if the letter is regarded as not by Paul himself, its apocalyptic presentation of preconditions for the parousia (2, 1-12) may profit from and require recourse to a wider biblical basis for interpretation, namely Old Testament books such as Daniel and Isaiah and especially, in the New Testament, the synoptic apocalyptic discourse (Mk 13; Mt 24-25; Lk 21, 5-36) and the Book of Revelation.

The principal divisions of the Second Letter to the Thessalonians are the following:

I: Address (1, 1-12)
II: Warning against Deception Concerning the Parousia (2, 1-17)

III: Concluding Exhortations (3, 1-16)
IV: Final Greetings (3, 17-18)

I: ADDRESS

CHAPTER 1

Greeting.† 1 Paul, Silvanus, and Timothy to the church of the Thessalonians in God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ: 2 grace to you and peace from God [our] Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Thanksgiving.† 3 We ought to thank God always for you, brothers, as is fitting, because your faith flourishes ever more, and the love of every one of you for one another grows ever greater. 4 Accordingly, we ourselves boast of you in the churches of God regarding your endurance and faith in all your persecutions and the afflictions you endure.

5* This is evidence of the just judgment of God, so that you may be considered worthy of the kingdom of God for which you are suffering. 6 For it is surely just on God's part to repay with afflictions those who are afflicting you, 7 and to grant rest along with us to you who are undergoing afflictions, at the revelation of the Lord Jesus from heaven with his mighty angels, 8* in blazing fire, inflicting punishment on those who do not acknowledge God and on those who do not obey the gospel of our Lord Jesus. 9* These will pay the penalty of eternal ruin, separated from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power, 10*† when he comes to be glorified among his holy ones and to be marveled at on that day among all who have believed, for our testimony to you was believed.

Prayer. 11* To this end, we always pray for you, that our God may make you worthy of his calling and powerfully bring to fulfillment every good purpose and every effort of faith, 12*† that the name of our Lord Jesus may be glorified in you, and you in him, in accord with the grace of our God and Lord Jesus Christ.

II: WARNING AGAINST DECEPTION CONCERNING THE PAROUSIA

Christ and the Lawless One.† 1 We ask you, brothers, with regard to the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ and our assembling with him, 2*† not to be shaken out of your minds suddenly, or to be alarmed either by a "spirit," or

1, 1-2: On the address, see the note on Rom 1, 1-7 and cf 1 Thes 1, 1.

1, 3-12: On the thanksgiving, see the note on Rom 1, 8 and cf 1 Thes 1, 2-10. Paul's gratitude to God for the faith and love of the Thessalonians (3) and his Christian pride in their faithful endurance (4-5) contrast with the condemnation announced for those who afflict them, a judgment to be carried out at the parousia (6-10), which is described in vivid language drawn from Old Testament apocalyptic. A prayer for the fulfillment of God's purpose in the Thessalonians (11-12) completes the section, as is customary in a Pauline letter (cf 1 Thes 1, 2-3).

1, 10: Among his holy ones: in the Old Testament, this term can refer to an angelic throng (cf also Jude 14), but here, in parallel with among all who have believed, it can refer to the triumphant people of God.

1, 12: The grace of our God and Lord Jesus Christ: the Greek can also be translated, "the grace of our God and of the Lord Jesus Christ."

2, 1-17: The Thessalonians have been shaken by a message purporting to come from Paul himself that the day of the Lord is already present. He warns against this deception in eschatology by citing a scenario of events that must first occur (3-12) before the end will come. The overall point Paul makes is the need to reject such lies as Satan sends; he also reaffirms the Thessalonians in their calling (13-14). They are to uphold what Paul himself has taught (15). There is a concluding prayer for their strengthening (16-17). As in 1, 8-10, the Old Testament provides a good deal of coloring; cf especially Is 14, 13-14; 66, 15.18-21; Ez 28, 2-9; Dn 11, 36-37. The contents of 2, 3b-8 may come from a previously existing apocalypse. The details have been variously interpreted.

An alternative to the possibilities noted below understands that an oracular utterance, supposedly coming from a prophetic spirit (2-3a), has so disrupted the community's thinking that its effects may be compared to those of the mania connected with the worship of the Greek god Dionysus. On this view, the writer seems to allude in vv 6-8 to Dionysiac "seizure," although, of course, ironically, somewhat as Paul alludes to witchcraft ("an evil eye") in Gal 3, 1 in speaking of the threat to faith posed by those disturbing the Galatians (Gal 1, 6-7; 5, 10b). On this view of 2 Thes 2, the Greek participles katechon (rendered above as what is restraining) and katechōn (the one who restrains) are to be translated "the seizing power" in v 6 and "the seizer" in v 7. They then allude to a pseudochansmatic force or spirit of Dionysiac character that has suddenly taken hold of the Thessalonian community (see 2). The addressees know (6) this force or spirit because of the problem it is causing. This pseudochansmatic force or spirit is a kind of anticipation and advance proof of the ultimate, climactic figure (the lawless one or the rebel, 3), of which the community has been warned (see the note on 1 Thes 3, 3). It is, however, only the beginning of the end that the latter's manifestation entails; the end is not yet. For in the course of the mystery of lawlessness (7), false prophetism, after it ceases in the Thessalonian community, will be manifested in the world at large (8-12), where it will also be eliminated in turn by the Lord Jesus.

2, 2: "Spirit": a Spirit-inspired utterance or ecstatic revelation. An oral statement: literally, a "word" or pronouncement, not necessarily of ecstatic origin. A letter allegedly sent by us: possibly a forged letter, so that Paul calls attention in 3, 17 to his practice of concluding a genuine letter with a summary note or greeting in his own hand, as at Gal 6, 11-18 and elsewhere.

by an oral statement, or by a letter allegedly from us to the effect that the day of the Lord is at hand. [3]† Let no one deceive you in any way. For unless the apostasy comes first and the lawless one is revealed, the one doomed to perdition, [4]† who opposes and exalts himself above every so-called god and object of worship, so as to seat himself in the temple of God, claiming that he is a god—[5] do you not recall that while I was still with you I told you these things? [6]† And now you know what is restraining, that he may be revealed in his time. [7]† For the mystery of lawlessness is already at work. But the one who restrains is to do so only for the present, until he is removed from the scene. [8]* And then the lawless one will be revealed, whom the Lord [Jesus] will kill with the breath of his mouth and render powerless by the manifestation of his coming, [9]* the one whose coming springs from the power of Satan in every mighty deed and in signs and wonders that lie, [10] and in every wicked deceit for those who are perishing because they have not accepted the love of truth so that they may be saved. [11] Therefore, God is sending them a deceiving power so that they may believe the lie, [12] that all who have not believed the truth but have approved wrongdoing may be condemned.

[13]† But we ought to give thanks to God for you always, brothers loved by the Lord, because God chose you as the firstfruits for salvation through sanctification by the Spirit and belief in truth. [14] To this end he has [also] called you through our gospel to possess the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ. [15]† Therefore, brothers, stand firm and hold fast to the traditions that you were taught, either by an oral statement or by a letter of ours.

[16] May our Lord Jesus Christ himself and God our Father, who has loved us and given us everlasting encouragement and good hope through his grace, [17] encourage your hearts and strengthen them in every good deed and word.

III: CONCLUDING EXHORTATIONS

CHAPTER 3†

Request for Prayers. [1]* Finally, brothers, pray for us, so that the word of the Lord may speed forward and be glorified, as it did among you, [2] and that we may be delivered from perverse and wicked people, for not all have faith. [3]* But the Lord is faithful; he will strengthen you and guard you from the evil one. [4]* We are confident of you in the Lord that what we instruct you, you [both] are doing and will continue to do. [5] May the Lord direct your hearts to the love of God and to the endurance of Christ.

2, 3b-5: This incomplete sentence (anacoluthon, 4) recalls what the Thessalonians had already been taught, an apocalyptic scenario depicting, in terms borrowed especially from Dn 11, 36-37 and related verses, human self-assertiveness against God in the temple of God itself. The lawless one represents the climax of such activity in this account.

2, 4: Seat himself in the temple of God: a reflection of the language in Dn 7, 23-25; 8, 9-12; 9, 27; 11, 36-37; and 12, 11 about the attempt of Antiochus IV Epiphanes to set up a statue of Zeus in the Jerusalem temple and possibly of the Roman emperor Caligula to do a similar thing (Mk 13, 14). Here the imagery suggests an attempt to install someone in the place of God, claiming that he is a god (cf Ez 28, 2). Usually, it is the Jerusalem temple that is assumed to be meant; on the alternative view sketched above (see the note on 2, 1-17), the temple refers to the Christian community.

2, 6-7: What is restraining . . . the one who restrains: neuter and masculine, respectively, of a force and person holding back the lawless one. The Thessalonians know what is meant (6), but the terms, seemingly found only in this passage and in writings dependent on it, have been variously interpreted. Traditionally, v 6 has been applied to the Roman empire and v 7 to the Roman emperor (in Paul's day, Nero) as bulwarks holding back chaos (cf Rom 13, 1-7). A second interpretation suggests that cosmic or angelic powers are binding Satan (9) and so restraining him; some relate this to an anti-Christ figure (1 Jn 2, 18) or to Michael the archangel (Rv 12, 7-9; 20, 1-3). A more recent view suggests that it is the preaching of the Christian gospel that restrains the end, for in God's plan the end cannot come until the gospel is preached to all nations (Mk 13, 10); in that case, Paul as missionary preacher par excellence is "the one who restrains," whose removal (death) will bring the end (7). On the alternative view (see the note on 2, 1-17), the phrases should be referred to that which and to him who seizes (a prophet) in ecstasy so as to have him speak pseudo-oracles.

2, 7-12: The lawless one and the one who restrains are involved in an activity or process, the mystery of lawlessness, behind which Satan stands (9). The action of the Lord [Jesus] in overcoming the lawless one is described in Old Testament language (with the breath of his mouth; cf Is 11, 4; Jb 4, 9; Rv 19, 15). His coming is literally the Lord's "parousia." The biblical concept of the "holy war," eschatologically conceived, may underlie the imagery.

2, 13: As the firstfruits: there is also strong manuscript evidence for the reading, "God chose you from the beginning," thus providing a focus on God's activity from beginning to end; firstfruits is a Pauline term, however; cf Rom 8, 23; 11, 16; 16, 5, among other references.

2, 15: Reference to an oral statement and a letter (2) and the content here, including a formula of conclusion (cf 1 Cor 16, 13; Gal 5, 1), suggest that vv 1-15 or even 1-17 are to be taken as a literary unit, notwithstanding the incidental thanksgiving formula in v 13.

3, 1-18: The final chapter urges the Thessalonians to pray for Paul and his colleagues (1-2) and reiterates confidence in the Thessalonians (3-5), while admonishing them about a specific problem in their community that has grown out of the intense eschatological speculation, namely, not to work but to become instead disorderly busybodies (6-15). A benediction (16) and postscript in Paul's own hand round out the letter. On vv 17-18, cf the note on 2, 2.

Neglect of Work. [6]† We instruct you, brothers, in the name of [our] Lord Jesus Christ, to shun any brother who conducts himself in a disorderly way and not according to the tradition they received from us. [7] For you know how one must imitate us. For we did not act in a disorderly way among you, [8]* nor did we eat food received free from anyone. On the contrary, in toil and drudgery, night and day we worked, so as not to burden any of you. [9]* Not that we do not have the right. Rather, we wanted to present ourselves as a model for you, so that you might imitate us. [10]* In fact, when we were with you, we instructed you that if anyone was unwilling to work, neither should that one eat. [11]* We hear that some are conducting themselves among you in a disorderly way, by not keeping busy but minding the business of others. [12] Such people we instruct and urge in the Lord Jesus Christ to work quietly and to eat their own food. [13] But you, brothers, do not be remiss in doing good. [14] If anyone does not obey our word as expressed in this letter, take note of this person not to associate with him, that he may be put to shame. [15]* Do not regard him as an enemy but admonish him as a brother. [16]* May the Lord of peace himself give you peace at all times and in every way. The Lord be with all of you.

IV: FINAL GREETINGS

[17]* This greeting is in my own hand, Paul's. This is the sign in every letter; this is how I write. [18] The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with all of you.

† 3, 6: Some members of the community, probably because they regarded the parousia as imminent or the new age of the Lord to be already here (2, 2), had apparently ceased to work for a living. The disciplinary problem they posed could be rooted in distorted thinking about Paul's own teaching (cf 1 Thes 2, 16; 3, 3-4; 5, 4-5) or, more likely, in a forged letter (2, 2) and the type of teaching dealt with in 2, 1-15. The apostle's own moral teaching, reflected in his selfless labors for others, was rooted in a deep doctrinal concern for the gospel message (cf 1 Thes 2, 3-10).

The First Letter to

TIMOTHY

The three letters, First and Second Timothy and Titus, form a distinct group within the Pauline corpus. In the collection of letters by the Apostle to the Gentiles, they differ from the others in form and contents. All three suggest they were written late in Paul's career. The opponents are not "Judaizers" as in Galatians but false teachers stressing "knowledge" (gnōsis; see the note on 1 Tm 6, 20-21). Attention is given especially to correct doctrine and church organization. Jesus' second coming recedes into the background compared to references in Paul's earlier letters (though not Colossians and Ephesians). The three letters are addressed not to congregations but to those who shepherd congregations (Latin, pastores*). These letters were first named "Pastoral Epistles" in the eighteenth century because they all are concerned with the work of a pastor in caring for the community or communities under his charge.*

The first of the Pastorals, 1 Timothy, is presented as having been written from Macedonia. Timothy, whom Paul converted, was of mixed Jewish and Gentile parentage (Acts 16, 1-3). He was the apostle's companion on both the second and the third missionary journeys (Acts 16, 3; 19, 22) and was often sent by him on special missions (Acts 19, 22; 1 Cor 4, 17; 1 Thes 3, 2). In 1 Timothy (1, 3), he is described as the administrator of the entire Ephesian community.

The letter instructs Timothy on his duty to restrain false and useless teaching (1, 3-11; 4, 1-5; 6, 3-16) and proposes principles pertaining to his relationship with the older members of the community (5, 1-2) and with the presbyters (5, 17-22). It gives rules for aid to widows (5, 3-8) and their selection for charitable ministrations (5, 9-16) and also deals with liturgical celebrations (2, 1-15), selections for the offices of bishop and deacon (3, 1-13), relation of slaves with their masters (6, 1-2), and obligations of the wealthier members of the community (6, 17-19). This letter also reminds Timothy of the prophetic character of his office (1, 12-20) and encourages him in his exercise of it (4, 6-16). The central passage of the letter (3, 14-16) expresses the principal motive that should guide the conduct of Timothy—preservation of the purity of the church's doctrine against false teaching. On this same note the letter concludes (6, 20-21).

From the late second century to the nineteenth, Pauline authorship of the three Pastoral Epistles went unchallenged. Since then, the attribution of these letters to Paul has been questioned. Most scholars are convinced that Paul could not have been responsible for the vocabulary and style, the concept of church organization, or the theological expressions found in these letters. A second group believes, on the basis of statistical evidence, that the vocabulary and style are Pauline, even if at first sight the contrary seems to be the case. They state that the concept of church organization in the letters is not as advanced as the questioners of Pauline authorship hold since the notion of hierarchical order in a religious community existed in Israel before the time of Christ, as evidenced in the Dead Sea Scrolls. Finally, this group sees affinities between the theological thought of the Pastorals and that of the unquestionably genuine letters of Paul. Other scholars, while conceding a degree of validity to the positions mentioned above, suggest that the apostle made use of a secretary who was responsible for the composition of the letters. A fourth group of scholars believes that these letters are the work of a compiler, that they are based on traditions about Paul in his later years, and that they include, in varying amounts, actual fragments of genuine Pauline correspondence.

If Paul is considered the more immediate author, the Pastorals are to be dated between the end of his first Roman imprisonment (Acts 28, 16) and his execution under Nero (A.D. 63-67); if they are regarded as only more remotely Pauline, their date may be as late as the early second century. In spite of these problems of authorship and dating, the Pastorals are illustrative of early Christian life and remain an important element of canonical scripture.

The principal divisions of the First Letter to Timothy are the following:

I: Address (1, 1-2)
II: Sound Teaching (1, 3-20)
III: Problems of Discipline (2, 1—4, 16)
IV: Duties toward Others (5, 1—6, 2a)
V: False Teaching and True Wealth (6, 2b-19)
VI: Final Recommendation and Warning (6, 20-21)

I: ADDRESS

CHAPTER 1

Greeting.† 1 Paul, an apostle of Christ Jesus by command of God our savior and of Christ Jesus our hope, 2* to Timothy, my true child in faith: grace, mercy, and peace from God the Father and Christ Jesus our Lord.

II: SOUND TEACHING

Warning against False Doctrine.† 3 I repeat the request I made of you when I was on my way to Macedonia, that you stay in Ephesus to instruct certain people not to teach false doctrines 4*† or to concern themselves with myths and endless genealogies, which promote speculations rather than the plan of God that is to be received by faith. 5* The aim of this instruction is love from a pure heart, a good conscience, and a sincere faith. 6* Some people have deviated from these and turned to meaningless talk, 7 wanting to be teachers of the law, but without understanding either what they are saying or what they assert with such assurance.

8*† We know that the law is good, provided that one uses it as law, 9 with the understanding that law is meant not for a righteous person but for the lawless and unruly, the godless and sinful, the unholy and profane, those who kill their fathers or mothers, murderers, 10*† the unchaste, practicing homosexuals, kidnapers, liars, perjurers, and whatever else is opposed to sound teaching, 11* according to the glorious gospel of the blessed God, with which I have been entrusted.

Gratitude for God's Mercy.† 12 I am grateful to him who has strengthened me, Christ Jesus our Lord, because he considered me trustworthy in appointing me to the ministry. 13* I was once a blasphemer and a persecutor and an arrogant man, but I have been mercifully treated because I acted out of ignorance in my unbelief. 14* Indeed, the grace of our Lord has been abundant, along with the faith and love that are in Christ Jesus. 15*† This saying is trustworthy and

1, 1-2: For the Pauline use of the conventional epistolary form, see the note on Rom 1, 1-7.

1, 3-7: Here Timothy's initial task in Ephesus (cf Acts 20, 17-35) is outlined: to suppress the idle religious speculations, probably about Old Testament figures (3-4, but see the note on 6, 20-21), which do not contribute to the development of love within the community (5) but rather encourage similar useless conjectures (6-7).

1, 4: The plan of God that is to be received by faith: the Greek may also possibly mean "God's trustworthy plan" or "the training in faith that God requires."

1, 8-11: Those responsible for the speculations that are to be suppressed by Timothy do not present the Old Testament from the Christian viewpoint. The Christian values the Old Testament not as a system of law but as the first stage in God's revelation of his saving plan, which is brought to fulfillment in the good news of salvation through faith in Jesus Christ.

1, 10: Practicing homosexuals: see 1 Cor 6, 9 and the note there.

1, 12-17: Present gratitude for the Christian apostleship leads Paul to recall an earlier time when he had been a fierce persecutor of the Christian communities (cf Acts 26, 9-11) until his conversion by intervention of divine mercy through the appearance of Jesus. This and his subsequent apostolic experience testify to the saving purpose of Jesus' incarnation. The fact of his former ignorance of the truth has not kept the apostle from regarding himself as having been the worst of sinners (15). Yet he was chosen to be an apostle, that God might manifest his firm will to save sinful humanity through Jesus Christ (16). The recounting of so great a mystery leads to a spontaneous outpouring of adoration (17).

1, 15: This saying is trustworthy: this phrase regularly introduces in the Pastorals a basic truth of early Christian faith; cf 3, 1; 4, 9; 2 Tm 2, 11; Ti 3, 8.

deserves full acceptance: Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners. Of these I am the foremost. [16] But for that reason I was mercifully treated, so that in me, as the foremost, Christ Jesus might display all his patience as an example for those who would come to believe in him for everlasting life. [17*†] To the king of ages, incorruptible, invisible, the only God, honor and glory forever and ever. Amen.

Responsibility of Timothy.† [18*†] I entrust this charge to you, Timothy,
my child, in accordance with the prophetic words once spoken about you.
Through them may you fight a good fight [19*] by having faith and a good conscience. Some, by rejecting conscience, have made a shipwreck of their faith, [20*†] among them Hyme-naeus and Alexander, whom I have handed over to Satan to be taught not to blaspheme.

III: PROBLEMS OF DISCIPLINE

CHAPTER 2

Prayer and Conduct.† [1*] First of all,
then, I ask that supplications, prayers,
petitions, and thanksgivings be offered for everyone, [2] for kings and for all in authority, that we may lead a quiet and tranquil life in all devotion and dignity.
[3*] This is good and pleasing to God our savior, [4*] who wills everyone to be saved and to come to knowledge of the truth.

[5*] For there is one God.
There is also one mediator between God and the human race,
Christ Jesus, himself human,
[6*†] who gave himself as ransom for all.

This was the testimony at the proper time. [7*] For this I was appointed preacher and apostle (I am speaking the truth, I am not lying), teacher of the Gentiles in faith and truth.

[8*†] It is my wish, then, that in every place the men should pray, lifting up holy hands, without anger or argument.
[9*] Similarly, [too,] women should adorn themselves with proper conduct, with modesty and self-control, not with braided hairstyles and gold ornaments, or pearls, or expensive clothes, [10*] but rather, as befits women who profess reverence for God, with good deeds.
[11*] A woman must receive instruction
silently and under complete control.
[12*†] I do not permit a woman to teach or to have authority over a man. She must be quiet. [13*] For Adam was formed first, then Eve. [14*] Further, Adam was not deceived, but the woman was deceived and transgressed. [15*] But she will be saved through motherhood, provided women persevere in faith and love and holiness, with self-control.

1, 17: King of ages: through Semitic influence, the Greek expression could mean "everlasting king"; it could also mean "king of the universe."

1, 18-20: Timothy is to be mindful of his calling, which is here compared to the way Barnabas and Saul were designated by Christ as prophets for missionary service; cf Acts 13, 1-3. Such is probably the sense of the allusion to the prophetic words (18). His task is not to yield, whether in doctrine or in conduct, to erroneous opinions, taking warning from what has already happened at Ephesus in the case of Hymenaeus and Alexander (19-20).

1, 18: The prophetic words once spoken about you: the Greek may also be translated, "the prophecies that led (me) to you." It probably refers to testimonies given by charismatic figures in the Christian communities. Fight a good fight: this translation preserves the play on words in Greek. The Greek terms imply a lengthy engagement in battle and might well be translated "wage a good campaign."

1, 20: Hymenaeus: mentioned in 2 Tm 2, 17 as saying that the resurrection has already taken place (in baptism). Alexander: probably the Alexander mentioned in 2 Tm 4, 14 as the coppersmith who "did me a great deal of harm." Whom I have handed over to Satan: the same terms are used in the condemnation of the incestuous man in 1 Cor 5, 5.

2, 1-7: This marked insistence that the liturgical prayer of the community concern itself with the needs of all, whether Christian or not, and especially of those in authority, may imply that a disposition existed at Ephesus to refuse prayer for pagans. In actuality, such prayer aids the community to achieve peaceful relationships with non-Christians (2) and contributes to salvation, since it derives its value from the presence within the community of Christ, who is the one and only savior of all (3-6). The vital apostolic mission to the Gentiles (7) reflects Christ's purpose of universal salvation.

Verse 5 contains what may well have been a very primitive creed. Some interpreters have called it a Christian version of the Jewish shema: "Hear, O Israel, the LORD is our God, the LORD alone . . ." (Dt 6, 4-5). The assertion in v 7, "I am speaking the truth, I am not lying," reminds one of similar affirmations in Rom 9, 1; 2 Cor 11, 31; and Gal 1, 20.

2, 6: The testimony: to make sense of this overly concise phrase, many manuscripts supply "to which" (or "to whom"); two others add "was given." The translation has supplied "this was."

2, 8-15: The prayer of the community should be unmarred by internal dissension (8); cf Mt 5, 21-26; 6, 14; Mk 11, 25. At the liturgical assembly the dress of women should be appropriate to the occasion (9); their chief adornment is to be reputation for good works (10). Women are not to take part in the charismatic activity of the assembly (11-12; cf 1 Cor 14, 34) or exercise authority; their conduct there should reflect the role of man's helpmate (13; cf Gn 2, 18) and not the later relationship of Eve to Adam (14; cf Gn 3, 6-7). As long as women perform their role as wives and mothers in faith and love, their salvation is assured (15).

2, 12: A man: this could also mean "her husband."

Qualifications of Various Ministers.† 1*† This saying is trustworthy: whoever aspires to the office of bishop desires a noble task. 2 Therefore, a bishop must be irreproachable, married only once, temperate, self-controlled, decent, hospitable, able to teach, 3* not a drunkard, not aggressive, but gentle, not contentious, not a lover of money. 4 He must manage his own household well, keeping his children under control with perfect dignity; 5 for if a man does not know how to manage his own household, how can he take care of the church of God? 6† He should not be a recent convert, so that he may not become conceited and thus incur the devil's punishment. 7* He must also have a good reputation among outsiders, so that he may not fall into disgrace, the devil's trap.

8† Similarly, deacons must be dignified, not deceitful, not addicted to drink, not greedy for sordid gain, 9 holding fast to the mystery of the faith with a clear conscience. 10 Moreover, they should be tested first; then, if there is nothing against them, let them serve as deacons. 11*† Women, similarly, should be dignified, not slanderers, but temperate and faithful in everything. 12 Deacons may be married only once and must manage their children and their households well. 13 Thus those who serve well as deacons gain good standing and much confidence in their faith in Christ Jesus.

The Mystery of Our Religion.† 14 I am writing you about these matters, although I hope to visit you soon. 15* But if I should be delayed, you should know how to behave in the household of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and foundation of truth. 16*† Undeniably great is the mystery of devotion,

> Who was manifested in the flesh,
> vindicated in the spirit,
> seen by angels,
> proclaimed to the Gentiles,
> believed in throughout the world,
> taken up in glory.

CHAPTER 4

False Asceticism.† 1* Now the Spirit explicitly says that in the last times some will turn away from the faith by paying attention to deceitful spirits and demonic instructions 2 through the hypocrisy of liars with branded consciences. 3* They forbid marriage and require abstinence from foods that God created to be received with thanksgiving by those who believe and know the truth. 4* For everything created by God is good, and nothing is to be rejected when received with thanksgiving,

3, 1-7: The passage begins by commending those who aspire to the office of bishop (episkopos; see the note on Phil 1, 1) within the community, but this first sentence (1) may also imply a warning about the great responsibilities involved. The writer proceeds to list the qualifications required: personal stability and graciousness; talent for teaching (2); moderation in habits and temperament (3); managerial ability (4); and experience in Christian living (5-6). Moreover, the candidate's previous life should provide no grounds for the charge that he did not previously practice what he now preaches. No list of qualifications for presbyters appears in 1 Tm. The presbyter-bishops here and in Ti (see the note on Ti 1, 5-9) lack certain functions reserved here for Paul and Timothy.

3, 1: This saying is trustworthy: the saying introduced is so unlike others after this phrase that some later Western manuscripts read, "This saying is popular." It is understood by some interpreters as concluding the preceding section (2, 8-15). Bishop: literally, "overseer"; see the note on Phil 1, 1.

3, 6: The devil's punishment: this phrase could mean the punishment once incurred by the devil (objective genitive) or a punishment brought about by the devil (subjective genitive).

3, 8-13: Deacons, besides possessing the virtue of moderation (8), are to be outstanding for their faith (9) and well respected within the community (10). Women in the same role, although some interpreters take them to mean wives of deacons, must be dignified, temperate, dedicated, and not given to malicious talebearing (11). Deacons must have shown stability in marriage and have a good record with their families (12), for such experience prepares them well for the exercise of their ministry on behalf of the community (13). See further the note on Phil 1, 1.

3, 11: Women: this seems to refer to women deacons but may possibly mean wives of deacons. The former is preferred because the word is used absolutely; if deacons' wives were meant, a possessive "their" would be expected. Moreover, they are also introduced by the word "similarly," as in v 8; this parallel suggests that they too exercised ecclesiastical functions.

3, 14-16: In case there is some delay in the visit to Timothy at Ephesus planned for the near future, the present letter is being sent on ahead to arm and enlighten him in his task of preserving sound Christian conduct in the Ephesian church. The care he must exercise over this community is required by the profound nature of Christianity. It centers in Christ, appearing in human flesh, vindicated by the holy Spirit; the mystery of his person was revealed to the angels, announced to the Gentiles, and accepted by them in faith. He himself was taken up (through his resurrection and ascension) to the divine glory (16). This passage apparently includes part of a liturgical hymn used among the Christian communities in and around Ephesus. It consists of three couplets in typical Hebrew balance: flesh-spirit (contrast), seen-proclaimed (complementary), world-glory (contrast).

3, 16: Who: the reference is to Christ, who is himself "the mystery of our devotion." Some predominantly Western manuscripts read "which," harmonizing the gender of the pronoun with that of the Greek word for mystery; many later (eighth/ninth century on), predominantly Byzantine manuscripts read "God," possibly for theological reasons.

4, 1-5: Doctrinal deviations from the true Christian message within the church have been prophesied, though the origin of the prophecy is not specified (1-2); cf Acts 20, 29-30. The letter warns against a false asceticism that prohibits marriage and regards certain foods as forbidden, though they are part of God's good creation (3).

5† for it is made holy by the invocation of God in prayer.
Counsel to Timothy.† 6 If you will give these instructions to the brothers, you will be a good minister of Christ Jesus, nourished on the words of the faith and of the sound teaching you have followed. 7* Avoid profane and silly myths. Train yourself for devotion, 8* for, while physical training is of limited value, devotion is valuable in every respect, since it holds a promise of life
both for the present and for the future.
9* This saying is trustworthy and deserves full acceptance. 10*† For this we toil and struggle, because we have set our hope on the living God, who is the savior of all, especially of those who believe.
11† Command and teach these things.
12*† Let no one have contempt for your youth, but set an example for those who believe, in speech, conduct, love, faith, and purity. 13† Until I arrive, attend to the reading, exhortation, and teaching.
14*† Do not neglect the gift you have,
which was conferred on you through the prophetic word with the imposition of hands of the presbyterate. 15 Be diligent in these matters, be absorbed in them, so that your progress may be evident to everyone. 16 Attend to yourself and to your teaching; persevere in both tasks, for by doing so you will save both yourself and those who listen to you.

IV: DUTIES TOWARD OTHERS

CHAPTER 5

1*† Do not rebuke an older man, but appeal to him as a father. Treat younger men as brothers, 2 older women as mothers, and younger women as sisters with complete purity.
Rules for Widows. 3 Honor widows who are truly widows. 4 But if a widow has children or grandchildren, let these first learn to perform their religious duty to their own family and to make recompense to their parents, for this is pleasing to God. 5* The real widow, who is all alone, has set her hope on God and continues in supplications and prayers night and day. 6 But the one who is self-indulgent is dead while she lives. 7 Command this, so that they may be irreproachable. 8 And whoever does not provide for relatives and especially family members has denied the faith and is worse than an unbeliever.
9 Let a widow be enrolled if she is not less than sixty years old, married only once, 10* with a reputation for good works, namely, that she has raised children, practiced hospitality, washed the feet of the holy ones, helped those in distress, involved herself in every good work. 11 But exclude younger widows,
for when their sensuality estranges
them from Christ, they want to marry 12 and will incur condemnation for breaking their first pledge. 13* And furthermore, they learn to be idlers, going about from house to house, and not only idlers but gossips and busybodies as well, talking about things that ought not to be mentioned. 14* So I would like younger widows to marry, have children, and manage a home, so as to give the adversary no pretext for maligning us. 15 For some have already turned away to follow Satan. 16† If any woman believer has widowed relatives, she

4, 5: The invocation of God in prayer: literally, "the word of God and petition." The use of "word of God" without an article in Greek suggests that it refers to the name of God being invoked in blessing rather than to the "word of God" proclaimed to the community.

4, 6-10: Timothy is urged to be faithful, both in his teaching and in his own life, as he looks only to God for salvation.

4, 10: Struggle: other manuscripts and patristic witnesses read "suffer reproach."

4, 11-16: Timothy is urged to preach and teach with confidence, relying on the gifts and the mission that God has bestowed on him.

4, 12: Youth: some commentators find this reference a sign of pseudepigraphy. Timothy had joined Paul as a missionary already in A.D. 49, some fifteen years before the earliest supposed date of composition.

4, 13: Reading: the Greek word refers to private or public reading. Here, it probably designates the public reading of scripture in the Christian assembly.

4, 14: Prophetic word: this may mean the utterance of a Christian prophet designating the candidate or a prayer of blessing accompanying the rite. Imposition of hands: this gesture was used in the Old Testament to signify the transmission of authority from Moses to Joshua (Nm 27, 18-23; Dt 34, 9). The early Christian community used it as a symbol of installation into an office: the Seven (Acts 6, 6) and Paul and Barnabas (Acts 13, 3). Of the presbyterate: this would mean that each member of the college of presbyters imposed hands and appears to contradict 2 Tm 1, 6, in which Paul says that he imposed hands on Timothy. This latter text, however, does not exclude participation by others in the rite. Some prefer to translate "for the presbyterate," and thus understand it to designate the office into which Timothy was installed rather than the agents who installed him.

5, 1-16: After a few words of general advice based on common sense (1-2), the letter takes up, in its several aspects, the subject of widows. The first responsibility for their care belongs to the family circle, not to the Christian community as such (3-4.16). The widow left without the aid of relatives may benefit the community by her prayer, and the community should consider her material sustenance its responsibility (5-8). Widows who wish to work directly for the Christian community should not be accepted unless they are well beyond the probability of marriage, i.e., sixty years of age, married only once, and with a reputation for good works (9-10). Younger widows are apt to be troublesome and should be encouraged to remarry (11-15).

5, 16: Woman believer: some early Latin manuscripts and Fathers have a masculine here, while most later manuscripts and patristic quotations conflate the two readings, perhaps to avoid unfair restriction to women.

must assist them; the church is not to be burdened, so that it will be able to help those who are truly widows.

Rules for Presbyters.† [17] Presbyters who preside well deserve double honor, especially those who toil in preaching and teaching. [18]* For the scripture says, "You shall not muzzle an ox when it is threshing," and, "A worker deserves his pay." [19]* Do not accept an accusation against a presbyter unless it is supported by two or three witnesses. [20]* Reprimand publicly those who do sin, so that the rest also will be afraid. [21] I charge you before God and Christ Jesus and the elect angels to keep these rules without prejudice, doing nothing out of favoritism. [22]* Do not lay hands too readily on anyone, and do not share in another's sins. Keep yourself pure. [23] Stop drinking only water, but have a little wine for the sake of your stomach and your frequent illnesses.

[24] Some people's sins are public, preceding them to judgment; but other people are followed by their sins. [25] Similarly, good works are also public; and even those that are not cannot remain hidden.

CHAPTER 6

Rules for Slaves.† [1]† Those who are under the yoke of slavery must regard their masters as worthy of full respect, so that the name of God and our teaching may not suffer abuse. [2]* Those whose masters are believers must not take advantage of them because they are brothers but must give better service because those who will profit from their work are believers and are beloved.

V: FALSE TEACHING AND TRUE WEALTH

†Teach and urge these things. [3]* Whoever teaches something different and does not agree with the sound words of our Lord Jesus Christ and the religious teaching [4] is conceited, understanding nothing, and has a morbid disposition for arguments and verbal disputes. From these come envy, rivalry, insults, evil suspicions, [5]* and mutual friction among people with corrupted minds, who are deprived of the truth, supposing religion to be a means of gain. [6]† Indeed, religion with contentment is a great gain. [7] For we brought nothing into the world, just as we shall not be able to take anything out of it. [8]* If we have food and clothing, we shall be content with that. [9]* Those who want to be rich are falling into temptation and into a trap and into many foolish and harmful desires, which plunge them into ruin and destruction. [10] For the love of money is the root of all evils, and some people in their desire for it have strayed from the faith and have pierced themselves with many pains.

Exhortations to Timothy.† [11]† But you, man of God, avoid all this. Instead, pursue righteousness, devotion, faith, love, patience, and gentleness. [12]* Compete well for the faith. Lay hold of eternal life, to which you were called when you made the noble confession in the presence of many witnesses. [13]* I charge [you] before God, who gives life to all things, and before Christ Jesus, who gave testimony under Pontius

†5, 17-25: The function of presbyters is not exactly the same as that of the episkopos, "bishop" (3, 1); in fact, the relation of the two at the time of this letter is obscure (but cf the note on Ti 1, 5-9). The Pastorals seem to reflect a transitional stage that developed in many regions of the church into the monarchical episcopate of the second and third centuries. The presbyters possess the responsibility of preaching and teaching, for which functions they are supported by the community (17-18). The realization that their position subjects them to adverse criticism is implied in the direction to Timothy (19-20) to make sure of the truth of any accusation against them before public reproof is given. He must be as objective as possible in weighing charges against presbyters (21), learning from his experience to take care in selecting them (22). Some scholars take v 22 as a reference not to ordination of presbyters but to reconciliation of public sinners. The letter now sounds an informal note of personal concern in its advice to Timothy not to be so ascetic that he even avoids wine (23). Judgment concerning the fitness of candidates to serve as presbyters is easy with persons of open conduct, more difficult and prolonged with those of greater reserve (24-25).

6, 1-2: Compare the tables for household duties, such as that of Col 3, 18—4, 1. Domestic relationships derive new meaning from the Christian faith.

6, 1: Our teaching: this refers to the teaching of the Christian community.

6, 2b-10: Timothy is exhorted to maintain steadfastly the position outlined in this letter, not allowing himself to be pressured into any other course. He must realize that false teachers can be discerned by their pride, envy, quarrelsomeness, and greed for material gain. Verse 6 is rather obscure and is interpreted, and therefore translated, variously. The suggestion seems to be that the important gain that religion brings is spiritual, but that there is material gain, too, up to the point of what is needed for physical sustenance (cf 17-19).

6, 6: Contentment: the word autarkeia is a technical Greek philosophical term for the virtue of independence from material goods (Aristotle, Cynics, Stoics).

6, 11-16: Timothy's position demands total dedication to God and faultless witness to Christ (11-14) operating from an awareness, through faith, of the coming revelation in Jesus of the invisible God (15-16).

6, 11: Man of God: a title applied to Moses and the prophets (Dt 33, 1; 1 Sm 2, 27; 1 Kgs 12, 22; 13, 1; etc.).

Pilate for the noble confession, [14] to keep the commandment without stain or reproach until the appearance of our Lord Jesus Christ [15]* that the blessed and only ruler will make manifest at the proper time, the King of kings and Lord of lords, [16]* who alone has immortality, who dwells in unapproachable light, and whom no human being has seen or can see. To him be honor and eternal power. Amen.

Right Use of Wealth.† [17]* Tell the rich in the present age not to be proud and not to rely on so uncertain a thing as wealth but rather on God, who richly provides us with all things for our enjoyment. [18] Tell them to do good, to be rich in good works, to be generous, ready to share, [19]* thus accumulating as treasure a good foundation for the future, so as to win the life that is true life.

VI: FINAL RECOMMENDATION AND WARNING†

[20]* O Timothy, guard what has been entrusted to you. Avoid profane babbling and the absurdities of so-called knowledge. [21]* By professing it, some people have deviated from the faith.

Grace be with all of you.

17: Ps 62, 11; Lk 12, 20.
19: Mt 6, 20.
20: 2 Tm 1, 14 / 4, 7.
21: 1, 6; 2 Tm 2, 18.

† 6, 17-19: Timothy is directed to instruct the rich, advising them to make good use of their wealth by aiding the poor.

6, 20-21: A final solemn warning against the heretical teachers, with what seems to be a specific reference to gnosticism, the great rival and enemy of the church for two centuries and more (the Greek word for "knowledge" is gnōsis). If gnosticism is being referred to here, it is probable that the warnings against "speculations" and "myths and genealogies" (cf especially 1, 4; Ti 3, 9) involve allusions to that same kind of heresy. Characteristic of the various gnostic systems of speculation was an elaborate mythology of innumerable superhuman intermediaries, on a descending scale ("genealogies"), between God and the world. Thus would be explained the emphasis upon Christ's being the one mediator (as in 2, 5). Although fully developed gnosticism belonged to the second and later centuries, there are signs that incipient forms of it belonged to Paul's own period.

The Second Letter to

TIMOTHY

The authorship and date of this letter, as one of the Pastoral Epistles, are discussed in the Introduction to the First Letter to Timothy.

The tone here is more personal than in First Timothy, for this letter addresses Timothy in vivid terms (1, 6-14; 2, 1-13) and depicts Paul's courage and hope in the face of discouragements late in the course of his apostolic ministry (1, 15-18; 3, 10-17; 4, 9-18). Indeed, the letter takes on the character of a final exhortation and testament from Paul to the younger Timothy (4, 1-8). Paul is portrayed as a prisoner (1, 8.16; 2, 9) in Rome (1, 17), and there is a hint that Timothy may be in Ephesus (2, 17). The letter reveals that, with rare exceptions, Christians have not rallied to Paul's support (1, 15-18) and takes a pessimistic view of the outcome of his case (4, 6). It describes Paul as fully aware of what impends, looking to God, not to human beings, for his deliverance (4, 3-8.18). It recalls his mission days with Timothy (1, 3-5; cf Acts 16, 1-4). It points to his preaching of the gospel as the reason for his imprisonment and offers Timothy, as a motive for steadfastness, his own example of firmness in faith despite adverse circumstances (1, 6-14). The letter suggests that Timothy should prepare others to replace himself as Paul has prepared Timothy to replace him (2, 1-2). Paul urges him not to desist out of fear from preserving and spreading the Christian message (2, 3-7). It presents the resurrection of Jesus and his messianic role as the heart of the gospel for which Paul has been ready to lay down his life (2, 8-9) and thus not only to express his own conviction fully but to support the conviction of others (2, 10-13).

This letter, like the preceding one, urges Timothy to protect the community from the inevitable impact of false teaching (2, 14—3, 9), without fear of the personal attacks that may result (3, 10-13). It recommends that he rely on the power of the scriptures, on proclamation of the word, and on sound doctrine (3, 14—4, 2), without being troubled by those who do not accept him (4, 3-5). The letter poignantly observes in passing that Paul has need of his reading materials and his cloak (4, 13) and, what will be best of all, a visit from Timothy.

On the theory of authorship by Paul himself, Second Timothy appears to be the last of the three Pastoral Epistles. The many scholars who argue that the Pastorals are products of the Pauline school often incline toward Second Timothy as the earliest of the three and the one most likely to have actual fragments of material from Paul himself.

The principal divisions of the Second Letter to Timothy are the following:

- I: Address (1, 1-5)
- II: Exhortations to Timothy (1, 6—2, 13)
- III: Instructions Concerning False Teaching (2, 14—4, 8)
- IV: Personal Requests and Final Greetings (4, 9-22)

I: ADDRESS

CHAPTER 1

Greeting.† [1]† Paul, an apostle of Christ Jesus by the will of God for the promise of life in Christ Jesus, [2] to Timothy, my dear child: grace, mercy, and peace from God the Father and Christ Jesus our Lord.

1, 1: 1 Tm 4, 8.

† 1, 1-2: For the formula of address and greeting, see the note on Rom 1, 1-7.

1, 1: The promise of life in Christ Jesus: that God grants through union with Christ in faith and love; cf Col 3, 4; 1 Tm 4, 8.

Thanksgiving. 3*† I am grateful to God, whom I worship with a clear conscience as my ancestors did, as I remember you constantly in my prayers, night and day. 4† I yearn to see you again, recalling your tears, so that I may be filled with joy, 5* as I recall your sincere faith that first lived in your grandmother Lois and in your mother Eunice and that I am confident lives also in you.

II: EXHORTATIONS TO TIMOTHY

The Gifts Timothy Has Received. 6*† For this reason, I remind you to stir into flame the gift of God that you have through the imposition of my hands. 7* For God did not give us a spirit of cowardice but rather of power and love and self-control. 8*† So do not be ashamed of your testimony to our Lord, nor of me, a prisoner for his sake; but bear your share of hardship for the gospel with the strength that comes from God.

9*† He saved us and called us to a holy life, not according to our works but according to his own design and the grace bestowed on us in Christ Jesus before time began, 10* but now made manifest through the appearance of our savior Christ Jesus, who destroyed death and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel, 11*† for which I was appointed preacher and apostle and teacher. 12*† On this account I am suffering these things; but I am not ashamed, for I know him in whom I have believed and am confident that he is able to guard what has been entrusted to me until that day. 13* Take as your norm the sound words that you heard from me, in the faith and love that are in Christ Jesus. 14* Guard this rich trust with the help of the holy Spirit that dwells within us.

Paul's Suffering. 15*† You know that everyone in Asia deserted me, including Phygelus and Hermogenes. 16*† May the Lord grant mercy to the family of Onesiphorus because he often gave me new heart and was not ashamed of my chains. 17 But when he came to Rome, he promptly searched for me and found me. 18*† May the Lord grant him to find mercy from the Lord on that day. And you know very well the services he rendered in Ephesus.

CHAPTER 2

Timothy's Conduct.† 1 So you, my child, be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus. 2 And what you heard from me through many witnesses entrust to faithful people who will have the ability to teach others as well. 3* Bear your share of hardship along with me like a good soldier of Christ Jesus. 4* To satisfy the one who recruited him, a soldier does not become entangled in the business affairs of life. 5* Similarly, an athlete cannot receive the winner's crown except by competing according to the rules. 6* The hardworking farmer ought to have the first share of the crop. 7* Reflect on what I am saying, for the Lord will give you understanding in everything.

6: 1 Cor 9, 7-10.
7: Prv 2, 6.

1, 3: As my ancestors did: this emphasizes the continuity of Judaism and Christianity; for a similar view, see Rom 9, 3-5; Phil 3, 4-6.

1, 4-5: Purportedly written from prison in Rome (8.17; 4, 6-8) shortly before the writer's death, the letter recalls the earlier sorrowful parting from Timothy, commending him for his faith and expressing the longing to see him again.

1, 6: The gift of God: the grace resulting from the conferral of an ecclesiastical office. The imposition of my hands: see the note on 1 Tm 4, 14.

1, 8: Do not be ashamed of your testimony to our Lord: i.e., of preaching and suffering for the sake of the gospel.

1, 9-10: Redemption from sin and the call to holiness of life are not won by personal deeds but are freely and graciously bestowed according to God's eternal plan; cf Eph 1, 4.

1, 11: Teacher: the overwhelming majority of manuscripts and Fathers read "teacher of the nations," undoubtedly a harmonization with 1 Tm 2, 7.

1, 12: He is able to guard . . . until that day: the intervening words can also be translated "what I have entrusted to him" (i.e., the fruit of his ministry) as well as "what has been entrusted to me" (i.e., the faith). The same difficult term occurs in v 14, where it is modified by the adjective "rich" and used without a possessive.

1, 15: Keen disappointment is expressed, here and later (4, 16), that the Christians of the province of Asia, especially Phygelus and Hermogenes, should have abandoned the writer and done nothing to defend his case in court.

1, 16-18: The family of Onesiphorus because he . . . of my chains: Onesiphorus seems to have died before this letter was written. His family is mentioned twice (here and in 4, 19), though it was Onesiphorus himself who was helpful to Paul in prison and rendered much service to the community of Ephesus. Because the apostle complains of abandonment by all in Asia during his second imprisonment and trial, the assistance of Onesiphorus seems to have been given to Paul during his first Roman imprisonment (A.D. 61-63).

1, 18: Lord . . . Lord: the first "Lord" here seems to refer to Christ, the second "Lord" to the Father.

2, 1-7: This passage manifests a characteristic deep concern for safeguarding the faith and faithfully transmitting it through trustworthy people (1-2; cf 1, 14; 1 Tm 6, 20; Ti 1, 9). Comparisons to the soldier's detachment, the athlete's sportsmanship, and the farmer's arduous work as the price of recompense (4-6) emphasize the need of singleness of purpose in preaching the word, even at the cost of hardship, for the sake of Christ (3).

8* † Remember Jesus Christ, raised from the dead, a descendant of David:
such is my gospel, 9* for which I am suffering, even to the point of chains, like a criminal. But the word of God is not chained. 10* Therefore, I bear with everything for the sake of those who are chosen, so that they too may obtain the salvation that is in Christ Jesus, together with eternal glory. 11* This saying is trustworthy:

If we have died with him
we shall also live with him; 12* if we persevere
we shall also reign with him.
But if we deny him
he will deny us.
13* If we are unfaithful
he remains faithful,
for he cannot deny himself.

III: INSTRUCTIONS CONCERNING FALSE TEACHING

Warning against Useless Disputes. † 14* † Remind people of these things and charge them before God to stop disputing about words. This serves no useful purpose since it harms those who listen.
15* Be eager to present yourself as acceptable to God, a workman who causes
no disgrace, imparting the word of truth without deviation. 16* Avoid profane, idle talk, for such people will become more and more godless, 17* and their teaching will spread like gangrene.
Among them are Hymenaeus and Phi-letus, 18* who have deviated from the truth by saying that [the] resurrection has already taken place and are upsetting the faith of some. 19* Nevertheless, God's solid foundation stands, bearing this inscription, "The Lord knows those who are his"; and, "Let everyone who calls upon the name of the Lord avoid evil."

20 In a large household there are vessels not only of gold and silver but also of wood and clay, some for lofty and others for humble use. 21* If anyone cleanses himself of these things, he will be a vessel for lofty use, dedicated, beneficial to the master of the house, ready for every good work. 22* † So turn from youthful desires and pursue righteousness, faith, love, and peace, along with those who call on the Lord with purity of heart. 23* Avoid foolish and ignorant debates, for you know that they breed quarrels. 24* A slave of the Lord should not quarrel, but should be gentle with everyone, able to teach, tolerant, 25* correcting opponents with kindness.
It may be that God will grant them repentance that leads to knowledge of the truth, 26* † and that they may return to their senses out of the devil's snare, where they are entrapped by him, for his will.

CHAPTER 3

The Dangers of the Last Days. †

rifying times in the last days. 2* People will be self-centered and lovers of money, proud, haughty, abusive, disobedient to their parents, ungrateful, irreligious, 3 callous, implacable, slanderous, licentious, brutal, hating what is good, 4 traitors, reckless, conceited,

† 2, 8-13: The section begins with a sloganlike summary of Paul's gospel about Christ (8) and concludes with what may be part of an early Christian hymn (11b-12a; most exegetes include the rest of v 12 and all of v 13 as part of the quotation). The poetic lines suggest that through baptism Christians die spiritually with Christ and hope to live with him and reign with him forever, but the Christian life includes endurance, witness, and even suffering, as the final judgment will show and as Paul's own case makes clear; while he is imprisoned for preaching the gospel (9), his sufferings are helpful to the elect for obtaining the salvation and glory available in Christ (10), who will be true to those who are faithful and will disown those who deny him (12-13).

2, 14-19: For those who dispute about mere words (cf 23-24) and indulge in irreligious talk to the detriment of their listeners (16-19), see the notes on 1 Tm 1, 3-7; 6, 20-21. Hymenaeus and Philetus (17), while accepting the Christian's mystical death and resurrection in Christ through baptism, claimed that baptized Christians are already risen with Christ in this life and thus that there is no future bodily resurrection or eternal glory to come. The first quotation in v 19 is from Nm 16, 5; the other quotation is from some unidentified Jewish or Christian writing.

2, 14: Before God: many ancient manuscripts read "before the Lord."

2, 22: Those who call on the Lord: those who believe in Christ and worship him as Lord, i.e., Christians (Acts 9, 14-16.20-21; Rom 10, 12-13; cf 19, literally, "Everyone who names the name of the Lord").

2, 26: Some interpreters would render this passage, "Thus they may come to their senses and, forced to do his (i.e., God's) will, may escape the devil's trap." This interpretation of the Greek is possible, but the one accepted in the text seems more likely.

3, 1-9: The moral depravity and false teaching that will be rampant in the last days are already at work (1-5). The frivolous and superficial, too, devoid of the true spirit of religion, will be easy victims of those who pervert them by falsifying the truth (6-8), just as Jannes and Jambres, Pharaoh's magicians of Egypt (Ex 7, 11-12.22), discredited the truth in Moses' time. Exodus does not name the magicians, but the two names are widely found in much later Jewish, Christian, and even pagan writings. Their origins are legendary.

lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God, [5]* as they make a pretense of religion but deny its power. Reject them. [6]* For some of these slip into homes and make captives of women weighed down by sins, led by various desires, [7]* always trying to learn but never able to reach a knowledge of the truth. [8]* Just as Jannes and Jambres opposed Moses, so they also oppose the truth—people of depraved mind, unqualified in the faith. [9] But they will not make further progress, for their foolishness will be plain to all, as it was with those two.

Paul's Example and Teaching.† [10] You have followed my teaching, way of life, purpose, faith, patience, love, endurance, [11]* persecutions, and sufferings, such as happened to me in Antioch, Iconium, and Lystra, persecutions that I endured. Yet from all these things the Lord delivered me. [12]* In fact, all who want to live religiously in Christ Jesus will be persecuted. [13] But wicked people and charlatans will go from bad to worse, deceivers and deceived. [14]* But you, remain faithful to what you have learned and believed, because you know from whom you learned it, [15]* and that from infancy you have known [the] sacred scriptures, which are capable of giving you wisdom for salvation through faith in Christ Jesus. [16]† All scripture is inspired by God and is useful for teaching, for refutation, for correction, and for training in righteousness, [17] so that one who belongs to God may be competent, equipped for every good work.

CHAPTER 4

Solemn Charge.† [1]* I charge you in the presence of God and of Christ Jesus, who will judge the living and the dead, and by his appearing and his kingly power: [2]* proclaim the word; be persistent whether it is convenient or inconvenient; convince, reprimand, encourage through all patience and teaching. [3]† For the time will come when people will not tolerate sound doctrine but, following their own desires and insatiable curiosity, will accumulate teachers [4] and will stop listening to the truth and will be diverted to myths. [5] But you, be self-possessed in all circumstances; put up with hardship; perform the work of an evangelist; fulfill your ministry.

Reward for Fidelity. [6]† For I am already being poured out like a libation, and the time of my departure is at hand. [7]† I have competed well; I have finished the race; I have kept the faith. [8]*† From now on the crown of righteousness awaits me, which the Lord, the just judge, will award to me on that day, and not only to me, but to all who have longed for his appearance.

3, 10-17: Paul's example for Timothy includes persecution, a frequent emphasis in the Pastorals. Timothy is to be steadfast to what he has been taught and to scripture. The scriptures are the source of wisdom, i.e., of belief in and loving fulfillment of God's word revealed in Christ, through whom salvation is given.

3, 16: All scripture is inspired by God: this could possibly also be translated, "All scripture inspired by God is useful for. . . ." In this classic reference to inspiration, God is its principal author, with the writer as the human collaborator. Thus the scriptures are the word of God in human language. See also 2 Pt 1, 20-21.

3, 16-17: Useful for teaching . . . every good work: because as God's word the scriptures share his divine authority. It is exercised through those who are ministers of the word.

4, 1-5: The gravity of the obligation incumbent on Timothy to preach the word can be gauged from the solemn adjuration: in the presence of God, and of Christ coming as universal judge, and by his appearance and his kingly power (1). Patience, courage, constancy, and endurance are required despite the opposition, hostility, indifference, and defection of many to whom the truth has been preached (2-5).

4, 3: Insatiable curiosity: literally, "with itching ears."

4, 6: The apostle recognizes his death through martyrdom to be imminent. He regards it as an act of worship in which his blood will be poured out in sacrifice; cf Ex 29, 38-40; Phil 2, 17.

4, 7: At the close of his life Paul could testify to the accomplishment of what Christ himself foretold concerning him at the time of his conversion, "I will show him what he will have to suffer for my name" (Acts 9, 16).

4, 8: When the world is judged at the parousia, all who have eagerly looked for the Lord's appearing and have sought to live according to his teachings will be rewarded. The crown is a reference to the laurel wreath placed on the heads of victorious athletes and conquerors in war; cf 2, 5; 1 Cor 9, 25.

4, 9-13: Demas either abandoned the work of the ministry for worldly affairs or, perhaps, gave up the faith itself (10). Luke (11) may have accompanied Paul on parts of his second and third missionary journeys (Acts 16, 10-12; 20, 5-7). Notice the presence of the first personal pronoun "we" in these Acts passages, suggesting to some that Luke (or at least some traveling companion of Paul's) was the author of Acts. Mark, once rejected by Paul (Acts 13, 13; 15, 39), is now to render him a great service (11); cf Col 4, 10; Phlm 24. For Tychicus, see Eph 6, 21; cf also Acts 20, 4; Col 4, 7.

4, 10: Galatia: some manuscripts read "Gaul" or "Gallia."

Thessalonica, Crescens to Galatia, and Titus to Dalmatia. [11]* Luke is the only one with me. Get Mark and bring him with you, for he is helpful to me in the ministry. [12]* I have sent Tychicus to Ephesus. [13]* When you come, bring the cloak I left with Carpus in Troas, the papyrus rolls, and especially the parch-ments.
[14]*† Alexander the coppersmith did me a great deal of harm; the Lord will repay him according to his deeds.
[15] You too be on guard against him,
for he has strongly resisted our preaching.
[16]* At my first defense no one appeared on my behalf, but everyone deserted me. May it not be held against them! [17]* But the Lord stood by me and gave me strength, so that through me
the proclamation might be completed and all the Gentiles might hear it. And I was rescued from the lion's mouth.
[18]* The Lord will rescue me from every evil threat and will bring me safe to his heavenly kingdom. To him be glory forever and ever. Amen.
Final Greeting. [19]*† Greet Prisca and Aquila and the family of Onesiphorus.
[20]*† Erastus remained in Corinth, while I left Trophimus sick at Miletus. [21]† Try to get here before winter. Eubulus, Pu-dens, Linus, Claudia, and all the brothers send greetings.

[22]* The Lord be with your spirit.
Grace be with all of you.

4, 14-18: Alexander: an opponent of Paul's preaching (14-15), perhaps the one who is mentioned in 1 Tm 1, 20. Despite Paul's abandonment by his friends in the province of Asia (cf 1, 15-16), the divine assistance brought this first trial to a successful issue, even to the point of making the gospel message known to those who participated in or witnessed the trial (16-17).

4, 19: Prisca and Aquila: they assisted Paul in his ministry in Corinth (Acts 18, 2-3) and Ephesus (Acts 18, 19.26; 1 Cor 16, 19). They risked death to save his life, and all the Gentile communities are indebted to them (Rom 16, 3-5).

4, 20: Erastus: he was the treasurer of the city of Corinth (Rom 16, 24); cf also Acts 19, 22. Trophimus: from the province of Asia, he accompanied Paul from Greece to Troas (Acts 20, 4-5).

4, 21: Linus: Western tradition sometimes identified this Linus with the supposed successor of Peter as bishop of Rome, and Claudia as the mother of Linus (Apostolic Constitutions, fourth century).

The Letter to

TITUS

The third of the Pastoral Epistles in the New Testament is addressed to a different co-worker of Paul than are First and Second Timothy. The situation is different, too, for Titus is addressed as the person in charge of developing the church on the large Mediterranean island of Crete (1, 5), a place Paul had never, according to the New Testament, visited. The tone is closer to that of First Timothy as three topics of church life and structure are discussed: presbyter-bishops (see the note on 1, 5-9), groups with which one must work in the church (2, 1-10), and admonitions for conduct based on the grace and love of God that appeared in Jesus Christ (2, 11—3, 10). The warmer personal tone of Second Timothy is replaced by emphasis on church office and on living in the society of the day, in which deceivers and heretics abound (1, 10-16; 3, 9-10).

The Pauline assistant who is addressed, Titus, was a Gentile Christian, but we are nowhere informed of his place of birth or residence. He went from Antioch with Paul and Barnabas to Jerusalem (Gal 2, 1; cf Acts 15, 2). According to 2 Corinthians (2, 13; 7, 6.13-14), he was with Paul on his third missionary journey; his name, however, does not appear in Acts. Besides being the bearer of Paul's severe letter to the Corinthians (2 Cor 7, 6-8), he had the responsibility of taking up the collection in Corinth for the Christian community of Jerusalem (2 Cor 8, 6.16-19.23). In the present letter (1, 5), he is mentioned as the administrator of the Christian community in Crete, charged with the task of organizing it through the appointment of presbyters and bishops (1, 5-9; here the two terms refer to the same personages).

The letter instructs Titus about the character of the assistants he is to choose in view of the pastoral difficulties peculiar to Crete (1, 5-16). It suggests the special individual and social virtues that the various age groups and classes in the Christian community should be encouraged to acquire (2, 1-10). The motivation for transformation of their lives comes from christology, especially the redemptive sacrifice of Christ and his future coming, as applied through baptism and justification (2, 11-14; 3, 4-8). The community is to serve as a leaven for Christianizing the social world about it (3, 1-3). Good works are to be the evidence of their faith in God (3, 8); those who engage in religious controversy are, after suitable warning, to be ignored (3, 9-11).

The authorship and date of the Letter to Titus are discussed in the Introduction to 1 Timothy. Those who assume authorship by Paul himself usually place Titus after 1 Timothy and before 2 Timothy. Others see it as closely related to 1 Timothy, in a growing emphasis on church structure and opposition to heresy, later than the letters of Paul himself and 2 Timothy. It has also been suggested that, if the three Pastorals once circulated as a literary unit, Titus was meant to be read ahead of 1 and 2 Timothy.

The principal divisions of the Letter to Titus are the following:

I: Address (1, 1-4)
II: Pastoral Charge (1, 5-16)
III: Teaching the Christian Life (2, 1—3, 15)

I: ADDRESS

CHAPTER 1

Greeting.† 1* Paul, a slave of God and apostle of Jesus Christ for the sake of the faith of God's chosen ones and the recognition of religious truth, 2* in the hope of eternal life that God,
who does not lie, promised before time
began, 3* who indeed at the proper time revealed his word in the proclamation with which I was entrusted by the command of God our savior, 4* to Titus, my true child in our common faith: grace and peace from God the Father and Christ Jesus our savior.

II: PASTORAL CHARGE

Titus in Crete.† 5 For this reason I left you in Crete so that you might set right
what remains to be done and appoint presbyters in every town, as I directed you, 6* on condition that a man be blameless, married only once, with believing children who are not accused of licentiousness or rebellious. 7 For a bishop as God's steward must be blameless, not arrogant, not irritable, not a drunkard, not aggressive, not greedy for sordid gain, 8 but hospitable, a lover of goodness, temperate, just, holy, and self-controlled, 9* holding fast to the true message as taught so that he will be able both to exhort with sound doctrine and to refute opponents. 10† For there are also many rebels, idle talkers and deceivers, especially the Jewish Christians. 11 It is imperative to silence them, as they are upsetting whole families by teaching for sordid gain what they should not. 12† One of them, a prophet of their own, once said, "Cretans have always been liars, vicious beasts, and lazy gluttons." 13* That testimony is true. Therefore, admonish them sharply, so that they may be sound in the faith, 14* instead of paying attention to Jewish myths and regulations of people who have repudiated the truth. 15* To the clean all things are clean, but to those who are defiled and unbelieving nothing is clean; in fact,
both their minds and their consciences
are tainted. 16 They claim to know God, but by their deeds they deny him. They are vile and disobedient and unqualified
for any good deed.

III: TEACHING THE CHRISTIAN LIFE

CHAPTER 2

Christian Behavior.† 1* As for yourself, you must say what is consistent with sound doctrine, namely, 2 that older men should be temperate, dignified, self-controlled, sound in faith, love, and endurance. 3 Similarly, older women should be reverent in their behavior, not slanderers, not addicted to drink, teaching what is good, 4 so that they may train younger women to love their husbands and children, 5* to be self-controlled, chaste, good homemakers, under the control of their husbands,
so that the word of God may not be discredited.

6 Urge the younger men, similarly, to control themselves, 7 showing yourself
as a model of good deeds in every respect, with integrity in your teaching, dignity, 8 and sound speech that cannot be criticized, so that the opponent will be put to shame without anything bad
to say about us.

9* Slaves are to be under the control of their masters in all respects, giving them satisfaction, not talking back to

† 1, 1-4: On the epistolary form, see the note on Rom 1, 1-7. The apostolate is the divinely appointed mission to lead others to the true faith and through it to eternal salvation (1-3).

1, 5-9: This instruction on the selection and appointment of presbyters, substantially identical with that in 1 Tm 3, 1-7 on a bishop (see the note there), was aimed at strengthening the authority of Titus by apostolic mandate; cf 2, 15. In vv 5.7 and Acts 20, 17.28, the terms episkopos and presbyteros ("bishop" and "presbyter") refer to the same persons. Deacons are not mentioned in Titus. See also the note on Phil 1, 1.

1, 10-16: This adverse criticism of the defects within the community is directed especially against certain Jewish Christians, who busy themselves with useless speculations over persons mentioned in the Old Testament, insist on the observance of Jewish ritual purity regulations, and thus upset whole families by teaching things they have no right to teach; cf 3, 9; 1 Tm 1, 3-10.

1, 10: Jewish Christians: literally, "those of the circumcision."

1, 12: Cretans . . . gluttons: quoted from Epimenides, a Cretan poet of the sixth century B.C.

2, 1-10: One of Titus' main tasks in Crete is to become acquainted with the character of the Cretans and thereby learn to cope with its deficiencies (see 1, 12). The counsel is not only for Titus himself but for various classes of people with whom he must deal: older men and women (2-4), younger women and men (4-7), and slaves (9-10); cf Eph 6, 1-9; Col 3, 18—4, 1.

them [10]* or stealing from them, but exhibiting complete good faith, so as to adorn the doctrine of God our savior in every way.

Transformation of Life.† [11]* For the grace of God has appeared, saving all [12] and training us to reject godless ways and worldly desires and to live temperately, justly, and devoutly in this age, [13]† as we await the blessed hope, the appearance of the glory of the great God and of our savior Jesus Christ, [14] who gave himself for us to deliver us from all lawlessness and to cleanse for himself a people as his own, eager to do what is good.

[15]* Say these things. Exhort and correct with all authority. Let no one look down on you.

CHAPTER 3

[1]† Remind them to be under the control of magistrates and authorities, to be obedient, to be open to every good enterprise. [2] They are to slander no one, to be peaceable, considerate, exercising all graciousness toward everyone. [3] For we ourselves were once foolish, disobedient, deluded, slaves to various desires and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful ourselves and hating one another.

[4]* But when the kindness and generous love of God our savior appeared, [5]* not because of any righteous deeds we had done
but because of his mercy,
he saved us through the bath of rebirth
and renewal by the holy Spirit, [6]* whom he richly poured out on us through Jesus Christ our savior, [7]* so that we might be justified by his grace and become heirs in hope of eternal life.

[8]*† This saying is trustworthy.

Advice to Titus. I want you to insist on these points, that those who have believed in God be careful to devote themselves to good works; these are excellent and beneficial to others. [9]† Avoid foolish arguments, genealogies, rivalries, and quarrels about the law, for they are useless and futile. [10] After a first and second warning, break off contact with a heretic, [11] realizing that such a person is perverted and sinful and stands self-condemned.

Directives, Greetings, and Blessing.† [12]* When I send Artemas to you, or Tychicus, try to join me at Nicopolis, where I have decided to spend the winter. [13]* Send Zenas the lawyer and Apollos on their journey soon, and see to it that they have everything they need. [14]* But let our people, too, learn to devote themselves to good works to supply urgent needs, so that they may not be unproductive.

[15]* All who are with me send you greetings. Greet those who love us in the faith.

Grace be with all of you.

2, 11-15: Underlying the admonitions for moral improvement in 1-10 as the moving force is the constant appeal to God's revelation of salvation in Christ, with its demand for transformation of life.

2, 13: The blessed hope, the appearance: literally, "the blessed hope and appearance," but the use of a single article in Greek strongly suggests an epexegetical, i.e., explanatory sense. Of the great God and of our savior Jesus Christ: another possible translation is "of our great God and savior Jesus Christ."

3, 1-8: The list of Christian duties continues from 2, 9-10, undergirded again as in 2, 11-13 by appeal to what God in Christ has done (4-7; cf 2, 11-14). The spiritual renewal of the Cretans, signified in God's merciful gift of baptism (4-7), should be reflected in their improved attitude toward civil authority and in their Christian relationship with all (1-3).

3, 1: Magistrates and authorities: some interpreters understand these terms as referring to the principalities and powers of the heavenly hierarchy. To be open to every good enterprise: this implies being good citizens. It could also be translated "ready to do every sort of good work" (as Christians); cf 14.

3, 8-11: In matters of good conduct and religious doctrine, Titus is to stand firm.

3, 9: See the note on 1 Tm 6, 20-21.

3, 12-15: Artemas or Tychicus (2 Tm 4, 12) is to replace Titus, who will join Paul in his winter sojourn at Nicopolis in Epirus, on the western coast of Greece.

The Letter to

PHILEMON

This short letter addressed to three specific individuals was written by Paul during an imprisonment, perhaps in Rome between A.D. 61 and 63 (see the Introduction to Colossians for other possible sites). It concerns Onesimus, a slave from Colossae (Col 4, 9), who had run away from his master, perhaps guilty of theft in the process (18). Onesimus was converted to Christ by Paul (10). Paul sends him back to his master (12) with this letter asking that he be welcomed willingly by his old master (8-10.14.17) not just as a slave but as a brother in Christ (16). Paul uses very strong arguments (especially 19) in his touching appeal on behalf of Onesimus. It is unlikely that Paul is subtly hinting that he would like to retain Onesimus as his own slave, lent to Paul by his master. Rather, he suggests he would like to have Onesimus work with him for the gospel (13.20-21). There is, however, little evidence connecting this Onesimus with a bishop of Ephesus of the same name mentioned by Ignatius of Antioch (ca. A.D. 110).

Paul's letter deals with an accepted institution of antiquity, human slavery. But Paul breathes into this letter the spirit of Christ and of equality within the Christian community. He does not attack slavery directly, for this is something the Christian communities of the first century were in no position to do, and the expectation that Christ would soon come again militated against social reforms. Yet Paul, by presenting Onesimus as "brother, beloved . . . to me, but even more so to you" (16), voiced an idea revolutionary in that day and destined to break down worldly barriers of division "in the Lord."

Address and Greeting. [1]† Paul, a prisoner for Christ Jesus, and Timothy our brother, to Philemon, our beloved and our co-worker, [2]† to Apphia our sister, to Archippus our fellow soldier, and to the church at your house. [3]*† Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Thanksgiving. [4]† I give thanks to my God always, remembering you in my prayers, [5]† as I hear of the love and the faith you have in the Lord Jesus and for all the holy ones, [6]† so that your partnership in the faith may become effective in recognizing every good there is in us that leads to Christ.

Plea for Onesimus. [7]† For I have experienced much joy and encouragement from your love, because the hearts of the holy ones have been refreshed by you, brother. [8]† Therefore, although I have the full right in Christ to order you to do what is proper, [9]† I rather urge you out of love, being as I am, Paul, an old man, and now also a prisoner for Christ Jesus. [10]* I urge you on behalf of my child Onesimus, whose

1: Prisoner: as often elsewhere (cf Rom, 1 Cor, Gal especially), the second word in Greek enunciates the theme and sets the tone of the letter. Here it is the prisoner appealing rather than the apostle commanding.

2: Apphia our sister: sister is here used (like brother) to indicate a fellow Christian. The church at your house: your here is singular. It more likely refers to Philemon than to the last one named, Archippus; Philemon is then the owner of the slave Onesimus (10). An alternate view is that the actual master of the slave is Archippus and that the one to whom the letter is addressed, Philemon, is the most prominent Christian there; see the note on Col 4, 17.

3: Grace . . . and peace: for this greeting, which may be a combination of Greek and Aramaic epistolary formulae, see the note on Rom 1, 1-7.

4: In my prayers: literally, "at the time of my prayers."

5: Holy ones: a common term for members of the Christian community (so also 7).

6: In us: some good ancient manuscripts have in you (plural). That leads to Christ: leads to translates the Greek preposition eis, indicating direction or purpose.

7: Encouragement: the Greek word paraklēsis is cognate with the verb translated "urge" in vv 9.10, and serves as an introduction to Paul's plea. Hearts: literally, "bowels," expressing in Semitic fashion the seat of the emotions, one's "inmost self." The same Greek word is used in v 12 and again in v 20, where it forms a literary inclusion marking off the body of the letter.

8: Full right: often translated "boldness," the Greek word parrēsia connotes the full franchise of speech, as the right of a citizen to speak before the body politic, claimed by the Athenians as their privilege (Euripides).

9: Old man: some editors conjecture that Paul here used a similar Greek word meaning "ambassador" (cf Eph 6, 20). This conjecture heightens the contrast with "prisoner" but is totally without manuscript support.

father I have become in my imprisonment, [11]† who was once useless to you but is now useful to [both] you and me. [12] I am sending him, that is, my own heart, back to you. [13]† I should have liked to retain him for myself, so that he might serve me on your behalf in my imprisonment for the gospel, [14] but I did not want to do anything without your consent, so that the good you do might not be forced but voluntary. [15]† Perhaps this is why he was away from you for a while, that you might have him back forever, [16]† no longer as a slave but more than a slave, a brother, beloved especially to me, but even more so to you, as a man and in the Lord. [17] So if you regard me as a partner, welcome him as you would me. [18]† And if he has done you any injustice or owes you anything, charge it to me. [19] I, Paul, write this in my own hand: I will pay. May I not tell you that you owe me your very self. [20] Yes, brother, may I profit from you in the Lord. Refresh my heart in Christ.

[21] With trust in your compliance I write to you, knowing that you will do even more than I say. [22]* At the same time prepare a guest room for me, for I hope to be granted to you through your prayers.

Final Greetings.† [23]* Epaphras, my fellow prisoner in Christ Jesus, greets you, [24]* as well as Mark, Aristarchus, Demas, and Luke, my co-workers. [25] The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit.

11: Useless . . . useful: here Paul plays on the name Onesimus, which means "useful" or "beneficial." The verb translated "profit" in v 20 is cognate.

13: Serve: the Greek diakoneō could connote a ministry.

15: Was away from: literally, "was separated from," but the same verb means simply "left" in Acts 18, 1. It is a euphemism for his running away.

16: As a man: literally, "in the flesh." With this and the following phrase, Paul describes the natural and spiritual orders.

18-19: Charge it to me . . . I will pay: technical legal and commercial terms in account keeping and acknowledgment of indebtedness.

23-24: Epaphras: a Colossian who founded the church there (Col 1, 7) and perhaps also in Laodicea and Hierapolis (Col 2, 1; 4, 12-13). Aristarchus: a native of Thessalonica and fellow worker of Paul (Acts 19, 29; 20, 4; 27, 2). For Mark, Demas, and Luke, see 2 Tm 4, 9-13 and the note there.

The Letter to the

HEBREWS

As early as the second century, this treatise, which is of great rhetorical power and force in its admonition to faithful pilgrimage under Christ's leadership, bore the title "To the Hebrews." It was assumed to be directed to Jewish Christians. Usually Hebrews was attached in Greek manuscripts to the collection of letters by Paul. Although no author is mentioned (for there is no address), a reference to Timothy (13, 23) suggested connections to the circle of Paul and his assistants. Yet the exact audience, the author, and even whether Hebrews is a letter have long been disputed.

The author saw the addressees in danger of apostasy from their Christian faith. This danger was due not to any persecution from outsiders but to a weariness with the demands of Christian life and a growing indifference to their calling (2, 1; 4, 14; 6, 1-12; 10, 23-32). The author's main theme, the priesthood and sacrifice of Jesus (chs 3-10), is not developed for its own sake but as a means of restoring their lost fervor and strengthening them in their faith. Another important theme of the letter is that of the pilgrimage of the people of God to the heavenly Jerusalem (11, 10; 12, 1-3.18-29; 13, 14). This theme is intimately connected with that of Jesus' ministry in the heavenly sanctuary (9, 11—10, 22).

The author calls this work a "message of encouragement" (13, 22), a designation that is given to a synagogue sermon in Acts 13, 15. Hebrews is probably therefore a written homily, to which the author gave an epistolary ending (13, 22-25).

The author begins with a reminder of the preexistence, incarnation, and exaltation of Jesus (1, 3) that proclaimed him the climax of God's word to humanity (1, 1-3). He dwells upon the dignity of the person of Christ, superior to the angels (1, 4—2, 2). Christ is God's final word of salvation communicated (in association with accredited witnesses to his teaching: cf 2, 3-4) not merely by word but through his suffering in the humanity common to him and to all others (2, 5-16). This enactment of salvation went beyond the pattern known to Moses, faithful prophet of God's word though he was, for Jesus as high priest expiated sin and was faithful to God with the faithfulness of God's own Son (2, 17—3, 6).

Just as the infidelity of the people thwarted Moses' efforts to save them, so the infidelity of any Christian may thwart God's plan in Christ (3, 6—4, 13). Christians are to reflect that it is their humanity that Jesus took upon himself, with all its defects save sinfulness, and that he bore the burden of it until death out of obedience to God. God declared this work of his Son to be the cause of salvation for all (4, 14—5, 10). Although Christians recognize this fundamental teaching, they may grow weary of it and of its implications, and therefore require other reflections to stimulate their faith (5, 11—6, 20).

Therefore, the author presents to the readers for their reflection the everlasting priesthood of Christ (7, 1-28), a priesthood that fulfills the promise of the Old Testament (8, 1-13). It also provides the meaning God ultimately intended in the sacrifices of the Old Testament (9, 1-28): these pointed to the unique sacrifice of Christ, which alone obtains forgiveness of sins (10, 1-18). The trial of faith experienced by the readers should resolve itself through their consideration of Christ's ministry in the heavenly sanctuary and his perpetual intercession there on their behalf (7, 25; 8, 1-13). They should also be strengthened by the assurance of his foreordained parousia, and by the fruits of faith that they have already enjoyed (10, 19-39).

It is in the nature of faith to recognize the reality of what is not yet seen and is the object of hope, and the saints of the Old Testament give striking example of that faith (11, 1-40). The perseverance to which the author exhorts the readers is shown forth in the early life of Jesus. Despite the afflictions of his ministry and the supreme trial of his suffering and death, he remained confident of the triumph that God would bring him (12, 1-3). The difficulties of human life have meaning when they are accepted as God's discipline (12, 4-13), and if Christians persevere in fidelity to the word in which they have believed, they are assured of possessing forever the unshakable kingdom of God (12, 14-29).

The letter concludes with specific moral commandments (13, 1-17), in the course of which the author recalls again his central theme of the sacrifice of Jesus and the courage needed to associate oneself with it in faith (13, 9-16).

As early as the end of the second century, the church of Alexandria in Egypt accepted Hebrews as a letter of Paul, and that became the view commonly held in the East. Pauline authorship was contested in the West into the fourth century, but then accepted. In the sixteenth century, doubts about that position were again raised, and the modern consensus is that the letter was not written by Paul. There is, however, no widespread agreement on any of the other suggested authors, e.g., Barnabas, Apollos, or Prisc(ill)a and Aquila. The document itself has no statement about its author.

Among the reasons why Pauline authorship has been abandoned are the great difference of vocabulary and style between Hebrews and Paul's letters, the alternation of doctrinal teaching with moral exhortation, the different manner of citing the Old Testament, and the resemblance between the thought of Hebrews and that of Alexandrian Judaism. The Greek of the letter is in many ways the best in the New Testament.

Since the letter of Clement of Rome to the Corinthians, written about A.D. 96, most probably cites Hebrews, the upper limit for the date of composition is reasonably certain. While the letter's references in the present tense to the Old Testament sacrificial worship do not necessarily show that temple worship was still going on, many older commentators and a growing number of recent ones favor the view that it was and that the author wrote before the destruction of the temple of Jerusalem in A.D. 70. In that case, the argument of the letter is more easily explained as directed toward Jewish Christians rather than those of Gentile origin, and the persecutions they have suffered in the past (cf 10, 32-34) may have been connected with the disturbances that preceded the expulsion of the Jews from Rome in A.D. 49 under the emperor Claudius. These were probably caused by disputes between Jews who accepted Jesus as the Messiah and those who did not.

The principal divisions of the Letter to the Hebrews are the following:

I: Introduction (1, 1-4)
II: The Son Higher than the Angels (1, 5—2, 18)
III: Jesus, Faithful and Compassionate High Priest (3, 1—5, 10)
IV: Jesus' Eternal Priesthood and Eternal Sacrifice (5, 11—10, 39)
V: Examples, Discipline, Disobedience (11, 1—12, 29)
VI: Final Exhortation, Blessing, Greetings (13, 1-25)

I: INTRODUCTION†

CHAPTER 1

1 In times past, God spoke in partial and various ways to our ancestors through the prophets; 2* in these last days, he spoke to us through a son, whom he made heir of all things and through whom he created the universe, 3* who is the refulgence of his glory,
the very imprint of his being,
and who sustains all things by his mighty word.
When he had accomplished purification from sins,
he took his seat at the right hand
of the Majesty on high,
4* as far superior to the angels
as the name he has inherited is more excellent than theirs.

II: THE SON HIGHER THAN THE ANGELS

Messianic Enthronement.† 5* For to which of the angels did God ever say:

"You are my son; this day I have begotten you"?

Or again:

"I will be a father to him, and he shall be a son to me"?

6*† And again, when he leads the first-born into the world, he says:

"Let all the angels of God worship
him."

7* Of the angels he says:

"He makes his angels winds and his ministers a fiery flame";

8*† but of the Son:

"Your throne, O God, stands forever and ever;
and a righteous scepter is the
scepter of your kingdom.
9 You loved justice and hated wickedness;
therefore God, your God,
anointed you
with the oil of gladness above
your companions";

10* and:

"At the beginning, O Lord, you established the earth,
and the heavens are the works of your hands.
11 They will perish, but you remain;
and they will all grow old like a garment.
12 You will roll them up like a cloak,
and like a garment they will be changed.
But you are the same, and your years will have no end."

13* But to which of the angels has he ever said:

"Sit at my right hand
until I make your enemies your footstool"?

14* Are they not all ministering spirits

1, 1-4: The letter opens with an introduction consisting of a reflection on the climax of God's revelation to the human race in his Son. The divine communication was initiated and maintained during Old Testament times in fragmentary and varied ways through the prophets (1), including Abraham, Moses, and all through whom God spoke. But now in these last days (2), the final age, God's revelation of his saving purpose is achieved through a son, i.e., one who is Son, whose role is redeemer and mediator of creation. He was made heir of all things through his death and exaltation to glory, yet he existed before he appeared as man; through him God created the universe. Verses 3-4, which may be based upon a liturgical hymn, assimilate the Son to the personified Wisdom of the Old Testament as refulgence of God's glory and imprint of his being (3; cf Wis 7, 26). These same terms are used of the Logos in Philo. The author now turns from the cosmological role of the preexistent Son to the redemptive work of Jesus: he brought about purification from sins and has been exalted to the right hand of God (see Ps 110, 1). The once-humiliated and crucified Jesus has been declared God's Son, and this name shows his superiority to the angels. The reason for the author's insistence on that superiority is, among other things, that in some Jewish traditions angels were mediators of the old covenant (see Acts 7, 53; Gal 3, 19). Finally, Jesus' superiority to the angels emphasizes the superiority of the new covenant to the old because of the heavenly priesthood of Jesus.

1, 5-14: Jesus' superiority to the angels is now demonstrated by a series of seven Old Testament texts. Some scholars see in the stages of Jesus' exaltation an order corresponding to that of enthronement ceremonies in the ancient Near East, especially in Egypt, namely, elevation to divine status (5-6); presentation to the angels and proclamation of everlasting lordship (7-12); enthronement and conferral of royal power (13). The citations from the Psalms in vv 5 and 13 were traditionally used of Jesus' messianic sonship (cf Acts 13, 33) through his resurrection and exaltation (cf Acts 2, 33-35); those in vv 8 and 10-12 are concerned with his divine kingship and his creative function. The central quotation in v 7 serves to contrast the angels with the Son. The author quotes it according to the Septuagint translation, which is quite different in meaning from that of the Hebrew ("You make the winds your messengers, and flaming fire your ministers"). The angels are only sent to serve . . . those who are to inherit salvation (14).

1, 6: And again, when he leads: the Greek could also be translated "And when he again leads" in reference to the parousia.

1, 8-12: O God: the application of the name "God" to the Son derives from the preexistence mentioned in vv 2-3; the psalmist had already used it of the Hebrew king in the court style of the original. See the note on Ps 45, 7. It is also important for the author's christology that in vv 10-12 an Old Testament passage addressed to God is redirected to Jesus.

sent to serve, for the sake of those who are to inherit salvation?

CHAPTER 2

Exhortation to Faithfulness.† [1] Therefore, we must attend all the more to what we have heard, so that we may not be carried away. [2*] For if the word announced through angels proved firm, and every transgression and disobedience received its just recompense, [3*] how shall we escape if we ignore so great a salvation? Announced originally through the Lord, it was confirmed for us by those who had heard. [4*] God added his testimony by signs, wonders, various acts of power, and distribution of the gifts of the holy Spirit according to his will.

Exaltation through Abasement.† [5] For it was not to angels that he subjected the world to come, of which we are speaking. [6*] Instead, someone has testified somewhere:

> "What is man that you are mindful of him,
> or the son of man that you care for him?
> [7] You made him for a little while lower than the angels;
> you crowned him with glory and honor,
> [8*] subjecting all things under his feet."

In "subjecting" all things [to him], he left nothing not "subject to him." Yet at present we do not see "all things subject to him," [9*] but we do see Jesus "crowned with glory and honor" because he suffered death, he who "for a little while" was made "lower than the angels," that by the grace of God he might taste death for everyone.

[10*] For it was fitting that he, for whom and through whom all things exist, in bringing many children to glory, should make the leader to their salvation perfect through suffering. [11] He who consecrates and those who are being consecrated all have one origin. Therefore, he is not ashamed to call them "brothers," [12*] saying:

> "I will proclaim your name to my brothers,
> in the midst of the assembly I will praise you";

[13*] and again:

> "I will put my trust in him";

and again:

> "Behold, I and the children God has given me."

[14*] Now since the children share in blood and flesh, he likewise shared in them, that through death he might destroy the one who has the power of death, that is, the devil, [15] and free those who through fear of death had been subject to slavery all their life. [16] Surely he did not help angels but rather the descendants of Abraham; [17*] therefore, he had to become like his brothers in every way, that he might be a merciful and faithful high priest before God to expiate the sins of the people. [18] Because he himself was tested through what he suffered, he is able to help those who are being tested.

† 2, 1-4: The author now makes a transition into exhortation, using an a fortiori argument (as at 7, 21-22; 9, 13-14; 10, 28-29; 12, 25). The word announced through angels (2), the Mosaic law, is contrasted with the more powerful word that Christians have received (3-4). Christ's supremacy strengthens Christians against being carried away from their faith.

2, 5-18: The humanity and the suffering of Jesus do not constitute a valid reason for relinquishing the Christian faith. Ps 8 (6-7) is also applied to Jesus in 1 Cor 15, 27; Eph 1, 22; and probably 1 Pt 3, 22. This christological interpretation, therefore, probably reflects a common early Christian tradition, which may have originated in the expression the son of man (6). The psalm contrasts God's greatness with man's relative insignificance but also stresses the superiority of man to the rest of creation, of which he is lord. Heb applies this christologically: Jesus lived a truly human existence, lower than the angels, in the days of his earthly life, particularly in his suffering and death; now, crowned with glory and honor, he is raised above all creation. The author considers all things as already subject to him because of his exaltation (8-9), though we do not see this yet. The reference to Jesus as leader (10) sounds the first note of an important leitmotif in Heb: the journey of the people of God to the sabbath rest (4, 9), the heavenly sanctuary, following Jesus, their "forerunner" (6, 20). It was fitting that God should make him perfect through suffering, consecrated by obedient suffering. Because he is perfected as high priest, Jesus is then able to consecrate his people (11); access to God is made possible by each of these two consecrations. If Jesus is able to help human beings, it is because he has become one of us; we are his "brothers." The author then cites three Old Testament texts as proofs of this unity between ourselves and the Son. Psalm 22, 23 is interpreted so as to make Jesus the singer of this lament, which ends with joyful praise of the Lord in the assembly of "brothers." The other two texts are from Is 8, 17.18. The first of these seems intended to display in Jesus an example of the trust in God that his followers should emulate. The second curiously calls these followers "children"; probably this is to be understood to mean children of Adam, but the point is our solidarity with Jesus. By sharing human nature, including the ban of death, Jesus broke the power of the devil over death (14); the author shares the view of Hellenistic Judaism that death was not intended by God and that it had been introduced into the world by the devil. The fear of death (15) is a religious fear based on the false conception that death marks the end of a person's relations with God (cf Ps 115, 17-18; Is 38, 18). Jesus deliberately allied himself with the descendants of Abraham (16) in order to be a merciful and faithful high priest. This is the first appearance of the central theme of Heb, Jesus the great high priest expiating the sins of the people (17), as one who experienced the same tests as they (18).

III: JESUS, FAITHFUL AND COMPASSIONATE HIGH PRIEST

CHAPTER 3

Jesus, Superior to Moses.† 1 Therefore, holy "brothers," sharing in a heavenly calling, reflect on Jesus, the apostle and high priest of our confession, 2* who was faithful to the one who appointed him, just as Moses was "faithful in [all] his house." 3* But he is worthy of more "glory" than Moses,
as the founder of a house has more "honor" than the house itself. 4 Every house is founded by someone, but the founder of all is God. 5 Moses was "faithful in all his house" as a "servant"
to testify to what would be spoken, 6*† but Christ was faithful as a son placed over his house. We are his house, if [only] we hold fast to our confidence
and pride in our hope.

Israel's Infidelity a Warning.†
7* Therefore, as the holy Spirit says:

"Oh, that today you would hear his
voice,
8 'Harden not your hearts as at the rebellion
in the day of testing in the desert,
9* where your ancestors tested and tried me
and saw my works 10 for forty years.
Because of this I was provoked with that generation and I said, "They have always been of erring heart,
and they do not know my ways."
11 As I swore in my wrath,
"They shall not enter into my rest."'"

12 Take care, brothers, that none of you may have an evil and unfaithful heart,
so as to forsake the living God.
13 Encourage yourselves daily while it is still "today," so that none of you may grow hardened by the deceit of sin.
14* We have become partners of Christ
if only we hold the beginning of the reality firm until the end, 15* for it is said:

"Oh, that today you would hear his
voice:
'Harden not your hearts as at the
rebellion.'"

16* Who were those who rebelled when they heard? Was it not all those who came out of Egypt under Moses?
17* With whom was he "provoked for forty years"? Was it not those who had sinned, whose corpses fell in the desert?
18* And to whom did he "swear that they should not enter into his rest," if not to those who were disobedient?
19 And we see that they could not enter for lack of faith.

CHAPTER 4

The Sabbath Rest. 1 Therefore, let us be on our guard while the promise of entering into his rest remains, that none of you seem to have failed. 2 For in fact we have received the good news just as they did. But the word that they heard

17: Nm 14, 29.
18: Nm 14, 22-23; Dt 1, 35.

† 3, 1-6: The author now takes up the two qualities of Jesus mentioned in 2, 17, but in inverse order: faithfulness (3, 1—4, 13) and mercy (4, 14—5, 10). Christians are called holy "brothers" because of their common relation to him (2, 11), the apostle, a designation for Jesus used only here in the New Testament (cf Jn 13, 16; 17, 3), meaning one sent as God's final word to us (1, 2). He is compared with Moses probably because he is seen as mediator of the new covenant (9, 15) just as Moses was of the old (9, 19-22, including his sacrifice). But when the author of Heb speaks of Jesus' sacrifice, he does not consider Moses as the Old Testament antitype, but rather the high priest on the Day of Atonement (9, 6-15). Moses' faithfulness "in [all] his house" refers back to Nm 12, 7, on which this section is a midrashic commentary. In vv 3-6, the author does not indicate that he thinks of either Moses or Christ as the founder of the household. His house (2.5.6) means God's house, not that of Moses or Christ; in the case of Christ, compare v 6 with 10, 21. The house of v 6 is the Christian community; the author suggests its continuity with Israel by speaking not of two houses but of only one. Verse 6 brings out the reason why Jesus is superior to Moses: the latter was the faithful servant laboring in the house founded by God, but Jesus is God's son, placed over the house.

3, 6: The majority of manuscripts add "firm to the end," but these words are not found in the three earliest and best witnesses and are probably an interpolation derived from v 14.

3, 7—4, 13: The author appeals for steadfastness of faith in Jesus, basing his warning on the experience of Israel during the Exodus. In the Old Testament the Exodus had been invoked as a symbol of the return of Israel from the Babylonian exile (Is 42, 9; 43, 16-21; 51, 9-11). In the New Testament the redemption was similarly understood as a new exodus, both in the experience of Jesus himself (Lk 9, 31) and in that of his followers (1 Cor 10, 1-4). The author cites Ps 95, 7-11, a salutary example of hardness of heart, as a warning against the danger of growing weary and giving up the journey. To call God living (12) means that he reveals himself in his works (cf Jos 3, 10; Jer 10, 10). The rest (11) into which Israel was to enter was only a foreshadowing of that rest to which Christians are called. They are to remember the example of Israel's revolt in the desert that cost a whole generation the loss of the promised land (15-19; cf Nm 14, 20-29). In 4, 1-11, the symbol of rest is seen in deeper dimension: because the promise to the ancient Hebrews foreshadowed that given to Christians, it is good news; and because the promised land was the place of rest that God provided for his people, it was a share in his own rest, which he enjoyed after he had finished his creative work (3-4; cf Gn 2, 2). The author attempts to read this meaning of God's rest into Ps 95, 7-11 (6-9). The Greek form of the name of Joshua, who led Israel into the promised land, is Jesus (8). The author plays upon the name but stresses the superiority of Jesus, who leads his followers into heavenly rest. Verses 12 and 13 are meant as a continuation of the warning, for the word of God brings judgment as well as salvation. Some would capitalize the word of God and see it as a personal title of Jesus, comparable to that of Jn 1, 1-18.

did not profit them, for they were not united in faith with those who listened.
3* For we who believed enter into [that] rest, just as he has said:

"As I swore in my wrath,
'They shall not enter into my rest,' "

and yet his works were accomplished at the foundation of the world. 4* For he has spoken somewhere about the seventh day in this manner, "And God rested on the seventh day from all his works"; 5* and again, in the previously mentioned place, "They shall not enter into my rest." 6 Therefore, since it remains that some will enter into it, and those who formerly received the good news did not enter because of disobedience, 7* he once more set a day, "today," when long afterwards he spoke through David, as already quoted:

"Oh, that today you would hear his
voice:
'Harden not your hearts.' "

8* Now if Joshua had given them rest,
he would not have spoken afterwards of another day. 9 Therefore, a sabbath rest still remains for the people of God.
10 And whoever enters into God's rest, rests from his own works as God did from his. 11 Therefore, let us strive to enter into that rest, so that no one may fall after the same example of disobedience.

12* Indeed, the word of God is living and effective, sharper than any two-edged sword, penetrating even between soul and spirit, joints and marrow, and able to discern reflections and thoughts of the heart. 13* No creature is concealed from him, but everything is naked and exposed to the eyes of him to whom we must render an account.

Jesus, Compassionate High Priest.†
14* Therefore, since we have a great high priest who has passed through the heavens, Jesus, the Son of God, let us hold fast to our confession. 15* For we do not have a high priest who is unable to sympathize with our weaknesses, but one who has similarly been tested in every way, yet without sin. 16* So let us confidently approach the throne of grace to receive mercy and to find grace for timely help.

CHAPTER 5

1† Every high priest is taken from among men and made their representative before God, to offer gifts and sacrifices for sins. 2† He is able to deal patiently with the ignorant and erring,
for he himself is beset by weakness 3* and so, for this reason, must make sin offerings for himself as well as for the people. 4* No one takes this honor upon himself but only when called by God, just as Aaron was. 5* In the same way, it was not Christ who glorified himself in becoming high priest, but rather the one who said to him:

"You are my son;
this day I have begotten you";

6*† just as he says in another place:

"You are a priest forever
according to the order of Melchizedek."

7*† In the days when he was in the flesh,
he offered prayers and supplications

4, 14-16: These verses, which return to the theme first sounded in 2, 16—3, 1, serve as an introduction to the section that follows. The author here alone calls Jesus a great high priest (14), a designation used by Philo for the Logos; perhaps he does so in order to emphasize Jesus' superiority over the Jewish high priest. He has been tested in every way, yet without sin (15); this indicates an acquaintance with the tradition of Jesus' temptations, not only at the beginning (as in Mk 1, 13) but throughout his public life (cf Lk 22, 28). Although the reign of the exalted Jesus is a theme that occurs elsewhere in Heb, and Jesus' throne is mentioned in 1, 8, the throne of grace (16) refers to the throne of God. The similarity of v 16 to 10, 19-22 indicates that the author is thinking of our confident access to God, made possible by the priestly work of Jesus.

5, 1-10: The true humanity of Jesus (see the note on 2, 5-18) makes him a more rather than a less effective high priest to the Christian community. In Old Testament tradition, the high priest was identified with the people, guilty of personal sin just as they were (1-3). Even so, the office was of divine appointment (4), as was also the case with the sinless Christ (5). For v 6, see the note on Ps 110, 4. Although Jesus was Son of God, he was destined as a human being to learn obedience by accepting the suffering he had to endure (8). Because of his perfection through this experience of human suffering, he is the cause of salvation for all (9), a high priest according to the order of Melchizedek (10; cf 6 and 7, 3).

5, 1: To offer gifts and sacrifices for sins: the author is thinking principally of the Day of Atonement rite, as is clear from 9, 7. This ritual was celebrated to atone for "all the sins of the Israelites" (Lv 16, 34).

5, 2: Deal patiently: the Greek word metriopathein occurs only here in the Bible; this term was used by the Stoics to designate the golden mean between excess and defect of passion. Here it means rather the ability to sympathize.

5, 6-8: The author of Heb is the only New Testament writer to cite v 4 of Ps 110, here and in 7, 17.21, to show that Jesus has been called by God to his role as priest. Verses 7-8 deal with his ability to sympathize with sinners, because of his own experience of the trials and weakness of human nature, especially fear of death. In his present exalted state, weakness is foreign to him, but he understands what we suffer because of his previous earthly experience.

5, 7: He offered prayers . . . to the one who was able to save him from death: at Gethsemane (cf Mk 14, 35), though some see a broader reference (see the note on Jn 12, 27).

with loud cries and tears to the one who was able to save him from death, and he was heard because of his reverence. [8*†] Son though he was, he learned obedience from what he suffered; [9*] and when he was made perfect, he became the source of eternal salvation for all who obey him, [10*] declared by God high priest according to the order of Melchizedek.

IV: JESUS' ETERNAL PRIESTHOOD AND ETERNAL SACRIFICE

Exhortation to Spiritual Renewal.† [11] About this we have much to say, and it is difficult to explain, for you have become sluggish in hearing. [12*] Although you should be teachers by this time, you need to have someone teach you again the basic elements of the utterances of God. You need milk, [and] not solid food. [13] Everyone who lives on milk lacks experience of the word of righteousness, for he is a child. [14] But solid food is for the mature, for those whose faculties are trained by practice to discern good and evil.

CHAPTER 6

[1*] Therefore, let us leave behind the basic teaching about Christ and advance to maturity, without laying the foundation all over again: repentance from dead works and faith in God, [2*†] instruction about baptisms and laying on of hands, resurrection of the dead and eternal judgment. [3] And we shall do this, if only God permits. [4*†] For it is impossible in the case of those who have once been enlightened and tasted the heavenly gift and shared in the holy Spirit [5†] and tasted the good word of God and the powers of the age to come, [6*†] and then have fallen away, to bring them to repentance again, since they are recrucifying the Son of God for themselves and holding him up to contempt. [7*] Ground that has absorbed the rain falling upon it repeatedly and brings forth crops useful to those for whom it is cultivated receives a blessing from God. [8*] But if it produces thorns and thistles, it is rejected; it will soon be cursed and finally burned.

[9] But we are sure in your regard, beloved, of better things related to salvation, even though we speak in this way. [10] For God is not unjust so as to overlook your work and the love you have demonstrated for his name by having served and continuing to serve the holy ones. [11*] We earnestly desire each of you to demonstrate the same eagerness for the fulfillment of hope until the end, [12*†] so that you may not become sluggish, but imitators of those who, through faith and patience, are inheriting the promises.

God's Promise Immutable. [13*†] When God made the promise to Abraham, since he had no one greater by whom to swear, "he swore by himself," [14*] and

5, 8: Son though he was: two different though not incompatible views of Jesus' sonship coexist in Heb, one associating it with his exaltation, the other with his preexistence. The former view is the older one (cf Rom 1, 4).

5, 11—6, 20: The central section of Heb (5, 11—10, 39) opens with a reprimand and an appeal. Those to whom the author directs his teaching about Jesus' priesthood, which is difficult to explain, have become sluggish in hearing and forgetful of even the basic elements (5, 12). But rather than treating of basic teachings, the author apparently believes that the challenge of more advanced ones may shake them out of their inertia (therefore, 6, 1). The six examples of basic teaching in 6, 1-3 are probably derived from a traditional catechetical list. No effort is made to address apostates, for their very hostility to the Christian message cuts them off completely from Christ (6, 4-8). This harsh statement seems to rule out repentance after apostasy, but perhaps the author deliberately uses hyperbole in order to stress the seriousness of abandoning Christ. With 6, 9 a milder tone is introduced, and the criticism of the community (6, 1-3.9) is now balanced by an expression of confidence that its members are living truly Christian lives, and that God will justly reward their efforts (10). The author is concerned especially about their persevering (11-12), citing in this regard the achievement of Abraham, who relied on God's promise and on God's oath (13-18; cf Gn 22, 16), and proposes to them as a firm anchor of Christian hope the high priesthood of Christ, who is now living with God (19-20).

6, 2: Instruction about baptisms: not simply about Christian baptism but about the difference between it and similar Jewish rites, such as proselyte baptism, John's baptism, and the washings of the Qumran sectaries. Laying on of hands: in Acts 8, 17; 19, 6 this rite effects the infusion of the holy Spirit; in Acts 6, 6; 13, 3; 1 Tm 4, 14; 5, 22; 2 Tm 1, 6 it is a means of conferring some ministry or mission in the early Christian community.

6, 4: Enlightened and tasted the heavenly gift: this may refer to baptism and the Eucharist, respectively, but more probably means the neophytes' enlightenment by faith and their experience of salvation.

6, 5: Tasted the good word of God and the powers of the age to come: the proclamation of the word of God was accompanied by signs of the Spirit's power (1 Thes 1, 5; 1 Cor 2, 4).

6, 6: They are recrucifying the Son of God for themselves: a colorful description of the malice of apostasy, which is portrayed as again crucifying and derding the Son of God.

6, 12: Imitators of those . . . inheriting the promises: the author urges the addressees to imitate the faith of the holy people of the Old Testament, who now possess the promised goods of which they lived in hope. This theme will be treated fully in ch 11.

6, 13: He swore by himself: God's promise to Abraham, which he confirmed by an oath ("I swear by myself," Gen 22, 16) was the basis for the hope of all Abraham's descendants.

said, "I will indeed bless you and multiply" you. 15*† And so, after patient waiting, he obtained the promise. 16 Human beings swear by someone greater than themselves; for them an oath serves as a guarantee and puts an end to all argument. 17* So when God wanted to give the heirs of his promise an even clearer demonstration of the immutability of his purpose, he intervened with an oath, 18*† so that by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we who have taken refuge might be strongly encouraged to hold fast to the hope that lies before us. 19*† This we have as an anchor of the soul, sure and firm, which reaches into the interior behind the veil, 20* where Jesus has entered on our behalf as forerunner, becoming high priest forever according to the order of Melchizedek.

Melchizedek, a Type of Christ.† 1*† This "Melchizedek, king of Salem and priest of God Most High," "met Abraham as he returned from his defeat of the kings" and "blessed him." 2† And Abraham apportioned to him "a tenth of everything." His name first means righteous king, and he was also "king of Salem," that is, king of peace. 3*† Without father, mother, or ancestry, without beginning of days or end of life, thus made to resemble the Son of God, he remains a priest forever.

4*† See how great he is to whom the patriarch "Abraham [indeed] gave a tenth" of his spoils. 5* The descendants of Levi who receive the office of priesthood have a commandment according to the law to exact tithes from the people, that is, from their brothers, although they also have come from the loins of Abraham. 6 But he who was not of their ancestry received tithes from Abraham and blessed him who had received the promises. 7† Unquestionably, a lesser person is blessed by a greater. 8 In the one case, mortal men receive tithes; in the other, a man of whom it is testified that he lives on. 9† One might even say that Levi himself, who receives tithes, was tithed through Abraham, 10 for he was still in his father's loins when Melchizedek met him.

11*† If, then, perfection came through the levitical priesthood, on the basis of which the people received the law, what need would there still have been for another priest to arise according to the order of Melchizedek, and not reckoned according to the order of Aaron? 12 When there is a change of priesthood, there is necessarily a change of law as well. 13† Now he of whom these things are said belonged to a different tribe, of which no member ever officiated at

6, 15: He obtained the promise: this probably refers not to Abraham's temporary possession of the land but to the eschatological blessings that Abraham and the other patriarchs have now come to possess.

6, 18: Two immutable things: the promise and the oath, both made by God.

6, 19: Anchor . . . into the interior behind the veil: a mixed metaphor. The Holy of Holies, beyond the veil that separates it from the Holy Place (Ex 26, 31-33), is seen as the earthly counterpart of the heavenly abode of God. This theme will be developed in ch 9.

7, 1-3: Recalling the meeting between Melchizedek and Abraham described in Gn 14, 17-20, the author enhances the significance of this priest by providing the popular etymological meaning of his name and that of the city over which he ruled (2). Since Genesis gives no information on the parentage or the death of Melchizedek, he is seen here as a type of Christ, representing a priesthood that is unique and eternal (3).

7, 1: The author here assumes that Melchizedek was a priest of the God of Israel (cf Gn 14, 22 and the note there).

7, 2: In Gn 14, the Hebrew text does not state explicitly who gave tithes to whom. The author of Heb supplies Abraham as the subject, according to a contemporary interpretation of the passage. This supports the argument of the midrash and makes it possible to see in Melchizedek a type of Jesus. The messianic blessings of righteousness and peace are foreshadowed in the names "Melchizedek" and "Salem."

7, 3: Without father, mother, or ancestry, without beginning of days or end of life: this is perhaps a quotation from a hymn about Melchizedek. The rabbis maintained that anything not mentioned in the Torah does not exist. Consequently, since the Old Testament nowhere mentions Melchizedek's ancestry, birth, or death, the conclusion can be drawn that he remains . . . forever.

7, 4-10: The tithe that Abraham gave to Melchizedek (4), a practice later followed by the levitical priesthood (5), was a gift (6) acknowledging a certain superiority in Melchizedek, the foreign priest (7). This is further indicated by the fact that the institution of the levitical priesthood was sustained by hereditary succession in the tribe of Levi, whereas the absence of any mention of Melchizedek's death in Gn implies that his personal priesthood is permanent (8). The levitical priesthood itself, through Abraham, its ancestor, paid tithes to Melchizedek, thus acknowledging the superiority of his priesthood over its own (9-10).

7, 7: A lesser person is blessed by a greater: though this sounds like a principle, there are some examples in the Old Testament that do not support it (cf 2 Sm 14, 22; Jb 31, 20). The author may intend it as a statement of a liturgical rule.

7, 9: Levi: for the author this name designates not only the son of Jacob mentioned in Genesis but the priestly tribe that was thought to be descended from him.

7, 11-14: The levitical priesthood was not typified by the priesthood of Melchizedek, for Ps 110, 4 speaks of a priesthood of a new order, the order of Melchizedek, to arise in messianic times (11). Since the levitical priesthood served the Mosaic law, a new priesthood (12) would not come into being without a change in the law itself. Thus Jesus was not associated with the Old Testament priesthood, for he was a descendant of the tribe of Judah, which had never exercised the priesthood (13-14).

7, 13: He of whom these things are said: Jesus, the priest "according to the order of Melchizedek." According to the author's interpretation, Ps 110 spoke prophetically of Jesus.

the altar. [14]† It is clear that our Lord arose from Judah, and in regard to that tribe Moses said nothing about priests. [15]† It is even more obvious if another priest is raised up after the likeness of Melchizedek, [16]† who has become so, not by a law expressed in a commandment concerning physical descent but by the power of a life that cannot be destroyed. [17] For it is testified:

> "You are a priest forever
> according to the order of Melchizedek."

[18]* On the one hand, a former commandment is annulled because of its weakness and uselessness, [19]† for the law brought nothing to perfection; on the other hand, a better hope is introduced, through which we draw near to God. [20]† And to the degree that this happened not without the taking of an oath—for others became priests without an oath, [21]* but he with an oath, through the one who said to him:

> "The Lord has sworn, and he will not repent:
> 'You are a priest forever' "—

[22]† to that same degree has Jesus [also] become the guarantee of an [even] better covenant. [23] Those priests were many because they were prevented by death from remaining in office, [24] but he, because he remains forever, has a priesthood that does not pass away. [25]*† Therefore, he is always able to save those who approach God through him, since he lives forever to make intercession for them.

[26]† It was fitting that we should have such a high priest: holy, innocent, undefiled, separated from sinners, higher than the heavens. [27]† He has no need, as did the high priests, to offer sacrifice day after day, first for his own sins and then for those of the people; he did that once for all when he offered himself. [28]* For the law appoints men subject to weakness to be high priests, but the word of the oath, which was taken after the law, appoints a son, who has been made perfect forever.

CHAPTER 8

Heavenly Priesthood of Jesus.† [1]* The main point of what has been said is this: we have such a high priest, who has taken his seat at the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in heaven, 28: 5, 1.2.9.

8, 1: 1, 3; 4, 14; 7, 26-28.

7, 14: Judah: the author accepts the early Christian tradition that Jesus was descended from the family of David (cf Mt 1, 1-2.16.20; Lk 1, 27; 2, 4; Rom 1, 3). The Qumran community expected two Messiahs, one descended from Aaron and one from David; Heb shows no awareness of this view or at least does not accept it. Our author's view is not attested in contemporaneous Judaism.

7, 15-19: Jesus does not exercise a priesthood through family lineage but through his immortal existence (15-16), fulfilling Ps 110, 4 (17; cf 3). Thus he abolishes forever both the levitical priesthood and the law it serves, because neither could effectively sanctify people (18) by leading them into direct communication with God (19).

7, 16: A life that cannot be destroyed: the life to which Jesus has attained by virtue of his resurrection; it is his exaltation rather than his divine nature that makes him priest. The Old Testament speaks of the Aaronic priesthood as eternal (see Ex 40, 15); our author does not explicitly consider this possible objection to his argument but implicitly refutes it in vv 23-24.

7, 19: A better hope: this hope depends upon the sacrifice of the Son of God; through it we "approach the throne of grace" (4, 16); cf 6, 19.20.

7, 20-25: As was the case with the promise to Abraham (6, 13), though not with the levitical priesthood, the eternal priesthood of the order of Melchizedek was confirmed by God's oath (20-21); cf Ps 110, 4. Thus Jesus becomes the guarantee of a permanent covenant (22) that does not require a succession of priests as did the levitical priesthood (23) because his high priesthood is eternal and unchangeable (24). Consequently, Jesus is able to save all who draw near to God through him since he is their ever-living intercessor (25).

7, 20: An oath: God's oath in Ps 110, 4.

7, 22: An [even] better covenant: better than the Mosaic covenant because it will be eternal, like the priesthood of Jesus upon which it is based. Verse 12 argued that a change of priesthood involves a change of law; since "law" and "covenant" are used correlatively, a new covenant is likewise instituted.

7, 25: To make intercession: the intercession of the exalted Jesus, not the sequel to his completed sacrifice but its eternal presence in heaven; cf Rom 8, 34.

7, 26-28: Jesus is precisely the high priest whom the human race requires, holy and sinless, installed far above humanity (26); one having no need to offer sacrifice daily for sins but making a single offering of himself (27) once for all. The law could only appoint high priests with human limitations, but the fulfillment of God's oath regarding the priesthood of Melchizedek (Ps 110, 4) makes the Son of God the perfect priest forever (28).

7, 26: This verse with its list of attributes is reminiscent of v 3 and is perhaps a hymnic counterpart to it, contrasting the exalted Jesus with Melchizedek.

7, 27: Such daily sacrifice is nowhere mentioned in the Mosaic law; only on the Day of Atonement is it prescribed that the high priest must offer sacrifice . . . for his own sins and then for those of the people (Lv 16, 11-19). Once for all: this translates the Greek words ephapax hapax that occur eleven times in Heb.

8, 1-6: The Christian community has in Jesus the kind of high priest described in 7, 26-28. In virtue of his ascension Jesus has taken his place at God's right hand in accordance with Ps 110, 1 (1), where he presides over the heavenly sanctuary established by God himself (2). Like every high priest, he has his offering to make (3; cf 9, 12.14), but it differs from that of the levitical priesthood in which he had no share (4) and which was in any case but a shadowy reflection of the true offering in the heavenly sanctuary (5). But Jesus' ministry in the heavenly sanctuary is that of mediator of a superior covenant that accomplishes what it signifies (6).

2*† a minister of the sanctuary and of the true tabernacle that the Lord, not man, set up. 3* Now every high priest is appointed to offer gifts and sacrifices;
thus the necessity for this one also to have something to offer. 4* If then he were on earth, he would not be a priest, since there are those who offer gifts according to the law. 5* They worship in a copy and shadow of the heavenly sanctuary, as Moses was warned when he was about to erect the tabernacle.
For he says, "See that you make everything according to the pattern shown you on the mountain." 6* Now he has obtained so much more excellent a ministry as he is mediator of a better covenant, enacted on better promises.

Old and New Covenants.† 7 For if that first covenant had been faultless, no place would have been sought for a second one. 8*† But he finds fault with them and says:

"Behold, the days are coming, says
the Lord,
when I will conclude a new covenant with the house of Israel
and the house of Judah.
9 It will not be like the covenant I made with their fathers
the day I took them by the hand to lead them forth from the land
of Egypt;
for they did not stand by my covenant
and I ignored them, says the Lord.
10* But this is the covenant I will establish with the house of Israel
after those days, says the Lord:
I will put my laws in their minds and I will write them upon their hearts.
I will be their God,
and they shall be my people.
11 And they shall not teach, each one his fellow citizen and kinsman, saying, 'Know the Lord,'
for all shall know me,
from least to greatest.
12 For I will forgive their evildoing and remember their sins no
more."

13*† When he speaks of a "new" covenant, he declares the first one obsolete.
And what has become obsolete and has grown old is close to disappearing.

CHAPTER 9

The Worship of the First Covenant.†
1 Now [even] the first covenant had regulations for worship and an earthly sanctuary. 2*† For a tabernacle was constructed, the outer one, in which were the lampstand, the table, and the bread of offering; this is called the Holy Place. 3*† Behind the second veil was the tabernacle called the Holy of Holies, 4*† in which were the gold altar of incense and the ark of the covenant entirely covered with gold. In it were the gold jar containing the manna, the staff of Aaron that had sprouted, and the tablets of the covenant. 5*† Above it were the cherubim of glory overshadowing the place of expiation. Now is not the time to speak of these in detail.

8, 2: The sanctuary: the Greek term could also mean "holy things" but bears the meaning "sanctuary" elsewhere in Heb (9, 8.12.24.25; 10, 19; 13, 11). The true tabernacle: the heavenly tabernacle that the Lord . . . set up is contrasted with the earthly tabernacle that Moses set up in the desert. True means "real" in contradistinction to a mere "copy and shadow" (5); compare the Johannine usage (e.g., Jn 1, 9; 6, 32; 15, 1). The idea that the earthly sanctuary is a reflection of a heavenly model may be based upon Ex 25, 9, but probably also derives from the Platonic concept of a real world of which our observable world is merely a shadow.

8, 7-13: Since the first covenant was deficient in accomplishing what it signified, it had to be replaced (7), as Jeremiah (31, 31-34) had prophesied (8-12). Even in the time of Jeremiah, the first covenant was antiquated (13). In 7, 22-24, the superiority of the new covenant was seen in the permanence of its priesthood; here the superiority is based on better promises, made explicit in the citation of Jer 31 (LXX: 38), 31-34, namely, in the immediacy of the people's knowledge of God (11) and in the forgiveness of sin (12).

8, 8-12: In citing Jer the author follows the Septuagint; some apparent departures from it may be the result of a different Septuagintal text rather than changes deliberately introduced.

8, 13: Close to disappearing: from the prophet's perspective, not that of the author of Heb.

9, 1-10: The regulations for worship under the old covenant permitted all the priests to enter the Holy Place (2, 6), but only the high priest to enter the Holy of Holies and then only once a year (3-5.7). The description of the sanctuary and its furnishings is taken essentially from Ex 25-26. This exclusion of the people from the Holy of Holies signified that they were not allowed to stand in God's presence (8) because their offerings and sacrifices, which were merely symbols of their need of spiritual renewal (10), could not obtain forgiveness of sins (9).

9, 2: The outer one: the author speaks of the outer tabernacle (6) and the inner one (7) rather than of one Mosaic tabernacle divided into two parts or sections.

9, 3: The second veil: what is meant is the veil that divided the Holy Place from the Holy of Holies. It is here called the second, because there was another veil at the entrance to the Holy Place, or "outer tabernacle" (Ex 26, 36).

9, 4: The gold altar of incense: Ex 30, 6 locates this altar in the Holy Place, i.e., the first tabernacle, rather than in the Holy of Holies. Neither is there any Old Testament support for the assertion that the jar of manna and the staff of Aaron were in the ark of the covenant. For the tablets of the covenant, see Ex 25, 16.

9, 5: The place of expiation: the gold "mercy seat" (Greek hilastérion, as in Rom 3, 25), where the blood of the sacrificial animals was sprinkled on the Day of Atonement (Lv 16, 14-15). This rite achieved "expiation" or atonement for the sins of the preceding year.

6*† With these arrangements for worship, the priests, in performing their service, go into the outer tabernacle repeatedly, 7*† but the high priest alone goes into the inner one once a year, not without blood that he offers for himself and for the sins of the people. 8 In this way the holy Spirit shows that the way into the sanctuary had not yet been revealed while the outer tabernacle still had its place. 9† This is a symbol of the present time, in which gifts and sacrifices are offered that cannot perfect the worshiper in conscience 10* but only in matters of food and drink and various ritual washings: regulations concerning the flesh, imposed until the time of the new order.

Sacrifice of Jesus.† 11† But when Christ came as high priest of the good things that have come to be, passing through the greater and more perfect tabernacle not made by hands, that is, not belonging to this creation, 12* he entered once for all into the sanctuary, not with the blood of goats and calves but with his own blood, thus obtaining eternal redemption. 13*† For if the blood of goats and bulls and the sprinkling of a heifer's ashes can sanctify those who are defiled so that their flesh is cleansed, 14*† how much more will the blood of Christ, who through the eternal spirit offered himself unblemished to God, cleanse our consciences from dead works to worship the living God.

15*† For this reason he is mediator of a new covenant: since a death has taken place for deliverance from transgressions under the first covenant, those who are called may receive the promised eternal inheritance. 16† Now where there is a will, the death of the testator must be established. 17 For a will takes effect only at death; it has no force while the testator is alive. 18 Thus not even the first covenant was inaugurated without blood. 19*† When every commandment had been proclaimed by Moses to all the people according to the law, he took the blood of calves [and goats], together with water and crimson wool and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book itself and all the people, 20* saying, "This is 'the blood of the covenant which God has enjoined upon you.'" 21*† In the same way, he sprinkled also the tabernacle and all the vessels of worship with 20: Ex 24, 3-8; Mt 26, 28; Mk 14, 24.

21: Ex 40, 9; Lv 8, 15.19.

† 9, 6: In performing their service: the priestly services that had to be performed regularly in the Holy Place or outer tabernacle included burning incense on the incense altar twice each day (Ex 30, 7), replacing the loaves on the table of the bread of offering once each week (Lv 24, 8), and constantly caring for the lamps on the lampstand (Ex 27, 21).

9, 7: Not without blood: blood was essential to Old Testament sacrifice because it was believed that life was located in the blood. Hence blood was especially sacred, and its outpouring functioned as a meaningful symbol of cleansing from sin and reconciliation with God. Unlike Heb, the Old Testament never says that the blood is "offered." The author is perhaps retrojecting into his description of Mosaic ritual a concept that belongs to the New Testament antitype, as Paul does when he speaks of the Israelites' passage through the sea as a "baptism" (1 Cor 10, 2).

9, 9: The present time: this expression is equivalent to the "present age," used in contradistinction to the "age to come."

9, 11-14: Christ, the high priest of the spiritual blessings foreshadowed in the Old Testament sanctuary, has actually entered the true sanctuary of heaven that is not of human making (11). His place there is permanent, and his offering is his own blood that won eternal redemption (12). If the sacrifice of animals could bestow legal purification (13), how much more effective is the blood of the sinless, divine Christ who spontaneously offered himself to purge the human race of sin and render it fit for the service of God (14).

9, 11: The good things that have come to be: the majority of later manuscripts here read "the good things to come"; cf 10, 1.

9, 13: A heifer's ashes: ashes from a red heifer that had been burned were mixed with water and used for the cleansing of those who had become ritually defiled by touching a corpse; see Nm 19, 9.14-21.

9, 14: Through the eternal spirit: this expression does not refer either to the holy Spirit or to the divine nature of Jesus but to the life of the risen Christ, "a life that cannot be destroyed" (7, 16).

9, 15-22: Jesus' role as mediator of the new covenant is based upon his sacrificial death (cf 8, 6). His death has effected deliverance from transgressions, i.e., deliverance from sins committed under the old covenant, which the Mosaic sacrifices were incapable of effacing. Until this happened, the eternal inheritance promised by God could not be obtained (15). This effect of his work follows the human pattern by which a last will and testament becomes effective only with the death of the testator (16-17). The Mosaic covenant was also associated with death, for Moses made use of blood to seal the pact between God and the people (18-21). In Old Testament tradition, guilt could normally not be remitted without the use of blood (22; cf Lv 17, 11).

9, 16-17: A will . . . death of the testator: the same Greek word diathēkē, meaning "covenant" in vv 15 and 18, is used here with the meaning will. The new covenant, unlike the old, is at the same time a will that requires the death of the testator. Jesus as eternal Son is the one who established the new covenant together with his Father, author of both covenants; at the same time he is the testator whose death puts his will into effect.

9, 19-20: A number of details here are different from the description of this covenant rite in Ex 24, 5-8. Exodus mentions only calves ("young bulls," NAB), not goats (but this addition in Heb is of doubtful authenticity), says nothing of the use of water and crimson wool and hyssop (these features probably came from a different rite; cf Lv 14, 3-7; Nm 19, 6-18), and describes Moses as splashing blood on the altar, whereas Heb says he sprinkled it on the book (but both book and altar are meant to symbolize the agreement of God). The words of Moses are also slightly different from those in Exodus and are closer to the words of Jesus at the Last Supper in Mk 14, 24 // Mt 26, 28.

9, 21: According to Ex, the tabernacle did not yet exist at the time of the covenant rite. Moreover, nothing is said of sprinkling it with blood at its subsequent dedication (Ex 40, 9-11).

blood. 22*† According to the law almost everything is purified by blood, and without the shedding of blood there is no forgiveness.
23*† Therefore, it was necessary for the copies of the heavenly things to be purified by these rites, but the heavenly things themselves by better sacrifices than these. 24* For Christ did not enter into a sanctuary made by hands, a copy of the true one, but heaven itself, that he might now appear before God on our behalf. 25 Not that he might offer himself repeatedly, as the high priest enters each year into the sanctuary with blood that is not his own; 26*† if that were so,
he would have had to suffer repeatedly from the foundation of the world. But now once for all he has appeared at the end of the ages to take away sin by his sacrifice. 27* Just as it is appointed that human beings die once, and after this the judgment, 28*† so also Christ, offered once to take away
the sins of many, will appear a second time, not to take away sin but to bring salvation to those who eagerly await him.

CHAPTER 10

One Sacrifice instead of Many.† 1*† Since the law has only a shadow of the good things to come, and not the very image of them, it can never make perfect those who come to worship by the same sacrifices that they offer continually each year. 2 Otherwise, would not the sacrifices have ceased to be offered, since the worshipers, once cleansed, would no longer have had any consciousness of sins? 3* But in those sacrifices there is only a yearly remembrance of sins, 4* for it is impossible that the blood of bulls and goats take away sins. 5*† For this reason, when he came into the world, he said:

"Sacrifice and offering you did not desire,
but a body you prepared for me;
6 holocausts and sin offerings you took no delight in.
7 Then I said, 'As is written of me in the scroll,
Behold, I come to do your will, O
God.' "

8*† First he says, "Sacrifices and offerings, holocausts and sin offerings, you neither desired nor delighted in." These are offered according to the law.
9* Then he says, "Behold, I come to do your will." He takes away the first to establish the second. 10* By this "will,"
we have been consecrated through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all.

9, 22: Without the shedding of blood there is no forgiveness: in fact, ancient Israel did envisage other means of obtaining forgiveness; the Old Testament mentions contrition of heart (Ps 51, 19), fasting (Jl 2, 12), and almsgiving (Sir 3, 29). The author is limiting his horizon to the sacrificial cult, which did always involve the shedding of blood for its expiatory and unitive value.

9, 23-28: Since the blood of animals became a cleansing symbol among Old Testament prefigurements, it was necessary that the realities foreshadowed be brought into being by a shedding of blood that was infinitely more effective by reason of its worth (23). Christ did not simply prefigure the heavenly realities (24) by performing an annual sacrifice with a blood not his own (25); he offered the single sacrifice of himself as the final annulment of sin (26). Just as death is the unrepeatable act that ends a person's life, so Christ's offering of himself for all is the unrepeatable sacrifice that has once for all achieved redemption (27-28).

9, 26: At the end of the ages: the use of expressions such as this shows that the author of Heb, despite his interest in the Platonic concept of an eternal world above superior to temporal reality here below, nevertheless still clings to the Jewish Christian eschatology with its sequence of "the present age" and "the age to come."

9, 28: To take away the sins of many: the reference is to Is 53, 12. Since the Greek verb anapherō can mean both "to take away" and "to bear," the author no doubt intended to play upon both senses: Jesus took away sin by bearing it himself. See the similar wordplay in Jn 1, 29. Many is used in the Semitic meaning of "all" in the inclusive sense, as in Mk 14, 24. To those who eagerly await him: Jesus will appear a second time at the parousia, as the high priest reappeared on the Day of Atonement, emerging from the Holy of Holies, which he had entered to take away sin. This dramatic scene is described in Sir 50, 5-11.

10, 1-10: Christian faith now realizes that the Old Testament sacrifices did not effect the spiritual benefits to come but only prefigured them (1). For if the sacrifices had actually effected the forgiveness of sin, there would have been no reason for their constant repetition (2). They were rather a continual reminder of the people's sins (3). It is not reasonable to suppose that human sins could be removed by the blood of animal sacrifices (4). Christ, therefore, is here shown to understand his mission in terms of Ps 40, 6-8, cited according to the Septuagint (5-7). Jesus acknowledged that the Old Testament sacrifices did not remit the sins of the people and so, perceiving the will of God, offered his own body for this purpose (8-10).

10, 1: A shadow of the good things to come: the term shadow was used in 8, 5 to signify the earthly counterpart of the Platonic heavenly reality. But here it means a prefiguration of what is to come in Christ, as it is used in the Pauline literature; cf Col 2, 17.

10, 5-7: A passage from Ps 40, 7-9a is placed in the mouth of the Son at his incarnation. As usual, the author follows the Septuagint text. There is a notable difference in v 5 (= Ps 40, 7b), where the Masoretic text reads "ears you have dug for me" ("ears open to obedience you gave me," NAB), but most Septuagint manuscripts have "a body you prepared for me," a reading obviously more suited to the interpretation of Heb.

10, 8: Sacrifices and offerings, holocausts and sin offerings: these four terms taken from the preceding passage of Ps 40 (with the first two changed to plural forms) are probably intended as equivalents to the four principal types of Old Testament sacrifices: peace offerings (Lv 3, here called sacrifices); cereal offerings (Lv 2, here called offerings); holocausts (Lv 1); and sin offerings (Lv 4-5). This last category includes the guilt offerings of Lv 5, 14-26.

11*† Every priest stands daily at his ministry, offering frequently those same sacrifices that can never take away sins. 12* But this one offered one sacrifice for sins, and took his seat forever at the right hand of God; 13† now he waits until his enemies are made his footstool. 14* For by one offering he has made perfect forever those who are being consecrated. 15†The holy Spirit also testifies to us, for after saying:

16* "This is the covenant I will establish with them after those days, says
the Lord:
'I will put my laws in their hearts,
and I will write them upon their minds,'"

17*† he also says:

"Their sins and their evildoing
I will remember no more."

18 Where there is forgiveness of these,
there is no longer offering for sin.

Recalling the Past.† 19* Therefore, brothers, since through the blood of Jesus we have confidence of entrance into the sanctuary 20*† by the new and living way he opened for us through the veil, that is, his flesh, 21*† and since we have "a great priest over the house of God," 22*† let us approach with a sincere heart and in absolute trust, with our hearts sprinkled clean from an evil conscience
and our bodies washed in pure water.
23* Let us hold unwaveringly to our confession that gives us hope, for he who made the promise is trustworthy.
24 We must consider how to rouse one another to love and good works. 25*† We should not stay away from our assembly, as is the custom of some, but encourage one another, and this all the more as you see the day drawing near.
26*† If we sin deliberately after receiving knowledge of the truth, there no longer remains sacrifice for sins 27* but a fearful prospect of judgment and a flaming fire that is going to consume the adversaries. 28*† Anyone who rejects the law of Moses is put to death without pity on the testimony of two or three witnesses. 29* Do you not think that a much worse punishment is due the one who has contempt for the Son of God, considers unclean the covenant-blood
by which he was consecrated, and insults the spirit of grace? 30* We know the one who said:

† 10, 11-18: Whereas the levitical priesthood offered daily sacrifices that were ineffectual in remitting sin (11), Jesus offered a single sacrifice that won him a permanent place at God's right hand. There he has only to await the final outcome of his work (12-13; cf Ps 110, 1). Thus he has brought into being in his own person the new covenant prophesied by Jeremiah (31, 33-34) that has rendered meaningless all other offerings for sin (14-18).

10, 13: Until his enemies are made his footstool: Ps 110, 1 is again used; the reference here is to the period of time between the enthronement of Jesus and his second coming. The identity of the enemies is not specified; cf 1 Cor 15, 25-27.

10, 15-17: The testimony of the scriptures is now invoked to support what has just preceded. The passage cited is a portion of the new covenant prophecy of Jer 31, 31-34, which the author previously used in 8, 8-12.

10, 17: He also says: these words are not in the Greek text, which has only kai, "also," but the expression after saying in v 15 seems to require such a phrase to divide the Jeremiah text into two sayings. Others understand "the Lord says" of v 16 (here rendered says the Lord) as outside the quotation and consider v 16b as part of the second saying. Two ancient versions and a number of minuscules introduce the words "then he said" or a similar expression at the beginning of v 17.

10, 19-39: Practical consequences from these reflections on the priesthood and the sacrifice of Christ should make it clear that Christians may now have direct and confident access to God through the person of Jesus (19-20), who rules God's house as high priest (21). They should approach God with sincerity and faith, in the knowledge that through baptism their sins have been remitted (22), reminding themselves of the hope they expressed in Christ at that event (23). They are to encourage one another to Christian love and activity (24), not refusing, no matter what the reason, to participate in the community's assembly, especially in view of the parousia (25; cf 1 Thes 4, 13-18). If refusal to participate in the assembly indicates rejection of Christ, no sacrifice exists to obtain forgiveness for so great a sin (26); only the dreadful judgment of God remains (27). For if violation of the Mosaic law could be punished by death, how much worse will be the punishment of those who have turned their backs on Christ by despising his sacrifice and disregarding the gifts of the holy Spirit (28-29). Judgment belongs to the Lord, and he enacts it by his living presence (30-31). There was a time when the spirit of their community caused them to welcome and share their sufferings (32-34). To revitalize that spirit is to share in the courage of the Old Testament prophets (cf Is 26, 20; Hb 2, 3-4), the kind of courage that must distinguish the faith of the Christian (35-39).

10, 20: Through the veil, that is, his flesh: the term flesh is used pejoratively. As the temple veil kept people from entering the Holy of Holies (it was rent at Christ's death, Mk 15, 38), so the flesh of Jesus constituted an obstacle to approaching God.

10, 21: The house of God: this refers back to 3, 6, "we are his house."

10, 22: With our hearts sprinkled clean from an evil conscience: as in 9, 13 (see the note there), the sprinkling motif refers to the Mosaic rite of cleansing from ritual impurity. This could produce only an external purification, whereas sprinkling with the blood of Christ (9, 14) cleanses the conscience. Washed in pure water: baptism is elsewhere referred to as a washing; cf 1 Cor 6, 11; Eph 5, 26.

10, 25: Our assembly: the liturgical assembly of the Christian community, probably for the celebration of the Eucharist. The day: this designation for the parousia also occurs in the Pauline letters, e.g., Rom 2, 16; 1 Cor 3, 13; 1 Thes 5, 2.

10, 26: If we sin deliberately: verse 29 indicates that the author is here thinking of apostasy; cf 3, 12; 6, 4-8.

10, 28: Rejects the law of Moses: evidently not any sin against the law, but idolatry. Dt 17, 2-7 prescribed capital punishment for idolaters who were convicted on the testimony of two or three witnesses.

"Vengeance is mine; I will repay,"
and again:
"The Lord will judge his people."

31* It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.
32*† Remember the days past when,
after you had been enlightened, you endured a great contest of suffering.
33* At times you were publicly exposed to abuse and affliction; at other times
you associated yourselves with those so treated. 34* You even joined in the sufferings of those in prison and joyfully accepted the confiscation of your property, knowing that you had a better and lasting possession. 35* Therefore, do not throw away your confidence; it will have great recompense. 36* You need endurance to do the will of God and receive what he has promised.

37*†"For, after just a brief moment,
he who is to come shall come;
he shall not delay.
38* But my just one shall live by faith,
and if he draws back I take no
pleasure in him."

39 We are not among those who draw back and perish, but among those who have faith and will possess life.

V: EXAMPLES, DISCIPLINE, DISOBEDIENCE

CHAPTER 11†

Faith of the Ancients. 1*† Faith is the realization of what is hoped for and evidence of things not seen. 2 Because of it the ancients were well attested.
3*† By faith we understand that the universe was ordered by the word of God,
so that what is visible came into being through the invisible. 4*† By faith Abel offered to God a sacrifice greater than Cain's. Through this he was attested to be righteous, God bearing witness to his gifts, and through this, though dead, he still speaks. 5* By faith Enoch was taken up so that he should not see death,
and "he was found no more because God had taken him." Before he was taken up, he was attested to have pleased God. 6*† But without faith it is impossible to please him, for anyone who approaches God must believe that he exists and that he rewards those who seek him. 7* By faith Noah, warned about what was not yet seen, with reverence built an ark for the salvation of his household. Through this he condemned the world and inherited the righteousness that comes through faith.
8* By faith Abraham obeyed when he was called to go out to a place that he was to receive as an inheritance; he went out, not knowing where he was to

† 10, 32: After you had been enlightened: "enlightenment" is an ancient metaphor for baptism (cf Eph 5, 14; Jn 9, 11), but see 6, 4 and the note there.

10, 37-38: In support of his argument, the author uses Hb 2, 3-4 in a wording almost identical with the text of the Codex Alexandrinus of the Septuagint but with the first and second lines of v 4 inverted. He introduces it with a few words from Is 26, 20: after just a brief moment. Note the Pauline usage of Hb 2, 4 in Rom 1, 17; Gal 3, 11.

11, 1-40: This chapter draws upon the people and events of the Old Testament to paint an inspiring portrait of religious faith, firm and unyielding in the face of any obstacles that confront it. These pages rank among the most eloquent and lofty to be found in the Bible. They expand the theme announced in 6, 12, to which the author now returns (10, 39). The material of this chapter is developed chronologically. Verses 3-7 draw upon the first nine chapters of Gn; vv 8-22, upon the period of the patriarchs; vv 23-31, upon the time of Moses; vv 32-38, upon the history of the judges, the prophets, and the Maccabean martyrs. The author gives the most extensive description of faith provided in the New Testament, though his interest does not lie in a technical, theological definition. In view of the needs of his audience he describes what authentic faith does, not what it is in itself. Through faith God guarantees the blessings to be hoped for from him, providing evidence in the gift of faith that what he promises will eventually come to pass (1). Because they accepted in faith God's guarantee of the future, the biblical personages discussed in vv 3-38 were themselves commended by God (2). Christians have even greater reason to remain firm in faith since they, unlike the Old Testament men and women of faith, have perceived the beginning of God's fulfillment of his messianic promises (39-40).

11, 1: Faith is the realization . . . evidence: the author is not attempting a precise definition. There is dispute about the meaning of the Greek words hypostasis and elenchos, here translated realization and evidence, respectively. Hypostasis usually means "substance," "being" (as translated in 1, 3), or "reality" (as translated in 3, 14); here it connotes something more subjective, and so realization has been chosen rather than "assurance" (RSV). Elenchos, usually "proof," is used here in an objective sense and so translated evidence rather than the transferred sense of "(inner) conviction" (RSV).

11, 3: By faith . . . God: this verse does not speak of the faith of the Old Testament men and women but is in the first person plural. Hence it seems out of place in the sequence of thought.

11, 4: The "Praise of the Ancestors" in Sir 44, 1—50, 21 gives a similar list of heroes. The Cain and Abel narrative in Gn 4, 1-16 does not mention Abel's faith. It says, however, that God "looked with favor on Abel and his offering" (Gn 4, 4); in view of v 6 the author probably understood God's favor to have been activated by Abel's faith. Though dead, he still speaks: possibly because his blood "cries out to me from the soil" (Gn 4, 10), but more probably a way of saying that the repeated story of Abel provides ongoing witness to faith.

11, 6: One must believe not only that God exists but that he is concerned about human conduct; the Old Testament defines folly as the denial of this truth; cf Ps 52, 2.

go. [9]* By faith he sojourned in the promised land as in a foreign country, dwelling in tents with Isaac and Jacob, heirs of the same promise; [10]* for he was looking forward to the city with foundations, whose architect and maker is God. [11]* By faith he received power to generate, even though he was past the normal age—and Sarah herself was sterile—for he thought that the one who had made the promise was trustworthy. [12]* So it was that there came forth from one man, himself as good as dead, descendants as numerous as the stars in the sky and as countless as the sands on the seashore.

[13]* All these died in faith. They did not receive what had been promised but saw it and greeted it from afar and acknowledged themselves to be strangers and aliens on earth, [14] for those who speak thus show that they are seeking a homeland. [15] If they had been thinking of the land from which they had come, they would have had opportunity to return. [16]* But now they desire a better homeland, a heavenly one. Therefore, God is not ashamed to be called their God, for he has prepared a city for them.

[17]* By faith Abraham, when put to the test, offered up Isaac, and he who had received the promises was ready to offer his only son, [18]* of whom it was said, "Through Isaac descendants shall bear your name." [19]† He reasoned that God was able to raise even from the dead, and he received Isaac back as a symbol. [20]† By faith regarding things still to come Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau. [21]* By faith Jacob, when dying, blessed each of the sons of Joseph and "bowed in worship, leaning on the top of his staff." [22]* By faith Joseph, near the end of his life, spoke of the Exodus of the Israelites and gave instructions about his bones.

[23]* By faith Moses was hidden by his parents for three months after his birth, because they saw that he was a beautiful child, and they were not afraid of the king's edict. [24]† By faith Moses, when he had grown up, refused to be known as the son of Pharaoh's daughter; [25] he chose to be ill-treated along with the people of God rather than enjoy the fleeting pleasure of sin. [26] He considered the reproach of the Anointed greater wealth than the treasures of Egypt, for he was looking to the recompense. [27] By faith he left Egypt, not fearing the king's fury, for he persevered as if seeing the one who is invisible. [28]* By faith he kept the Passover and sprinkled the blood, that the Destroyer of the firstborn might not touch them. [29]* By faith they crossed the Red Sea as if it were dry land, but when the Egyptians attempted it they were drowned. [30]* By faith the walls of Jericho fell after being encircled for seven days. [31]* By faith Rahab the harlot did not perish with the disobedient, for she had received the spies in peace.

[32]* What more shall I say? I have not time to tell of Gideon, Barak, Samson, Jephthah, of David and Samuel and the prophets, [33]* who by faith conquered kingdoms, did what was righteous, obtained the promises; they closed the mouths of lions, [34]* put out raging fires, escaped the devouring sword; out of weakness they were made powerful, became strong in battle, and turned back foreign invaders. [35]* Women received back their dead through resurrection. Some were tortured and would not accept deliverance, in order to obtain a better resurrection. [36]* Others endured mockery, scourging, even chains and imprisonment. [37]* They were stoned, sawed in two, put to death at sword's point; they went about in skins of sheep or goats, needy, afflicted, tormented. [38]* The world was not worthy of them. They wandered about in deserts and on mountains, in caves and in crevices in the earth.

11, 19: As a symbol: Isaac's "return from death" is seen as a symbol of Christ's resurrection. Others understand the words en parabolē to mean "in figure," i.e., the word dead is used figuratively of Isaac, since he did not really die. But in the one other place that parabolē occurs in Heb, it means symbol (9, 9).

11, 20-22: Each of these three patriarchs, Isaac, Jacob, and Joseph, had faith in the future fulfillment of God's promise and renewed this faith when near death.

11, 24-27: The reason given for Moses' departure from Egypt differs from the account in Ex 2, 11-15. The author also gives a christological interpretation of his decision to share the trials of his people.

had been promised. [40]† God had foreseen something better for us, so that without us they should not be made perfect.

CHAPTER 12

God our Father.† [1]† Therefore, since we are surrounded by so great a cloud of witnesses, let us rid ourselves of every burden and sin that clings to us and persevere in running the race that lies before us [2]* while keeping our eyes fixed on Jesus, the leader and perfecter of faith. For the sake of the joy that lay before him he endured the cross, despising its shame, and has taken his seat at the right of the throne of God. [3] Consider how he endured such opposition from sinners, in order that you may not grow weary and lose heart. [4] In your struggle against sin you have not yet resisted to the point of shedding blood. [5]* You have also forgotten the exhortation addressed to you as sons:

> "My son, do not disdain the discipline of the Lord
> or lose heart when reproved by him;
> [6] for whom the Lord loves, he disciplines;
> he scourges every son he acknowledges."

[7]* Endure your trials as "discipline"; God treats you as sons. For what "son" is there whom his father does not discipline? [8] If you are without discipline, in which all have shared, you are not sons but bastards. [9]* Besides this, we have had our earthly fathers to discipline us, and we respected them. Should we not [then] submit all the more to the Father of spirits and live? [10] They disciplined us for a short time as seemed right to them, but he does so for our benefit, in order that we may share his holiness. [11]* At the time, all discipline seems a cause not for joy but for pain, yet later it brings the peaceful fruit of righteousness to those who are trained by it.

[12]* So strengthen your drooping hands and your weak knees. [13]* Make straight paths for your feet, that what is lame may not be dislocated but healed.

Penalties of Disobedience. [14]* Strive for peace with everyone, and for that holiness without which no one will see the Lord. [15]† See to it that no one be deprived of the grace of God, that no bitter root spring up and cause trouble, through which many may become defiled, [16] that no one be an immoral or profane person like Esau, who sold his birthright for a single meal. [17]* For you know that later, when he wanted to inherit his father's blessing, he was rejected because he found no opportunity to change his mind, even though he sought the blessing with tears.

[18]† You have not approached that which could be touched and a blazing fire and gloomy darkness and storm [19] and a trumpet blast and a voice speaking words such that those who heard begged that no message be further addressed to them, [20]* for they could not bear to hear the command: "If even an animal touches the mountain, it shall be stoned." [21]* Indeed, so fearful was the spectacle that Moses said, "I am terrified and trembling." [22]* No, you have approached Mount Zion and the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and countless an-

11, 40: So that without us they should not be made perfect: the heroes of the Old Testament obtained their recompense only after the saving work of Christ had been accomplished. Thus they already enjoy what Christians who are still struggling do not yet possess in its fullness.

12, 1-13: Christian life is to be inspired not only by the Old Testament men and women of faith (1) but above all by Jesus. As the architect of Christian faith, he had himself to endure the cross before receiving the glory of his triumph (2). Reflection on his sufferings should give his followers courage to continue the struggle, if necessary even to the shedding of blood (3-4). Christians should regard their own sufferings as the affectionate correction of the Lord, who loves them as a father loves his children.

12, 1: That clings to us: the meaning is uncertain, since the Greek word euperistatos, translated cling, occurs only here. The papyrus P^{46} and one minuscule read euperispastos, "easily distracting," which also makes good sanse.

12, 15-17: Esau serves as an example in two ways: his profane attitude illustrates the danger of apostasy, and his inability to secure a blessing afterward illustrates the impossibility of repenting after falling away (see 6, 4-6).

12, 18-29: As a final appeal for adherence to Christian teaching, the two covenants, of Moses and of Christ, are compared. The Mosaic covenant, the author argues, is shown to have originated in fear of God and threats of divine punishment (18-21). The covenant in Christ gives us direct access to God (22), makes us members of the Christian community, God's children, a sanctified people (23), who have Jesus as mediator to speak for us (24). Not to heed the voice of the risan Christ is a greater sin than the rejection of the word of Moses (25-26). Though Chnstians fall away, God's kingdom in Christ will remain and his justice will punish those guilty of deserting it (28-29).

12, 18-24: This remarkably beautiful passage contrasts two great assemblies of people: that of the Israelites gathered at Mount Sinai for the sealing of the old covenant and the promulgation of the Mosaic law, and that of the followers of Jesus gathered at Mount Zion, the heavenly Jerusalem, the assembly of the new covenant. This latter scene, marked by the presence of countless angels and of Jesus with his redeeming blood, is reminiscent of the celestial liturgies of the Book of Revelation.

gels in festal gathering, [23]† and the assembly of the firstborn enrolled in heaven, and God the judge of all, and the spirits of the just made perfect, [24]† and Jesus, the mediator of a new covenant, and the sprinkled blood that speaks more eloquently than that of Abel.

[25]* See that you do not reject the one who speaks. For if they did not escape when they refused the one who warned them on earth, how much more in our case if we turn away from the one who warns from heaven. [26]* His voice shook the earth at that time, but now he has promised, "I will once more shake not only earth but heaven." [27]* That phrase, "once more," points to [the] removal of shaken, created things, so that what is unshaken may remain. [28]* Therefore, we who are receiving the unshakable kingdom should have gratitude, with which we should offer worship pleasing to God in reverence and awe. [29]* For our God is a consuming fire.

VI: FINAL EXHORTATION, BLESSING, GREETINGS

[1]† Let mutual love continue. [2]* Do not neglect hospitality, for through it some have unknowingly entertained angels. [3]* Be mindful of prisoners as if sharing their imprisonment, and of the ill-treated as of yourselves, for you also are in the body. [4]* Let marriage be honored among all and the marriage bed be kept undefiled, for God will judge the immoral and adulterers. [5]* Let your life be free from love of money but be content with what you have, for he has said, "I will never forsake you or abandon you." [6]* Thus we may say with confidence:

> "The Lord is my helper,
> [and] I will not be afraid.
> What can anyone do to me?"

[7] Remember your leaders who spoke the word of God to you. Consider the outcome of their way of life and imitate their faith. [8]* Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today, and forever.

[9]† Do not be carried away by all kinds of strange teaching. It is good to have our hearts strengthened by grace and not by foods, which do not benefit those who live by them. [10]† We have an altar from which those who serve the tabernacle have no right to eat. [11] The bodies of the animals whose blood the high priest brings into the sanctuary as a sin offering are burned outside the camp. [12]* Therefore, Jesus also suffered outside the gate, to consecrate the people by his own blood. [13] Let us then go to him outside the camp, bearing the reproach that he bore. [14]* For here we have no lasting city, but we seek the one that is to come. [15]* Through him [then] let us continually offer God a sacrifice of praise, that is, the fruit of lips that confess his name. [16]* Do not neglect to do good and to share what you have; God is pleased by sacrifices of that kind.

[17]† Obey your leaders and defer to them, for they keep watch over you and will have to give an account, that they may fulfill their task with joy and not with sorrow, for that would be of no advantage to you.

[18] Pray for us, for we are confident that we have a clear conscience, wishing to act rightly in every respect. [19] I especially ask for your prayers that I may be restored to you very soon.

12, 23: The assembly of the firstborn enrolled in heaven: this expression may refer to the angels of v 22, or to the heroes of the Old Testament (see ch 11), or to the entire assembly of the new covenant.

12, 24: Speaks more eloquently: the blood of Abel, the first human blood to be shed, is contrasted with that of Jesus. Abel's blood cried out from the earth for vengeance, but the blood of Jesus has opened the way for everyone, providing cleansing and access to God (10, 19).

13, 1-16: After recommendations on social and moral matters (1-6), the letter turns to doctrinal issues. The fact that the original leaders are dead should not cause the recipients of this letter to lose their faith (7), for Christ still lives and he remains always the same (8). They must not rely for their personal sanctification on regulations concerning foods (9), nor should they entertain the notion that Judaism and Christianity can be intermingled (10; cf the notes on Gal 2, 11-14 and 2, 15-21). As Jesus died separated from his own people, so must the Christian community remain apart from the religious doctrines of Judaism (11-14). Christ must be the heart and center of the community (15-16).

13, 9: Strange teaching: this doctrine about foods probably refers to the Jewish food laws; in view of v 10, however, the author may be thinking of the Mosaic sacrificial banquets.

13, 10: We have an altar: this does not refer to the Eucharist, which is never clearly mentioned in Heb, but to the sacrifice of Christ.

13, 17-25: Recommending obedience to the leaders of the community, the author asks for prayers (17-19). The letter concludes with a blessing (20-21), a final request for the acceptance of its message (22), information regarding Timothy (23), and general greetings (24-25).

20* † May the God of peace, who brought up from the dead the great shepherd of the sheep by the blood of the eternal covenant, Jesus our Lord, 21 furnish you with all that is good, that you may do his will. May he carry out in you what is pleasing to him through Jesus Christ, to whom be glory forever
[and ever]. Amen.
22 Brothers, I ask you to bear with this message of encouragement, for I have written to you rather briefly. 23* I must let you know that our brother Timothy has been set free. If he comes soon, I shall see you together with him.
24 Greetings to all your leaders and to all the holy ones. Those from Italy send you greetings. 25* Grace be with all of you.

† 13, 20-21: These verses constitute one of the most beautiful blessings in the New Testament. The resurrection of Jesus is presupposed throughout Heb, since it is included in the author's frequently expressed idea of his exaltation, but this is the only place where it is explicitly mentioned.

THE CATHOLIC LETTERS

In addition to the thirteen letters attributed to Paul and the Letter to the Hebrews, the New Testament contains seven other letters. Three of these are attributed to John, two to Peter, and one each to James and Jude, all personages of the apostolic age. The term "catholic letter" first appears, with reference only to 1 John, in the writings of Apollonius of Ephesus, a second-century apologist, known only from a citation in Eusebius' Ecclesiastical History. Eusebius himself (A.D. 260-340) used the term to refer to all seven letters.

The reason for the term "catholic," which means "universal," was the perception that these letters, unlike those of Paul, which were directed to a particular local church, were apparently addressed more generally to the universal church. This designation is not entirely accurate, however. On the one hand, Hebrews has no specifically identified addressees, and originally this was probably true of Ephesians as well. On the other hand, 3 John is addressed to a named individual, 2 John to a specific, though unnamed, community, and 1 Peter to a number of churches that are specified as being located in Asia Minor.

While all seven of these writings begin with an epistolary formula, several of them do not appear to be real letters in the modern sense of the term. In the ancient world it was not unusual to cast an exhortation in the form of a letter for literary effect, a phenomenon comparable to the "open letter" that is sometimes used today.

With the exception of 1 Peter and 1 John, the ancient church showed reluctance to include the catholic letters in the New Testament canon. The reason for this was widespread doubt whether they had actually been written by the apostolic figures to whom they are attributed. The early Christians saw the New Testament as the depository of apostolic faith; therefore, they wished to include only the testimony of apostles. Today we distinguish more clearly between the authorship of a work and its canonicity: even though written by other, later witnesses than those whose names they bear, these writings nevertheless testify to the apostolic faith and constitute canonical scripture. By the late fourth or early fifth centuries, most objections had been overcome in both the Greek and Latin churches (though not in the Syriac), and all seven of the catholic letters have since been acknowledged as canonical.

The Letter of

JAMES

*The person to whom this letter is ascribed can scarcely be one of the two members of the Twelve who bore the name James (see Mt 10, 2-3; Mk 3, 17-18; Lk 6, 14-15), for he is not identified as an apostle but only as "slave of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ" (1, 1). This designation most probably refers to the third New Testament personage named James, a relative of Jesus who is usually called "brother of the Lord" (see Mt 13, 55; Mk 6, 3). He was the leader of the Jewish Christian community in Jerusalem whom Paul acknowledged as one of the "pillars" (Gal 2, 9). In Acts he appears as the authorized spokesman for the Jewish Christian position in the early Church (Acts 12, 17; 15, 13-21). According to the Jewish historian Josephus (*Antiquities 20, 9, 1 §§200-203), he was stoned to death by the Jews under the high priest Ananus II in A.D. 62.

The letter is addressed to "the twelve tribes in the dispersion." In Old Testament terminology the term "twelve tribes" designates the people of Israel; the "dispersion" or "diaspora" refers to the non-Palestinian Jews who had settled throughout the Greco-Roman world (see Jn 7, 35). Since in Christian thought the church is the new Israel, the address probably designates the Jewish Christian churches located in Palestine, Syria, and elsewhere. Or perhaps the letter is meant more generally for all Christian communities, and the "dispersion" has the symbolic meaning of exile from our true home, as it has in the address of 1 Peter (1, 1). The letter is so markedly Jewish in character that some scholars have regarded it as a Jewish document subsequently "baptized" by a few Christian insertions, but such an origin is scarcely tenable in view of the numerous contacts discernible between the Letter of James and other New Testament literature.

From the viewpoint of its literary form, James is a letter only in the most conventional sense; it has none of the characteristic features of a real letter except the address. It belongs rather to the genre of parenesis *or exhortation and is concerned almost exclusively with ethical conduct. It therefore falls within the tradition of Jewish wisdom literature, such as can be found in the Old Testament (Proverbs, Sirach) and in the extracanonical Jewish literature (*Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs, the Books of Enoch, the Manual of Discipline found at Qumran). More specifically, it consists of sequences of didactic proverbs, comparable to Tob 4, 5-19, to many passages in Sirach, and to sequences of sayings in the synoptic gospels. Numerous passages in James treat of subjects that also appear in the synoptic sayings of Jesus, especially in Matthew's Sermon on the Mount, but the correspondences are too general to establish any literary dependence. James represents a type of early Christianity that emphasized sound teaching and responsible moral behavior. Ethical norms are derived not primarily from christology, as in Paul, but from a concept of salvation that involves conversion, baptism, forgiveness of sin, and expectation of judgment (1, 17; 4, 12).

Paradoxically, this very Jewish work is written in an excellent Greek style, which ranks among the best in the New Testament and appears to be the work of a trained Hellenistic writer. Those who continue to regard James of Jerusalem as its author are therefore obliged to suppose that a secretary must have put the letter into its present literary form. This assumption is not implausible in the light of ancient practice. Some regard the letter as one of the earliest writings in the New Testament and feel that its content accurately reflects what we would expect of the leader of Jewish Christianity. Moreover, they argue that the type of Jewish Christianity reflected in the letter cannot be situated historically after the fall of Jerusalem in A.D. 70.

Others, however, believe it more likely that James is a pseudonymous work of a later period. In addition to its Greek style, they observe further that (a) the prestige that the writer is assumed to enjoy points to the later legendary reputation of James; (b) the discussion of the importance of good works seems to presuppose a debate subsequent to that in Paul's own day; (c) the author does not rely upon prescriptions of the Mosaic law, as we would expect from the historical James; (d) the letter contains no allusions to James's own history and to his relationship with Jesus or to the early Christian community of Jerusalem. For these reasons, many recent interpreters assign James to the period A.D. 90-100.

The principal divisions of the Letter of James are the following:

I: Address (1, 1)
II: The Value of Trials and Temptation (1, 2-18)
III: Exhortations and Warnings (1, 19—5, 12)
IV: The Power of Prayer (5, 13-20)

I: ADDRESS

CHAPTER 1

1*† James, a slave of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ, to the twelve tribes in the dispersion, greetings.

II: THE VALUE OF TRIALS AND TEMPTATION

Perseverance in Trial. 2*† Consider it all joy, my brothers, when you encounter various trials, 3† for you know that the testing of your faith produces perseverance. 4 And let perseverance be perfect, so that you may be perfect and complete, lacking in nothing. 5*† But if any of you lacks wisdom, he should ask God who gives to all generously and ungrudgingly, and he will be given it. 6* But he should ask in faith, not doubting, for the one who doubts is like a wave of the sea that is driven and tossed about by the wind. 7 For that person must not suppose that he will receive anything from the Lord, 8 since he is a man of two minds, unstable in all his ways.

9*† The brother in lowly circumstances should take pride in his high standing, 10* and the rich one in his lowliness, for he will pass away "like the flower of the field." 11 For the sun comes up with its scorching heat and dries up the grass, its flower droops, and the beauty of its appearance vanishes. So will the rich person fade away in the midst of his pursuits.

Temptation. 12*† Blessed is the man who perseveres in temptation, for when he has been proved he will receive the crown of life that he promised to those who love him. 13*† No one experiencing temptation should say, "I am being tempted by God"; for God is not subject to temptation to evil, and he himself tempts no one. 14 Rather, each person is tempted when he is lured and enticed by his own desire. 15 Then desire conceives and brings forth sin, and when sin reaches maturity it gives birth to death.

1, 1: James, a slave of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ: a declaration of the writer's authority for instructing the Christian communities; cf Rom 1, 1. Regarding the identity of the author, see Introduction. Dispersion: see Introduction.

1, 2: Consider it all joy . . . various trials: a frequent teaching of the New Testament derived from the words and sufferings of Jesus (Mt 5, 10-12; Jn 10, 11; Acts 5, 41).

1, 3-8: The sequence of testing, perseverance, and being perfect and complete indicates the manner of attaining spiritual maturity and full preparedness for the coming of Christ (5, 7-12; cf 1 Pt 1, 6-7; Rom 5, 3-5). These steps require wisdom (5).

1, 5: Wisdom: a gift that God readily grants to all who ask in faith and that sustains the Christian in times of trial. It is a kind of knowledge or understanding not accessible to the unbeliever or those who doubt, which gives the recipient an understanding of the real importance of events. In this way a Christian can deal with adversity with great calm and hope (cf 1 Cor 2, 6-12).

1, 9-11: Throughout his letter (see 2, 5; 4, 10.13-16; 5, 1-6), the author reaffirms the teaching of Jesus that worldly prosperity is not necessarily a sign of God's favor but can even be a hindrance to proper humility before God (cf Lk 6, 20-25; 12, 16-21; 16, 19-31).

1, 12: Temptation: the Greek word used here is the same one used for "trials" in v 2. The crown of life: in ancient Palestine, crowns or wreaths of flowers were worn at festive occasions as signs of joy and honor. In the Hellenistic world, wreaths were given as a reward to great statesmen, soldiers, athletes. Life: here means eternal life. He promised: some manuscripts read "God" or "the Lord," while the best witnesses do not specify the subject of "promised."

1, 13-15: It is contrary to what we know of God for God to be the author of human temptation (13). In the commission of a sinful act, one is first beguiled by passion (14), then consent is given, which in turn causes the sinful act. When sin permeates the entire person, it incurs the ultimate penalty of death (15).

[16]† Do not be deceived, my beloved brothers: [17]† all good giving and every perfect gift is from above, coming down from the Father of lights, with whom there is no alteration or shadow caused by change. [18]*† He willed to give us birth by the word of truth that we may be a kind of firstfruits of his creatures.

III: EXHORTATIONS AND WARNINGS

Doers of the Word.† [19]* Know this, my dear brothers: everyone should be quick to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath, [20]* for the wrath of a man does not accomplish the righteousness of God. [21]* Therefore, put away all filth and evil excess and humbly welcome the word that has been planted in you and is able to save your souls.

[22]* Be doers of the word and not hearers only, deluding yourselves. [23] For if anyone is a hearer of the word and not a doer, he is like a man who looks at his own face in a mirror. [24] He sees himself, then goes off and promptly forgets what he looked like. [25]*† But the one who peers into the perfect law of freedom and perseveres, and is not a hearer who forgets but a doer who acts, such a one shall be blessed in what he does.

[26]† If anyone thinks he is religious and does not bridle his tongue but deceives his heart, his religion is vain. [27]† Religion that is pure and undefiled before God and the Father is this: to care for orphans and widows in their affliction and to keep oneself unstained by the world.

CHAPTER 2

Sin of Partiality.† [1] My brothers, show no partiality as you adhere to the faith in our glorious Lord Jesus Christ. [2] For if a man with gold rings on his fingers and in fine clothes comes into your assembly, and a poor person in shabby clothes also comes in, [3] and you pay attention to the one wearing the fine clothes and say, "Sit here, please," while you say to the poor one, "Stand there," or "Sit at my feet," [4]† have you not made distinctions among yourselves and become judges with evil designs?

[5]† Listen, my beloved brothers. Did not God choose those who are poor in the world to be rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom that he promised to those who love him? [6] But you dishonored the poor person. Are not the rich oppressing you? And do they themselves not haul you off to court? [7] Is it not they who blaspheme the noble name that was invoked over you? [8]† However, if you fulfill the royal law according to the scripture, "You shall love your neighbor as yourself," you are doing well. [9] But if you show partiality, you commit sin, and are convicted by the law as transgressors. [10]* For whoever keeps the whole law, but falls short in one particular, has become guilty in respect to all of it. [11]* For he who said, "You shall not commit adultery," also said, "You shall not kill." Even if you do not commit adultery but kill, you have become a transgressor of the law. [12]*† So speak and so act as people who

† 1, 16-18: The author here stresses that God is the source of all good and of good alone, and the evil of temptation does not come from him.

1, 17: All good giving and every perfect gift may be a proverb written in hexameter. Father of lights: God is here called the Father of the heavenly luminaries, i.e., the stars, sun, and moon that he created (Gn 1, 14-16). Unlike orbs moving from nadir to zenith, he never changes or diminishes in brightness.

1, 18: Acceptance of the gospel message, the word of truth, constitutes new birth (Jn 3, 5-6) and makes the recipient the firstfruits (i.e., the cultic offering of the earliest grains, symbolizing the beginning of an abundant harvest) of a new creation; cf 1 Cor 15, 20; Rom 8, 23.

1, 19-25: To be quick to hear the gospel is to accept it readily and to act in conformity with it, removing from one's soul whatever is opposed to it, so that it may take root and effect salvation (19-21). To listen to the gospel message but not practice it is failure to improve oneself (22-24). Only conformity of life to the perfect law of true freedom brings happiness (25).

1, 25: Peers into the perfect law: the image of a person doing this is paralleled to that of hearing God's word. The perfect law applies the Old Testament description of the Mosaic law to the gospel of Jesus Christ that brings freedom.

1, 26-27: A practical application of v 22 is now made.

1, 26: For control of the tongue, see the note on 3, 1-12.

1, 27: In the Old Testament, orphans and widows are classical examples of the defenseless and oppressed.

2, 1-13: In the Christian community there must be no discrimination or favoritism based on status or wealth (2-4; cf Mt 5, 3; 11, 5; 23, 6; 1 Cor 1, 27-29). Divine favor rather consists in God's election and promises (5). The rich who oppress the poor blaspheme the name of Christ (6-7). By violating one law of love of neighbor, they offend against the whole law (8-11). On the other hand, conscious awareness of the final judgment helps the faithful to fulfill the whole law (12).

2, 4: When Christians show favoritism to the rich they are guilty of the worst kind of prejudice and discrimination. The author says that such Christians set themselves up as judges who judge not by divine law but by the basest, self-serving motives.

2, 5: The poor, "God's poor" of the Old Testament, were seen by Jesus as particularly open to God for belief in and reliance on him alone (Lk 6, 20). God's law cannot tolerate their oppression in any way (9).

2, 8: Royal: literally, "kingly"; because the Mosaic law came from God, the universal king. There may be an allusion to Jesus' uses of this commandment in his preaching of the kingdom of God (Mt 22, 39; Mk 12, 31; Lk 10, 27).

2, 12-13: The law upon which the last judgment will be based is the law of freedom. As Jesus taught, mercy (which participates in God's own loving mercy) includes forgiveness of those who wrong us (see Mt 6, 12.14-15).

will be judged by the law of freedom.
13* For the judgment is merciless to one who has not shown mercy; mercy triumphs over judgment.

Faith and Works.† 14* What good is it,
my brothers, if someone says he has faith but does not have works? Can that faith save him? 15 If a brother or sister has nothing to wear and has no food for the day, 16* and one of you says to them,
"Go in peace, keep warm, and eat well,"
but you do not give them the necessities of the body, what good is it? 17 So also faith of itself, if it does not have works, is dead.

18 Indeed someone might say, "You have faith and I have works." Demonstrate your faith to me without works, and I will demonstrate my faith to you from my works. 19 You believe that God is one. You do well. Even the demons believe that and tremble. 20 Do you want proof, you ignoramus, that faith without works is useless? 21* Was not Abraham our father justified by works when he offered his son Isaac upon the altar?
22 You see that faith was active along with his works, and faith was completed by the works. 23* Thus the scripture was fulfilled that says, "Abraham believed God, and it was credited to him as rightteousness," and he was called "the friend of God." 24 See how a person is justified by works and not by faith alone. 25* And in the same way, was not Rahab the harlot also justified by works
when she welcomed the messengers
and sent them out by a different route?
26 For just as a body without a spirit is dead, so also faith without works is dead.

CHAPTER 3

Power of the Tongue.† 1 Not many of you should become teachers, my brothers, for you realize that we will be judged more strictly, 2* for we all fall short in many respects. If anyone does not fall short in speech, he is a perfect man, able to bridle his whole body also. 3 If we put bits into the mouths of horses to make them obey us, we also guide their whole bodies. 4 It is the same with ships: even though they are so large and driven by fierce winds,
they are steered by a very small rudder wherever the pilot's inclination wishes. 5 In the same way the tongue is a small member and yet has great pretensions.

Consider how small a fire can set a huge forest ablaze. 6 The tongue is also a fire. It exists among our members as a world of malice, defiling the whole body and setting the entire course of our lives on fire, itself set on fire by Ge-henna. 7 For every kind of beast and bird, of reptile and sea creature, can be tamed and has been tamed by the human species, 8* but no human being can tame the tongue. It is a restless evil, full of deadly poison. 9 With it we bless the Lord and Father, and with it we curse human beings who are made in the likeness of God. 10 From the same mouth come blessing and cursing. This need not be so, my brothers. 11 Does a spring gush forth from the same opening both pure and brackish water? 12* Can a fig tree, my brothers, produce olives, or a grapevine figs? Neither can salt water yield fresh.

True Wisdom.† 13* Who among you is wise and understanding? Let him show his works by a good life in the humility that comes from wisdom. 14 But if you have bitter jealousy and selfish ambition in your hearts, do not boast and be false to the truth. 15 Wisdom of this kind does not come down from above but is earthly, unspiritual, demonic. 16 For where jealousy and selfish ambition exist, there is disorder and every foul practice. 17* But the wisdom from above is first of all pure, then peaceable, gentle, compliant, full of mercy and good fruits, without inconstancy or insincerity. 18* And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace for those who cultivate peace.

† 2, 14-26: The theme of these verses is the relationship of faith and works (deeds). It has been argued that the teaching here contradicts that of Paul (see especially Rom 4, 5-6). The problem can only be understood if the different viewpoints of the two authors are seen. Paul argues against those who claim to participate in God's salvation because of their good deeds as well as because they have committed themselves to trust in God through Jesus Christ (Paul's concept of faith). Paul certainly understands, however, the implications of true faith for a life of love and generosity (see Gal 5, 6.13-15). The author of James is well aware that proper conduct can only come about with an authentic commitment to God in faith (18.26). Many think he was seeking to correct a misunderstanding of Paul's view.

3, 1-12: The use and abuse of the important role of teaching in the church (1) are here related to the good and bad use of the tongue (9-12), the instrument through which teaching was chiefly conveyed (see Sir 5, 11—6, 1; 28, 12-26).

3, 13-18: This discussion of true wisdom is related to the previous reflection on the role of the teacher as one who is in control of his speech. The qualities of the wise man endowed from above are detailed (17-18; cf Gal 5, 22-23), in contrast to the qualities of earthbound wisdom (14-16; cf 2 Cor 12, 20).

CHAPTER 4

Causes of Division.† 1† Where do the wars and where do the conflicts among you come from? Is it not from your passions that make war within your members? 2 You covet but do not possess. You kill and envy but you cannot obtain; you fight and wage war. You do not possess because you do not ask. 3 You ask but do not receive, because you ask wrongly, to spend it on your passions. 4*† Adulterers! Do you not know that to be a lover of the world means enmity with God? Therefore, whoever wants to be a lover of the world makes himself an enemy of God. 5† Or do you suppose that the scripture speaks without meaning when it says, "The spirit that he has made to dwell in us tends toward jealousy"? 6*† But he bestows a greater grace; therefore, it says:

"God resists the proud,
but gives grace to the humble."

7* So submit yourselves to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you. 8* Draw near to God, and he will draw near to you. Cleanse your hands, you sinners, and purify your hearts, you of two minds. 9 Begin to lament, to mourn, to weep. Let your laughter be turned into mourning and your joy into dejection. 10* Humble yourselves before the Lord and he will exalt you.

11† Do not speak evil of one another, brothers. Whoever speaks evil of a brother or judges his brother speaks evil of the law and judges the law. If you judge the law, you are not a doer of the law but a judge. 12* There is one lawgiver and judge who is able to save or to destroy. Who then are you to judge your neighbor?

Warning against Presumption.† 13 Come now, you who say, "Today or tomorrow we shall go into such and such a town, spend a year there doing business, and make a profit"—14† you have no idea what your life will be like tomorrow. You are a puff of smoke that appears briefly and then disappears. 15† Instead you should say, "If the Lord wills it, we shall live to do this or that." 16 But now you are boasting in your arrogance. All such boasting is evil. 17*† So for one who knows the right thing to do and does not do it, it is a sin.

CHAPTER 5

Warning to the Rich.† 1 Come now, you rich, weep and wail over your impending miseries. 2* Your wealth has rotted away, your clothes have become moth-eaten, 3* your gold and silver have corroded, and that corrosion will be a testimony against you; it will devour your flesh like a fire. You have stored up treasure for the last days. 4* Behold, the wages you withheld from the workers who harvested your fields are crying aloud, and the cries of the harvesters have reached the ears of the Lord of hosts. 5* You have lived on earth in luxury and pleasure; you have fattened your hearts for the day of slaugh-

4, 1-12: The concern here is with the origin of conflicts in the Christian community. These are occasioned by love of the world, which means enmity with God (4). Further, the conflicts are bound up with failure to pray properly (cf Mt 7, 7-11; Jn 14, 13; 15, 7; 16, 23), that is, not asking God at all or using God's kindness only for one's pleasure (2-3). In contrast, the proper dispositions are submission to God, repentance, humility, and resistance to evil (7-10).

4, 1: Passions: the Greek word here (literally, "pleasures") does not indicate that pleasure is evil. Rather, as the text points out (2-3), it is the manner in which one deals with needs and desires that determines good or bad. The motivation for any action can be wrong, especially if one does not pray properly but seeks only selfish enjoyment (3).

4, 4: Adulterers: a common biblical image for the covenant between God and his people is the marriage bond. In this image, breaking the covenant with God is likened to the unfaithfulness of adultery.

4, 5: The meaning of this saying is difficult because the author of Jas cites, probably from memory, a passage that is not in any extant manuscript of the Bible. Other translations of the text with a completely different meaning are possible: "The Spirit that he (God) made to dwell in us yearns (for us) jealously," or, "He (God) yearns jealously for the spirit that he has made to dwell in us." If this last translation is correct, the author perhaps had in mind an apocryphal religious text that echoes the idea that God is zealous for his creatures; cf Ex 20, 5; Dt 4, 24; Zec 8, 2.

4, 6: The point of this whole argument is that God wants the happiness of all, but that selfishness and pride can make that impossible. We must work with him in humility (10).

4, 11: Slander of a fellow Christian does not break just one commandment but makes mockery of the authority of law in general and therefore of God.

4, 13-17: The uncertainty of life (14), its complete dependence on God, and the necessity of submitting to God's will (15) all help one know and do what is right (17). To disregard this is to live in pride and arrogance (16); failure to do what is right is a sin (17).

4, 14: Some important Greek manuscripts here have, "You who have no idea what tomorrow will bring. Why, what is your life?"

4, 15: If the Lord wills it: often in piety referred to as the "conditio Jacobaea," the condition James says we should employ to qualify all our plans.

4, 17: It is a sin: those who live arrogantly, forgetting the contingency of life and our dependence on God (13-16), are guilty of sin.

5, 1-6: Continuing with the theme of the transitory character of life on earth, the author points out the impending ruin of the godless. He denounces the unjust rich, whose victims cry to heaven for judgment on their exploiters (4-6). The decay and corrosion of the costly garments and metals, which symbolize wealth, prove them worthless and portend the destruction of their possessors (2-3).

ter. [6]*† You have condemned; you have murdered the righteous one; he offers you no resistance.

Patience and Oaths.† [7]† Be patient, therefore, brothers, until the coming of the Lord. See how the farmer waits for the precious fruit of the earth, being patient with it until it receives the early and the late rains. [8]* You too must be patient. Make your hearts firm, because the coming of the Lord is at hand. [9] Do not complain, brothers, about one another, that you may not be judged. Behold, the Judge is standing before the gates. [10] Take as an example of hardship and patience, brothers, the prophets who spoke in the name of the Lord. [11]* Indeed we call blessed those who have persevered. You have heard of the perseverance of Job, and you have seen the purpose of the Lord, because "the Lord is compassionate and merciful."

[12]*† But above all, my brothers, do not swear, either by heaven or by earth or with any other oath, but let your "Yes" mean "Yes" and your "No" mean "No," that you may not incur condemnation.

IV: THE POWER OF PRAYER

Anointing of the Sick. [13] Is anyone among you suffering? He should pray. Is anyone in good spirits? He should sing praise. [14]*† Is anyone among you sick? He should summon the presbyters of the church, and they should pray over him and anoint [him] with oil in the name of the Lord, [15]† and the prayer of faith will save the sick person, and the Lord will raise him up. If he has committed any sins, he will be forgiven.

Confession and Intercession. [16] Therefore, confess your sins to one another and pray for one another, that you may be healed. The fervent prayer of a righteous person is very powerful. [17]* Elijah was a human being like us; yet he prayed earnestly that it might not rain, and for three years and six months it did not rain upon the land. [18]* Then he prayed again, and the sky gave rain and the earth produced its fruit.

Conversion of Sinners. [19]* My brothers, if anyone among you should stray from the truth and someone bring him back, [20]*† he should know that whoever brings back a sinner from the error of his way will save his soul from death and will cover a multitude of sins.

5, 6: The author does not have in mind any specific crime in his readers' communities but rather echoes the Old Testament theme of the harsh oppression of the righteous poor (see Prv 1, 11; Wis 2, 10.12.20).

5, 7-11: Those oppressed by the unjust rich are reminded of the need for patience, both in bearing the sufferings of human life (9) and in their expectation of the coming of the Lord. It is then that they will receive their reward (7-8.10-11; cf Heb 10, 25; 1 Jn 2, 18).

5, 7: The early and the late rains: an expression related to the agricultural season in ancient Palestine (see Dt 11, 14; Jer 5, 24; Jl 2, 23).

5, 12: This is the threat of condemnation for the abuse of swearing oaths (cf Mt 5, 33-37). By heaven or by earth: these words were substitutes for the original form of an oath, to circumvent its binding force and to avoid pronouncing the holy name of God (see Ex 22, 10).

5, 14: In case of sickness a Christian should ask for the presbyters of the church, i.e., those who have authority in the church (cf Acts 15, 2.22-23; 1 Tm 5, 17; Ti 1, 5). They are to pray over the person and anoint with oil; oil was used for medicinal purposes in the ancient world (see Is 1, 6; Lk 10, 34). In Mk 6, 13, the Twelve anoint the sick with oil on their missionary journey. In the name of the Lord: by the power of Jesus Christ.

5, 15: The results of the prayer and anointing are physical health and forgiveness of sins. The Roman Catholic Church (Council of Trent, Session 14) declared that this anointing of the sick is a sacrament "instituted by Christ and promulgated by blessed James the apostle."

5, 20: When a Christian is instrumental in the conversion of a sinner, the result is forgiveness of sins and a reinstatement of the sinner to the life of grace.

The First Letter of

PETER

This letter begins with an address by Peter to Christian communities located in five provinces of Asia Minor (1, 1), including areas evangelized by Paul (Acts 16, 6-7; 18, 23). Christians there are encouraged to remain faithful to their standards of belief and conduct in spite of threats of persecution. Numerous allusions in the letter suggest that the churches addressed were largely of Gentile composition (1, 14.18; 2, 9-10; 4, 3-4), though considerable use is made of the Old Testament (1, 24; 2, 6-7.9-10.22; 3, 10-12).

The contents following the address both inspire and admonish these "chosen sojourners" (1, 1) who, in seeking to live as God's people, feel an alienation from their previous religious roots and the society around them. Appeal is made to Christ's resurrection and the future hope it provides (1, 3-5) and to the experience of baptism as new birth (1, 3.23-25; 3, 21). The suffering and death of Christ serve as both source of salvation and example (1, 19; 2, 21-25; 3, 18). What Christians are in Christ, as a people who have received mercy and are to proclaim and live according to God's call (2, 9-10), is repeatedly spelled out for all sorts of situations in society (2, 11-17), work (even as slaves, 2, 18-20), the home (3, 1-7), and general conduct (3, 8-12; 4, 1-11). But over all hangs the possibility of suffering as a Christian (3, 13-17). In 4, 12-19 persecution is described as already occurring, so that some have supposed the letter was addressed both to places where such a "trial by fire" was already present and to places where it might break out.

The letter constantly mingles moral exhortation (paraklēsis) with its catechetical summaries of mercies in Christ. Encouragement to fidelity in spite of suffering is based upon a vision of the meaning of Christian existence. The emphasis on baptism and allusions to various features of the baptismal liturgy suggest that the author has incorporated into his exposition numerous homiletic, credal, hymnic, and sacramental elements of the baptismal rite that had become traditional at an early date.

From Irenaeus in the late second century until modern times, Christian tradition regarded Peter the apostle as author of this document. Since he was martyred at Rome during the persecution of Nero between A.D. 64 and 67, it was supposed that the letter was written from Rome shortly before his death. This is supported by its reference to "Babylon" (5, 13), a code name for Rome in the early church.

Some modern scholars, however, on the basis of a number of features that they consider incompatible with Petrine authenticity, regard the letter as the work of a later Christian writer. Such features include the cultivated Greek in which it is written, difficult to attribute to a Galilean fisherman, together with its use of the Greek Septuagint translation when citing the Old Testament; the similarity in both thought and expression to the Pauline literature; and the allusions to widespread persecution of Christians, which did not occur until at least the reign of Domitian (A.D. 81-96). In this view the letter would date from the end of the first century or even the beginning of the second, when there is evidence for persecution of Christians in Asia Minor (the letter of Pliny the Younger to Trajan, A.D. 111-12).

Other scholars believe, however, that these objections can be met by appeal to use of a secretary, Silvanus, mentioned in 5, 12. Such secretaries often gave literary expression to the author's thoughts in their own style and language. The persecutions may refer to local harassment rather than to systematic repression by the state. Hence there is nothing in the document incompatible with Petrine authorship in the 60s.

Still other scholars take a middle position. The many literary contacts with the Pauline literature, James, and 1 John suggest a common fund of traditional formulations rather than direct dependence upon Paul. Such liturgical and catechetical traditions must have been very ancient and in some cases of Palestinian origin.

Yet it is unlikely that Peter addressed a letter to the Gentile churches of Asia Minor while Paul was still alive. This suggests a period after the death of the two apostles, perhaps A.D. 70-90. The author would be a disciple of Peter in Rome, representing a Petrine group that served as a bridge between the Palestinian origins of Christianity and its flowering in the Gentile world. The problem addressed would not be official persecution but the difficulty of living the Christian life in a hostile, secular environment that espoused different values and subjected the Christian minority to ridicule and oppression.

The principal divisions of the First Letter of Peter are the following:

I: Address (1, 1-2)
II: The Gift and Call of God in Baptism (1, 3—2, 10)
III: The Christian in a Hostile World (2, 11—4, 11)
IV: Advice to the Persecuted (4, 12—5, 11)
V: Conclusion (5, 12-14)

I: ADDRESS

CHAPTER 1

Greeting.† 1*† Peter, an apostle of Jesus Christ, to the chosen sojourners of the dispersion in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia, 2* in the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification by the Spirit, for obedience and sprinkling with the blood of Jesus Christ: may grace and peace be yours in abundance.

II: THE GIFT AND CALL OF GOD IN BAPTISM

Blessing.† 3* Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who in his great mercy gave us a new birth to a living hope through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, 4* to an inheritance that is imperishable, undefiled, and unfading, kept in heaven for you 5 who by the power of God are safeguarded through faith, to a salvation that is ready to be revealed in the final time. 6*† In this you rejoice, although now for a little while you may have to suffer through various trials, 7* so that the genuineness of your faith, more precious than gold that is perishable even though tested by fire, may prove to be for praise, glory, and honor at the revelation of Jesus Christ. 8* Although you have not seen him you love him; even though you do not see him now yet believe in him, you rejoice with an indescribable and glorious joy, 9 as you attain the goal of [your] faith, the salvation of your souls.

10† Concerning this salvation, prophets who prophesied about the grace that was to be yours searched and investigated it, 11* investigating the time and circumstances that the Spirit of Christ within them indicated when it testified

1, 1-2: The introductory formula names Peter as the writer (but see Introduction). In his comments to the presbyters (5, 1), the author calls himself a "fellow presbyter." He addresses himself to the Gentile converts of Asia Minor. Their privileged status as a chosen and sanctified people makes them worthy of God's grace and peace. In contrast is their actual existence as aliens and sojourners, scattered among pagans, far from their true country.

1, 1: Dispersion: literally, diaspora; see Jas 1, 1 and Introduction to that letter. Pontus . . . Bithynia: five provinces in Asia Minor, listed in clockwise order from the north, perhaps in the sequence in which a messenger might deliver the letter.

1, 3-5: A prayer of praise and thanksgiving to God who bestows the gift of new life and hope in baptism (new birth, 3) through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. The new birth is a sign of an imperishable inheritance (4), of salvation that is still in the future (to be revealed in the final time, 5).

1, 6-9: As the glory of Christ's resurrection was preceded by his sufferings and death, the new life of faith that it bestows is to be subjected to many trials (6) while achieving its goal: the glory of the fullness of salvation (9) at the coming of Christ (7).

1, 10-12: The Spirit of Christ (11) is here shown to have been present in the prophets, moving them to search, investigate, and prophesy about the grace of salvation that was to come (10), and in the apostles impelling them to preach the fulfillment of salvation in the message of Christ's sufferings and glory (12).

in advance to the sufferings destined for Christ and the glories to follow them. 12 It was revealed to them that they were serving not themselves but you with regard to the things that have now been announced to you by those who preached the good news to you [through] the holy Spirit sent from heaven, things into which angels longed to look.

Obedience.† 13† Therefore, gird up the loins of your mind, live soberly, and set your hopes completely on the grace to be brought to you at the revelation of Jesus Christ. 14† Like obedient children, do not act in compliance with the desires of your former ignorance 15* but, as he who called you is holy, be holy yourselves in every aspect of your conduct, 16* for it is written, "Be holy because I [am] holy."

Reverence. 17* Now if you invoke as Father him who judges impartially according to each one's works, conduct yourselves with reverence during the time of your sojourning, 18* realizing that you were ransomed from your futile conduct, handed on by your ancestors, not with perishable things like silver or gold 19*† but with the precious blood of Christ as of a spotless unblemished lamb. 20 He was known before the foundation of the world but revealed in the final time for you, 21 who through him believe in God who raised him from the dead and gave him glory, so that your faith and hope are in God.

Mutual Love.† 22* Since you have purified yourselves by obedience to the truth for sincere mutual love, love one another intensely from a [pure] heart. 23*† You have been born anew, not from perishable but from imperishable seed, through the living and abiding word of God, 24* for:

> "All flesh is like grass,
> and all its glory like the flower of the field;
> the grass withers,
> and the flower wilts;
> 25 but the word of the Lord remains forever."

This is the word that has been proclaimed to you.

CHAPTER 2

God's House and People.† 1* Rid yourselves of all malice and all deceit, insincerity, envy, and all slander; 2 like newborn infants, long for pure spiritual milk so that through it you may grow into salvation, 3*† for you have tasted that the Lord is good. 4*† Come to him, a living stone, rejected by human beings but chosen and precious in the sight of God, 5*† and, like living stones, let yourselves be built into a spiritual house to be a holy priesthood to offer spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God through Jesus Christ. 6* For it says in scripture:

> "Behold, I am laying a stone in Zion,
> a cornerstone, chosen and precious,
> and whoever believes in it shall not be put to shame."

7* Therefore, its value is for you who have faith, but for those without faith:

> "The stone which the builders rejected > has become the cornerstone,"

8* and

> "A stone that will make people stumble,
> and a rock that will make them fall."

They stumble by disobeying the word, as is their destiny.

† 1, 13-25: These verses are concerned with the call of God's people to holiness and to mutual love by reason of their redemption through the blood of Christ (18-21).

1, 13: Gird up the loins of your mind: a figure reminiscent of the rite of Passover when the Israelites were in flight from their oppressors (Ex 12, 11), and also suggesting the vigilance of the Christian people in expectation of the parousia of Christ (Lk 12, 35).

1, 14-16: The ignorance here referred to (14) was their former lack of knowledge of God, leading inevitably to godless conduct. Holiness (15-16), on the contrary, is the result of their call to the knowledge and love of God.

1, 19: Christians have received the redemption prophesied by Isaiah (52, 3), through the blood (Jewish symbol of life) of the spotless lamb (Is 53, 7.10; Jn 1, 29; Rom 3, 24-25; cf 1 Cor 6, 20).

1, 22-25: The new birth of Christians (23) derives from Christ, the imperishable seed or sowing that produces a new and lasting existence in those who accept the gospel (24-25), with the consequent duty of loving one another (22).

1, 23: The living and abiding word of God: or, "the word of the living and abiding God."

2, 1-3: Growth toward salvation is seen here as two steps: first, stripping away all that is contrary to the new life in Christ; second, the nourishment (pure spiritual milk) that the newly baptized have received.

2, 3: Tasted that the Lord is good: cf Ps 34, 9.

2, 4-8: Christ is the cornerstone (cf Is 28, 16) that is the foundation of the spiritual edifice of the Christian community (5). To unbelievers, Christ is an obstacle and a stumbling block on which they are destined to fall (8); cf Rom 11, 11.

2, 5: Let yourselves be built: the form of the Greek word could also be indicative passive, "you are being built" (cf 9).

9*† But you are "a chosen race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a people of his own, so that you may announce the praises" of him who called you out of darkness into his wonderful light.
10* Once you were "no people"
but now you are God's people;
you "had not received mercy"
but now you have received mercy.

III: THE CHRISTIAN IN A HOSTILE WORLD

Christian Examples.† 11*† Beloved, I urge you as aliens and sojourners to keep away from worldly desires that wage war against the soul. 12 Maintain good conduct among the Gentiles, so that if they speak of you as evildoers, they may observe your good works and glorify God on the day of visitation.

Christian Citizens.† 13* Be subject to every human institution for the Lord's sake, whether it be to the king as supreme 14 or to governors as sent by him for the punishment of evildoers and the approval of those who do good. 15 For it is the will of God that by doing good you may silence the ignorance of foolish people. 16* Be free, yet without using freedom as a pretext for evil, but as slaves of God. 17* Give honor to all, love the community, fear God, honor the king.

Christian Slaves.† 18* Slaves, be subject to your masters with all reverence, not only to those who are good and equitable but also to those who are perverse. 19 For whenever anyone bears the pain of unjust suffering because of consciousness of God, that is a grace. 20 But what credit is there if you are patient when beaten for doing wrong? But if you are patient when you suffer for doing what is good, this is a grace before God. 21*† For to this you have been called, because Christ also suffered for you, leaving you an example that you should follow in his footsteps.

22*†"He committed no sin, and no deceit was found in his mouth."

23* When he was insulted, he returned no insult; when he suffered, he did not threaten; instead, he handed himself over to the one who judges justly. 24* He himself bore our sins in his body upon the cross, so that, free from sin, we might live for righteousness. By his wounds you have been healed. 25*† For you had gone astray like sheep, but you have now returned to the shepherd and guardian of your souls.

CHAPTER 3

Christian Spouses.† 1 Likewise, you wives should be subordinate to your husbands so that, even if some disobey the word, they may be won over without a word by their wives' conduct 2* when they observe your reverent and chaste behavior. 3* Your adornment should not

3: 1 Tm 2, 9-10.

2, 9-10: The prerogatives of ancient Israel mentioned here are now more fully and fittingly applied to the Christian people: "a chosen race" (cf Is 43, 20-21) indicates their divine election (Eph 1, 4-6); "a royal priesthood" (cf Ex 19, 6) to serve and worship God in Christ, thus continuing the priestly functions of his life, passion, and resurrection; "a holy nation" (Ex 19, 6) reserved for God, a people he claims for his own (cf Mal 3, 17) in virtue of their baptism into his death and resurrection. This transcends all natural and national divisions and unites the people into one community to glorify the one who led them from the darkness of paganism to the light of faith in Christ. From being "no people" deprived of all mercy, they have become the very people of God, the chosen recipients of his mercy (cf Hos 1, 9; 2, 25).

2, 11—3, 12: After explaining the doctrinal basis for the Christian community, the author makes practical applications in terms of the virtues that should prevail in all the social relationships of the members of the community: good example to Gentile neighbors (2, 11-12); respect for human authority (2, 13-17); obedience, patience, and endurance of hardship in domestic relations (2, 18-25); Christian behavior of husbands and wives (3, 1-7); mutual charity (3, 8-12).

2, 11: Aliens and sojourners: no longer signifying absence from one's native land (Gn 23, 4), this image denotes rather their estrangement from the world during their earthly pilgrimage (see also 1, 1.17).

2, 13-17: True Christian freedom is the result of being servants of God (16; see the note on 2, 18-23). It includes reverence for God, esteem for every individual, and committed love for fellow Christians (17). Although persecution may threaten, subjection to human government is urged (13.17) and concern for the impact of Christians' conduct on those who are not Christians (12.15).

2, 18-21: Most of the labor in the commercial cities of first-century Asia Minor was performed by a working class of slaves. The sense of freedom contained in the gospel undoubtedly caused great tension among Christian slaves: witness the special advice given concerning them here and in 1 Cor 7, 21-24; Eph 6, 5-8; Col 3, 22-25; Phlm. The point made here does not have so much to do with the institution of slavery, which the author does not challenge, but with the nonviolent reaction (20) of slaves to unjust treatment. Their patient suffering is compared to that of Jesus (21), which won righteousness for all humanity.

2, 21: Suffered: some ancient manuscripts and versions read "died" (cf 3, 18).

2, 22-25: After the quotation of Is 53, 9b, the passage describes Jesus' passion with phrases concerning the Suffering Servant from Is 53, 4-12, perhaps as employed in an early Christian confession of faith; cf 1, 18-21 and 3, 18-22.

2, 25: The shepherd and guardian of your souls: the familiar shepherd and flock figures express the care, vigilance, and love of God for his people in the Old Testament (Ps 23; Is 40, 11; Jer 23, 4-5; Ez 34, 11-16) and of Jesus for all humanity in the New Testament (Mt 18, 10-14; Lk 15, 4-7; Jn 10, 1-16; Heb 13, 20).

3, 1-6: The typical marital virtues of women of the ancient world, obedience, reverence, and chastity (1-2), are outlined here by the author, who gives them an entirely new motivation: Christian wives are to be virtuous so that they may be instrumental in the conversion of their husbands. In imitation of holy women in the past (5) they are to cultivate the interior life (4) instead of excessive concern with their appearance (3).

be an external one: braiding the hair, wearing gold jewelry, or dressing in fine clothes, [4] but rather the hidden character of the heart, expressed in the imperishable beauty of a gentle and calm disposition, which is precious in the sight of God. [5] For this is also how the holy women who hoped in God once used to adorn themselves and were subordinate to their husbands; [6] thus Sarah obeyed Abraham, calling him "lord." You are her children when you do what is good and fear no intimidation.

[7]*† Likewise, you husbands should live with your wives in understanding, showing honor to the weaker female sex, since we are joint heirs of the gift of life, so that your prayers may not be hindered.

Christian Conduct.† [8] Finally, all of you, be of one mind, sympathetic, loving toward one another, compassionate, humble. [9]* Do not return evil for evil, or insult for insult; but, on the contrary, a blessing, because to this you were called, that you might inherit a blessing. [10]* For:

> "Whoever would love life > and see good days
> must keep the tongue from evil
> and the lips from speaking deceit, > [11] must turn from evil and do good,
> seek peace and follow after it.
> [12] For the eyes of the Lord are on the righteous > and his ears turned to their prayer,
> but the face of the Lord is against evildoers."

Christian Suffering.† [13] Now who is going to harm you if you are enthusiastic for what is good? [14] But even if you should suffer because of righteousness, blessed are you. Do not be afraid or terrified with fear of them, [15]* but sanctify Christ as Lord in your hearts. Always be ready to give an explanation to anyone who asks you for a reason for your hope, [16] but do it with gentleness and reverence, keeping your conscience clear, so that, when you are maligned, those who defame your good conduct in Christ may themselves be put to shame. [17] For it is better to suffer for doing good, if that be the will of God, than for doing evil.

[18]† For Christ also suffered for sins once, the righteous for the sake of the unrighteous, that he might lead you to God. Put to death in the flesh, he was brought to life in the spirit. [19]† In it he also went to preach to the spirits in prison, [20] who had once been disobedient while God patiently waited in the days of Noah during the building of the ark, in which a few persons, eight in all, were saved through water. [21]† This prefigured baptism, which saves you now. It is not a removal of dirt from the body but an appeal to God for a clear conscience, through the resurrection of Jesus Christ, [22] who has gone into heaven and is at the right hand of God, with angels, authorities, and powers subject to him.

Christian Restraint.† [1] Therefore, since Christ suffered in the flesh, arm yourselves also with the same attitude (for whoever suffers in the flesh has broken with sin), [2] so as not to spend what remains of one's life in the flesh on human desires, but on the will of God. [3]* For the time that has passed is sufficient for doing what the Gentiles like to do: living in debauchery, evil desires, drunkenness, orgies, carousing, and wanton idolatry. [4] They are surprised that you do not plunge into the same swamp of profligacy, and they vil-

3, 7: Husbands who do not respect their wives will have as little success in prayer as those who, according to Paul, have no love: their prayers will be "a resounding gong or a clashing cymbal" (1 Cor 13, 1). Consideration for others is shown as a prerequisite for effective prayer also in Mt 5, 23-24; 1 Cor 11, 20-22; Jas 4, 3. After all, whatever the social position of women in the world and in the family, they are equal recipients of the gift of God's salvation. Paul is very clear on this point, too (see 1 Cor 11, 11-12; Gal 3, 28).

3, 8-12: For the proper ordering of Christian life in its various aspects as described in 2, 11—3, 9, there is promised the blessing expressed in Ps 34, 13-17. In the Old Testament this refers to longevity and prosperity; here, it also refers to eternal life.

3, 13-22: This exposition, centering on v 17, runs as follows: by his suffering and death Christ the righteous one saved the unrighteous (18); by his resurrection he received new life in the spirit, which he communicates to believers through the baptismal bath that cleanses their consciences from sin. As Noah's family was saved through water, so Christians are saved through the waters of baptism (19-22). Hence they need not share the fear of sinners; they should rather rejoice in suffering because of their hope in Christ. Thus their innocence disappoints their accusers (13-16; cf Mt 10, 28; Rom 8, 35-39).

3, 18: Suffered: very many ancient manuscripts and versions read "died." Put to death in the flesh: affirms that Jesus truly died as a human being. Brought to life in the spirit: that is, in the new and transformed existence freed from the limitations and weaknesses of natural human life (cf 1 Cor 15, 45).

3, 19: The spirits in prison: it is not clear just who these spirits are. They may be the spirits of the sinners who died in the flood, or angelic powers, hostile to God, who have been overcome by Christ (cf 22; Gn 6, 4; Enoch 6-36, especially 21, 6; 2 Enoch 7, 1-5).

3, 21: Appeal to God: this could also be translated "pledge," that is, a promise on the part of Christians to live with a good conscience before God, or a pledge from God of forgiveness and therefore a good conscience for us.

4, 1-6: Willingness to suffer with Christ equips the Christian with the power to conquer sin (1). Christ is here portrayed as the judge to whom those guilty of pagan vices must render an account (5; cf Jn 5, 22-27; Acts 10, 42; 2 Tm 4, 1).

ify you; [5]* but they will give an account to him who stands ready to judge the living and the dead. [6]† For this is why the gospel was preached even to the dead that, though condemned in the flesh in human estimation, they might live in the spirit in the estimation of God.

Christian Charity.† [7] The end of all things is at hand. Therefore, be serious and sober for prayers. [8]† Above all, let your love for one another be intense, because love covers a multitude of sins. [9] Be hospitable to one another without complaining. [10]* As each one has received a gift, use it to serve one another as good stewards of God's varied grace. [11]*† Whoever preaches, let it be with the words of God; whoever serves, let it be with the strength that God supplies, so that in all things God may be glorified through Jesus Christ, to whom belong glory and dominion forever and ever. Amen.

IV: ADVICE TO THE PERSECUTED

Trial of Persecution.† [12]* Beloved, do not be surprised that a trial by fire is occurring among you, as if something strange were happening to you. [13]* But rejoice to the extent that you share in the sufferings of Christ, so that when his glory is revealed you may also rejoice exultantly. [14]* If you are insulted for the name of Christ, blessed are you, for the Spirit of glory and of God rests upon you. [15] But let no one among you be made to suffer as a murderer, a thief, an evildoer, or as an intriguer. [16] But whoever is made to suffer as a Christian should not be ashamed but glorify God because of the name. [17]* For it is time for the judgment to begin with the household of God; if it begins with us, how will it end for those who fail to obey the gospel of God?

[18]* "And if the righteous one is barely saved,
where will the godless and the sinner appear?"

[19] As a result, those who suffer in accord with God's will hand their souls over to a faithful creator as they do good.

CHAPTER 5

Advice to Presbyters.† [1]† So I exhort the presbyters among you, as a fellow presbyter and witness to the sufferings of Christ and one who has a share in the glory to be revealed. [2]* Tend the flock of God in your midst, [overseeing] not by constraint but willingly, as God would have it, not for shameful profit but eagerly. [3] Do not lord it over those assigned to you, but be examples to the flock. [4]*† And when the chief Shepherd is revealed, you will receive the unfading crown of glory.

Advice to the Community.† [5]*† Likewise, you younger members, be subject to the presbyters. And all of you, clothe yourselves with humility in your dealings with one another, for:

"God opposes the proud
but bestows favor on the humble."

[6]* So humble yourselves under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time. [7]* Cast all your worries upon him because he cares for you.

[8]* Be sober and vigilant. Your opponent the devil is prowling around like a roaring lion looking for [someone] to † 4, 6: The dead: these may be the sinners of the flood generation who are possibly referred to in 3, 19. But many scholars think that there is no connection between these two verses, and that the dead here are Christians who have died since hearing the preaching of the gospel.

4, 7-11: The inner life of the eschatological community is outlined as the end (the parousia of Christ) and the judgment draws near in terms of seriousness, sobriety, prayer, and love expressed through hospitality and the use of one's gifts for the glory of God and of Christ.

4, 8: Love covers a multitude of sins: a maxim based on Prv 10, 12; see also Ps 32, 1; Jas 5, 20.

4, 11: Some scholars feel that this doxology concludes the part of the homily addressed specifically to the newly baptized, begun in 1, 3; others that it concludes a baptismal liturgy. Such doxologies do occur within a New Testament letter, e.g., Rom 9, 5. Some propose that v 11 was an alternate ending, with 4, 12—5, 14 being read in places where persecution was more pressing. But such doxologies usually do not occur at the end of letters (the only examples are 2 Pt 3, 18, Jude 25, and Rom 16, 27, the last probably a liturgical insertion).

4, 12-19: The suffering to which the author has already frequently referred is presented in more severe terms. This has led some scholars to see these verses as referring to an actual persecution. Others see the heightening of the language as only a rhetorical device used at the end of the letter to emphasize the suffering motif.

5, 1-4: In imitation of Christ, the chief shepherd, those entrusted with a pastoral office are to tend the flock by their care and example.

5, 1: Presbyters: the officially appointed leaders and teachers of the Christian community (cf 1 Tm 5, 17-18; Ti 1, 5-8; Jas 5, 14).

5, 4: See the note on 2, 25.

5, 5-11: The community is to be subject to the presbyters and to show humility toward one another and trust in God's love and care (5-7). With sobriety, alertness, and steadfast faith they must resist the evil one; their sufferings are shared with Christians everywhere (8-9). They will be strengthened and called to eternal glory (10-11).

5, 5: Younger members: this may be a designation for office-holders of lesser rank.

V: CONCLUSION

[12]† I write you this briefly through Silthat this is the true grace of God. Re-with a loving kiss. Peace to all of you who are in Christ.

† 5, 12: Silvanus: the companion of Paul (see 2 Cor 1, 19; 1 Thes 1, 1; 2 Thes 1, 1). Jews and Jewish Christians, like Paul, often had a Hebrew name (Saoul, Silas) and a Greek or Latin name (Paul, Silvanus). On Silvanus's possible role as amanuensis, see Introduction.

5, 13: The chosen one: feminine, referring to the Christian community (ekklēsia) at Babylon, the code name for Rome in Rv 14, 8; 17, 5; 18, 2. Mark, my son: traditionally a prominent disciple of Peter and co-worker at the church in Rome, perhaps the John Mark referred to in Acts 12, 12.25; 13, 5.13; and in 15, 37-39, a companion of Barnabas. Perhaps this is the same Mark mentioned as Barnabas's cousin in Col 4, 10, a co-worker with Paul in Phlm 24 (see also 2 Tm 4, 11).

The Second Letter of

PETER

This letter can be appreciated both for its positive teachings and for its earnest warnings. It seeks to strengthen readers in faith (1, 1), hope for the future (3, 1-10), knowledge (1, 2.6.8), love (1, 7), and other virtues (1, 5-6). This aim is carried out especially by warning against false teachers, the condemnation of whom occupies the long central section of the letter (2, 1-22). A particular crisis is the claim by "scoffers" that there will be no second coming of Jesus, a doctrine that the author vigorously affirms (3, 1-10). The concept of God's "promises" is particularly precious in the theology of 2 Peter (1, 4; 3, 4.9.13). Closing comments at 3, 17-18 well sum up the twin concerns: that you not "be led into" error and "fall" but instead "grow in grace" and "knowledge" of Jesus Christ.

Second Peter is clearly structured in its presentation of these points. It reminds its readers of the divine authenticity of Christ's teaching (1, 3-4), continues with reflections on Christian conduct (1, 5-15), then returns to the exalted dignity of Jesus by incorporating into the text the apostolic witness to his transfiguration (1, 16-18). It takes up the question of the interpretation of scripture by pointing out that it is possible to misunderstand the sacred writings (1, 19-21) and that divine punishment will overtake false teachers (2, 1-22). It proclaims that the parousia is the teaching of the Lord and of the apostles and is therefore an eventual certainty (3, 1-13). At the same time, it warns that the meaning of Paul's writings on this question should not be distorted (3, 14-18).

In both content and style this letter is very different from 1 Peter, which immediately precedes it in the canon. The opening verse attributes it to "Symeon Peter, a slave and apostle of Jesus Christ." Moreover, the author in 3, 1 calls his work a "second letter," referring probably to 1 Peter as his first, and in 1, 18 counts himself among those present at the transfiguration of Jesus.

Nevertheless, acceptance of 2 Peter into the New Testament canon met with great resistance in the early church. The oldest certain reference to it comes from Origen in the early third century. While he himself accepted both Petrine letters as canonical, he testifies that others rejected 2 Peter. As late as the fifth century some local churches still excluded it from the canon, but eventually it was universally adopted. The principal reason for the long delay was the persistent doubt that the letter stemmed from the apostle Peter.

Among modern scholars there is wide agreement that 2 Peter is a pseudonymous work, i.e., one written by a later author who attributed it to Peter according to a literary convention popular at the time. It gives the impression of being more remote in time from the apostolic period than 1 Peter; indeed, many think it is the latest work in the New Testament and assign it to the first or even the second quarter of the second century.

The principal reasons for this view are the following. The author refers to the apostles and "our ancestors" as belonging to a previous generation, now dead (3, 2-4). A collection of Paul's letters exists and appears to be well known, but disputes have arisen about the interpretation of them (3, 14-16). The passage about false teachers (2, 1-18) contains a number of literary contacts with Jude 4-16, and it is generally agreed that 2 Peter depends upon Jude, not vice versa. Finally, the principal problem exercising the author is the false teaching of "scoffers" who have concluded from the delay of the parousia that the Lord is not going to return. This could scarcely have been an issue during the lifetime of Simon Peter.

The Christians to whom the letter is addressed are not identified, though it may be the intent of 3, 1 to identify them with the churches of Asia Minor to which 1 Peter was sent. Except for the epistolary greeting in 1, 1-2, 2 Peter does not have the features of a genuine letter at all, but is rather a general exhortation cast in the form of a letter. The author must have been a Jewish Christian of the dispersion for, while his Jewish heritage is evident in various features of his thought and style, he writes in the rather stilted literary Greek of the Hellenistic period. He appeals to tradition against the twin threat of doctrinal error and moral laxity, which appear to reflect an early stage of what later developed into full-blown gnosticism. Thus he forms a link between the apostolic period and the church of subsequent ages.

The principal divisions of the Second Letter of Peter are the following:

I: Address (1, 1-2)
II: Exhortation to Christian Virtue (1, 3-21)
III: Condemnation of the False Teachers (2, 1-22)
IV: The Delay of the Second Coming (3, 1-16)
V: Final Exhortation and Doxology (3, 17-18)

I: ADDRESS

CHAPTER 1

Greeting. 1† Symeon Peter, a slave and apostle of Jesus Christ, to those who have received a faith of equal value to ours through the righteousness of our God and savior Jesus Christ: 2† may grace and peace be yours in abundance through knowledge of God and of Jesus our Lord.

II: EXHORTATION TO CHRISTIAN VIRTUE

The Power of God's Promise. † 3*† His divine power has bestowed on us everything that makes for life and devotion, through the knowledge of him who called us by his own glory and power. 4* Through these, he has bestowed on us the precious and very great promises, so that through them you may come to share in the divine nature, after escaping from the corruption that is in the world because of evil desire. 5*† For this very reason, make every effort to supplement your faith with virtue, virtue with knowledge, 6 knowledge with self-control, self-control with endurance, endurance with devotion, 7 devotion with mutual affection, mutual affection with love. 8 If these are yours and increase in abundance, they will keep you from being idle or unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. 9* Anyone who lacks them is blind and shortsighted, forgetful of the cleansing of his past sins. 10† Therefore, brothers, be all the more eager to make your call and election firm, for, in doing so, you will never stumble. 11 For, in this way, entry into the eternal kingdom of our Lord and savior Jesus Christ will be richly provided for you.

Apostolic Witness. † 12 Therefore, I will always remind you of these things, even though you already know them and are established in the truth you have. 13† I think it right, as long as I am in this "tent," to stir you up by a re-

1, 1: Symeon Peter: on the authorship of 2 Peter, see Introduction; on the spelling here of the Hebrew name Sim'ôn, cf Acts 15, 14. The greeting is especially similar to those in 1 Peter and Jude. The words translated our God and savior Jesus Christ could also be rendered "our God and the savior Jesus Christ"; cf 11; 2, 20; 3, 2.18.

1, 2: Knowledge: a key term in the letter (3.8; 2, 20; 3, 18), perhaps used as a Christian emphasis against gnostic claims.

1, 3-4: Christian life in its fullness is a gift of divine power effecting a knowledge of Christ and the bestowal of divine promises (3, 4.9). To share in the divine nature, escaping from a corrupt world, is a thought found elsewhere in the Bible but expressed only here in such Hellenistic terms, since it is said to be accomplished through knowledge (3); cf 2; 2, 20; but see also Jn 15, 4; 17, 22-23; Rom 8, 14-17; Heb 3, 14; 1 Jn 1, 3; 3, 2.

1, 3: By his own glory and power: the most ancient papyrus and the best codex read "through glory and power."

1, 5-9: Note the climactic gradation of qualities (5-7), beginning with faith and leading to the fullness of Christian life, which is love; cf Rom 5, 3-4; Gal 5, 6.22 for a similar series of "virtues," though the program and sense here are different than in Paul. The fruit of these is knowledge of Christ (8) referred to in v 3; their absence is spiritual blindness (9).

1, 10-11: Perseverance in the Christian vocation is the best preventative against losing it and the safest provision for attaining its goal, the kingdom. Kingdom of . . . Christ, instead of "God," is unusual; cf Col 1, 13 and Mt 13, 41, as well as the righteousness of . . . Christ (1).

1, 12-19: The purpose in writing is to call to mind the apostle's witness to the truth, even as he faces the end of his life (12-15), his eyewitness testimony to Christ (16-18), and the true prophetic message (19) through the Spirit in scripture (20-21), in contrast to what false teachers are setting forth (ch 2).

1, 13: Tent: a biblical image for transitory human life (Is 38, 12), here combined with a verb that suggests not folding or packing up a tent but its being discarded in death (cf 2 Cor 5, 1-4).

minder, [14]* since I know that I will soon have to put it aside, as indeed our Lord Jesus Christ has shown me. [15] I shall also make every effort to enable you always to remember these things after my departure.

[16]† We did not follow cleverly devised myths when we made known to you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but we had been eyewitnesses of his majesty. [17]† For he received honor and glory from God the Father when that unique declaration came to him from the majestic glory, "This is my Son, my beloved, with whom I am well pleased." [18]† We ourselves heard this voice come from heaven while we were with him on the holy mountain. [19]* Moreover, we possess the prophetic message that is altogether reliable. You will do well to be attentive to it, as to a lamp shining in a dark place, until day dawns and the morning star rises in your hearts. [20]† Know this first of all, that there is no prophecy of scripture that is a matter of personal interpretation, [21] for no prophecy ever came through human will; but rather human beings moved by the holy Spirit spoke under the influence of God.

III: CONDEMNATION OF THE FALSE TEACHERS

CHAPTER 2

False Teachers.† [1]* There were also false prophets among the people, just as there will be false teachers among you, who will introduce destructive heresies and even deny the Master who ransomed them, bringing swift destruction on themselves. [2]* Many will follow their licentious ways, and because of them the way of truth will be reviled. [3]* In their greed they will exploit you with fabrications, but from of old their condemnation has not been idle and their destruction does not sleep.

Lessons from the Past.† [4]† For if God did not spare the angels when they sinned, but condemned them to the chains of Tartarus and handed them over to be kept for judgment; [5]† and if he did not spare the ancient world, even though he preserved Noah, a herald of righteousness, together with seven others, when he brought a flood upon the godless world; [6]* and if he condemned the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah [to destruction], reducing them to ashes, making them an example for the godless [people] of what is coming; [7] and if he rescued Lot, a righteous man oppressed by the licentious conduct of unprincipled people [8] (for day after day that righteous man living among them was tormented in his righteous soul at the lawless deeds that he saw and heard), [9]* then the Lord knows how to rescue the devout from trial and to keep the unrighteous under punishment for the day of judgment, [10]*† and especially those who follow the flesh with its depraved desire and show contempt for lordship.

1, 16: Coming: in Greek parousia, used at 3, 4.12 of the second coming of Christ. The word was used in the extrabiblical writings for the visitation of someone in authority; in Greek cult and Hellenistic Judaism it was used for the manifestation of the divine presence. What the apostles made known has been interpreted to refer to Jesus' transfiguration (17) or to his entire first coming or to his future coming in power (ch 3).

1, 17: The author assures the readers of the reliability of the apostolic message (including Jesus' power, glory, and coming; cf the note on 1, 16) by appeal to the transfiguration of Jesus in glory (cf Mt 17, 1-8 and parallels) and by appeal to the prophetic message (19; perhaps Nm 24, 17). Here as elsewhere, the New Testament insists on continued reminders as necessary to preserve the historical facts about Jesus and the truths of the faith; cf 3, 1-2; 1 Cor 11, 2; 15, 1-3. My Son, my beloved: or, "my beloved Son."

1, 18: We: at Jesus' transfiguration, referring to Peter, James, and John (Mt 17, 1).

1, 20-21: Often cited, along with 2 Tm 3, 16, on the "inspiration" of scripture or against private interpretation, these verses in context are directed against the false teachers of ch 2 and clever tales (16). The prophetic word in scripture comes admittedly through human beings (21), but moved by the holy Spirit, not from their own interpretation, and is a matter of what the author and Spirit intended, not the personal interpretation of false teachers. Instead of under the influence of God, some manuscripts read "holy ones of God."

2, 1-3: The pattern of false prophets among the Old Testament people of God will recur through false teachers in the church. Such destructive opinions of heretical sects bring loss of faith in Christ, contempt for the way of salvation (cf 21), and immorality.

2, 4-6: The false teachers will be punished just as surely and as severely as were the fallen angels (4; cf Jude 6; Gn 6, 1-4), the sinners of Noah's day (5; Gn 7, 21-23), and the inhabitants of the cities of the Plain (6; Jude 7; Gn 19, 25). Whereas there are three examples in Jude 5-7 (Exodus and wilderness; rebellious angels; Sodom and Gomorrah), 2 Peter omitted the first of these, has inserted a new illustration about Noah (5) between Jude's second and third examples, and listed the resulting three examples in their Old Testament order (Gn 6; 7; 19).

2, 4: Chains of Tartarus: cf Jude 6; other manuscripts in 2 Peter read "pits of Tartarus." Tartarus: a term borrowed from Greek mythology to indicate the infernal regions.

2, 5-10a: Although God did not spare the sinful, he kept and saved the righteous, such as Noah (5) and Lot (7), and he knows how to rescue the devout (9), who are contrasted with the false teachers of the author's day. On Noah, cf Gn 5, 32—9, 29, especially 7, 1. On Lot, cf Gn 13 and 19.

2, 10b-22: Some take 10b and 11 with the preceding paragraph. Others begin the new paragraph with 10a, supplying from v 9 The Lord knows how . . . to keep . . . under punishment, with reference to God and probably specifically Christ (1). The conduct of the false teachers is described and condemned in language similar to that of Jude 8-16. This arrogance knows no bounds; animal-like, they are due to be caught and destroyed. They seduce even those who have knowledge of Christ (20).

False Teachers Denounced.† Bold and arrogant, they are not afraid to revile glorious beings, [11]† whereas angels, despite their superior strength and power, do not bring a reviling judgment against them from the Lord. [12] But these people, like irrational animals born by nature for capture and destruction, revile things that they do not understand, and in their destruction they will also be destroyed, [13]† suffering wrong as payment for wrongdoing. Thinking daytime revelry a delight, they are stains and defilements as they revel in their deceits while carousing with you. [14] Their eyes are full of adultery and insatiable for sin. They seduce unstable people, and their hearts are trained in greed. Accursed children! [15]† Abandoning the straight road, they have gone astray, following the road of Balaam, the son of Bosor, who loved payment for wrongdoing, [16]* but he received a rebuke for his own crime: a mute beast spoke with a human voice and restrained the prophet's madness.

[17]* These people are waterless springs and mists driven by a gale; for them the gloom of darkness has been reserved. [18]† For, talking empty bombast, they seduce with licentious desires of the flesh those who have barely escaped from people who live in error. [19] They promise them freedom, though they themselves are slaves of corruption, for a person is a slave of whatever overcomes him. [20]* For if they, having escaped the defilements of the world through the knowledge of [our] Lord and savior Jesus Christ, again become entangled and overcome by them, their last condition is worse than their first. [21]† For it would have been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness than after knowing it to turn back from the holy commandment handed down to them. [22]† What is expressed in the true proverb has happened to them, "The dog returns to its own vomit," and "A bathed sow returns to wallowing in the mire."

CHAPTER 3

Denial of the Parousia.† [1] This is now, beloved, the second letter I am writing to you; through them by way of reminder I am trying to stir up your sincere disposition, [2]* to recall the words previously spoken by the holy prophets and the commandment of the Lord and savior through your apostles. [3]† Know this first of all, that in the last days scoffers will come [to] scoff, living according to their own desires [4]† and saying, "Where is the promise of his coming? From the time when our ancestors fell asleep, everything has remained as it was from the beginning of creation." [5]† They deliberately ignore the fact that the heavens existed of old and earth was formed out of water and through water by the word of God; [6]† through these the world that then existed was destroyed, deluged with water. [7]* The present heavens and earth have been reserved by the same word for fire, kept for the day of judgment and of destruction of the godless.

2, 10b: Glorious beings: literally, "glories"; cf Jude 8. While some think that illustrious personages are meant or even political officials behind whom (fallen) angels stand, it is more likely that the reference is to glorious angelic beings (cf Jude 9).

2, 11: From the Lord: some manuscripts read "before the Lord"; cf Jude 9.

2, 13: Suffering wrong: some manuscripts read "receiving a reward." In their deceits: some manuscripts read "in their love feasts" (Jude 12).

2, 15: Balaam, the son of Bosor: in Nm 22, 5, Balaam is said to be the son of Beor, and it is this name that turns up in a few ancient Greek manuscripts by way of "correction" of the text. Balaam is not portrayed in such a bad light in Nm 22. His evil reputation and his madness (16), and possibly his surname Bosor, may have come from a Jewish tradition about him in the first/second century, of which we no longer have any knowledge.

2, 18: Barely escaped: some manuscripts read "really escaped."

2, 21: Commandment handed down: cf 3, 2 and Jude 3.

2, 22: The second proverb is of unknown origin, while the first appears in Prv 26, 11.

3, 1-4: The false teachers not only flout Christian morality (cf Jude 8-19); they also deny the second coming of Christ and the judgment (4; cf 7). They seek to justify their licentiousness by arguing that the promised return of Christ has not been realized and the world is the same, no better than it was before (3-4). The author wishes to strengthen the faithful against such errors by reminding them in this second letter of the instruction in 1 Pt and of the teaching of the prophets and of Christ, conveyed through the apostles (1-2; cf Jude 17); cf 1 Pt 1, 10-12.16-21, especially 16-21; Eph 2, 20.

3, 3: Scoffers: cf Jude 18, where, however, only the passions of the scoffers are mentioned, not a denial on their part of Jesus' parousia.

3, 4-7: The false teachers tried to justify their immorality by pointing out that the promised coming (parousia) of the Lord has not yet occurred, even though early Christians expected it in their day. They thus insinuate that God is not guiding the world's history anymore, since nothing has changed and the first generation of Christians, our ancestors (4), has all died by this time. The author replies that, just as God destroyed the earth by water in the flood (5-6, cf 2, 5), so he will destroy it along with the false teachers on judgment day (7). The word of God, which called the world into being (Gn 1; Ps 33, 6) and destroyed it by the waters of a flood, will destroy it again by fire on the day of judgment (5-7).

3, 5: Formed out of water and through water: Gn 1, 2.6-8 is reflected as well as Greek views that water was the basic element from which all is derived.

3, 6: Destroyed, deluged with water: cf 2, 5; Gn 7, 11—8, 2.

8*† But do not ignore this one fact, beloved, that with the Lord one day is like a thousand years and a thousand years like one day. 9* The Lord does not delay his promise, as some regard "delay," but he is patient with you, not wishing that any should perish but that all should come to repentance. 10*† But the day of the Lord will come like a thief, and then the heavens will pass away with a mighty roar and the elements will be dissolved by fire, and the earth and everything done on it will be found out.

Exhortation to Preparedness.† 11* Since everything is to be dissolved in this way, what sort of persons ought [you] to be, conducting yourselves in holiness and devotion, 12*† waiting for and hastening the coming of the day of God, because of which the heavens will be dissolved in flames and the elements melted by fire. 13*† But according to his promise we await new heavens and a new earth in which righteousness dwells.

14 Therefore, beloved, since you await these things, be eager to be found without spot or blemish before him, at peace. 15* And consider the patience of our Lord as salvation, as our beloved brother Paul, according to the wisdom given to him, also wrote to you, 16† speaking of these things as he does in all his letters. In them there are some things hard to understand that the ignorant and unstable distort to their own destruction, just as they do the other scriptures.

V: FINAL EXHORTATION AND DOXOLOGY†

17* Therefore, beloved, since you are forewarned, be on your guard not to be led into the error of the unprincipled and to fall from your own stability. 18* But grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and savior Jesus Christ. To him be glory now and to the day of eternity. [Amen.]

15: Rom 8, 19; Jude 24.
17: Mk 13, 5; Heb 2, 1.
18: Rom 16, 27.

† 3, 8-10: The scoffers' objection (4) is refuted also by showing that delay of the Lord's second coming is not a failure to fulfill his word but rather a sign of his patience: God is giving time for repentance before the final judgment (cf Wis 11, 23-26; Ez 18, 23; 33, 11).

3, 8: Cf Ps 90, 4.

3, 10: Like a thief: Mt 24, 43; 1 Thes 5, 2; Rv 3, 3. Will be found out: cf 1 Cor 3, 13-15. Some few versions read, as the sense may demand, "will not be found out"; many manuscripts read "will be burned up"; there are further variants in other manuscripts, versions, and Fathers. Total destruction is assumed (11).

3, 11-16: The second coming of Christ and the judgment of the world are the doctrinal bases for the moral exhortation to readiness through vigilance and a virtuous life; cf Mt 24, 42.50-51; Lk 12, 40; 1 Thes 5, 1-11; Jude 20-21.

3, 12: Flames . . . fire: although this is the only New Testament passage about a final conflagration, the idea was common in apocalyptic and Greco-Roman thought. Hastening: eschatology is here used to motivate ethics (11), as elsewhere in the New Testament. Jewish sources and Acts 3, 19-20 assume that proper ethical conduct can help bring the promised day of the Lord; cf 9. Some render the phrase, however, "desiring it earnestly."

3, 13: New heavens and a new earth: cf Is 65, 17; 66, 22. The divine promises will be fulfilled after the day of judgment will have passed. The universe will be transformed by the reign of God's righteousness or justice; cf Is 65, 17-18; Acts 3, 21; Rom 8, 18-25; Rv 21, 1.

3, 16: These things: the teachings of this letter find parallels in Paul, e.g., God's will to save (Rom 2, 4; 9, 22-23; 1 Cor 1, 7-8), the coming of Christ (1 Thes 4, 16-17; 1 Cor 15, 23-52), and preparedness for the judgment (Col 1, 22-23; Eph 1, 4-14; 4, 30; 5, 5-14). Other scriptures: used to guide the faith and life of the Christian community. The letters of Paul are thus here placed on the same level as books of the Old Testament. Possibly other New Testament writings could also be included.

3, 17-18: To avoid the dangers of error and loss of stability, Christians are forewarned to be on guard and to grow in grace and knowledge (1, 2) of Christ. The doxology (18) recalls 1 Pt 4, 11. Some manuscripts add Amen.

The First Letter of

JOHN

Early Christian tradition identified this work as a letter of John the apostle. Because of its resemblance to the fourth gospel in style, vocabulary, and ideas, it is generally agreed that both works are the product of the same school of Johannine Christianity. The terminology and the presence or absence of certain theological ideas in 1 John suggest that it was written after the gospel; it may have been composed as a short treatise on ideas that were developed more fully in the fourth gospel. To others, the evidence suggests that 1 John was written after the fourth gospel as part of a debate on the proper interpretation of that gospel. Whatever its relation to the gospel, 1 John may be dated toward the end of the first century. Unlike 2 and 3 John, it lacks in form the salutation and epistolary conclusion of a letter. These features, its prologue, and its emphasis on doctrinal teaching make it more akin to a theological treatise than to most other New Testament letters.

The purpose of the letter is to combat certain false ideas, especially about Jesus, and to deepen the spiritual and social awareness of the Christian community (3, 17). Some former members (2, 19) of the community refused to acknowledge Jesus as the Christ (2, 22) and denied that he was a true man (4, 2). The specific heresy described in this letter cannot be identified exactly, but it is a form of docetism or gnosticism; the former doctrine denied the humanity of Christ to insure that his divinity was untainted, and the latter viewed the appearance of Christ as a mere stepping-stone to higher knowledge of God. These theological errors are rejected by an appeal to the reality and continuity of the apostolic witness to Jesus. The author affirms that authentic Christian love, ethics, and faith take place only within the historical revelation and sacrifice of Jesus Christ. The fullness of Christian life as fellowship with the Father must be based on true belief and result in charitable living; knowledge of God and love for one another are inseparable, and error in one area inevitably affects the other. Although the author recognizes that Christian doctrine presents intangible mysteries of faith about Christ, he insists that the concrete Christian life brings to light the deeper realities of the gospel.

The structure and language of the letter are straightforward yet repetitious. The author sets forth the striking contrasts between light and darkness, Christians and the world, and truth and error to illustrate the threats and responsibilities of Christian life. The result is not one of theological argument but one of intense religious conviction expressed in simple truths. The letter is of particular value for its declaration of the humanity and divinity of Christ as an apostolic teaching and for its development of the intrinsic connection between Christian moral conduct and Christian doctrine.

The principal divisions of the First Letter of John are the following:

I: Prologue (1, 1-4)
II: God as Light (1, 5—3, 10)
III: Love for One Another (3, 11—5, 12)
IV: Epilogue (5, 13-21)

I: PROLOGUE

CHAPTER 1

The Word of Life†

1* What was from the beginning,
what we have heard,
what we have seen with our eyes,
what we looked upon
and touched with our hands
concerns the Word of life—2* for the life was made visible;
we have seen it and testify to it and proclaim to you the eternal life that was with the Father and was made visible to us—
3* what we have seen and heard
we proclaim now to you,
so that you too may have fellowship
with us;
for our fellowship is with the Father and with his Son, Jesus Christ.
4* We are writing this so that our joy
may be complete.

II: GOD AS LIGHT

God is Light.† 5 Now this is the message that we have heard from him and proclaim to you: God is light, and in him there is no darkness at all. 6 If we say, "We have fellowship with him," while we continue to walk in darkness, we lie and do not act in truth. 7* But if we walk in the light as he is in the light, then we have fellowship with one another, and the blood of his Son Jesus cleanses us from all sin. 8*† If we say, "We are without sin," we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us. 9* If we acknowledge our sins, he is faithful and just and will forgive our sins and cleanse us from every wrongdoing. 10* If we say, "We have not sinned," we make him a liar, and his word is not in us.

CHAPTER 2

Christ and His Commandments. 1*† My children, I am writing this to you so that you may not commit sin. But if anyone does sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous one. 2* He is expiation for our sins, and not for our sins only but for those of the whole world. 3*† The way we may be sure that we know him is to keep his commandments. 4* Whoever says, "I know him," but does not keep his commandments is a liar, and the truth is not in him. 5* But whoever keeps his word, the love of God is truly perfected in him. This is the way we may know that we are in union with him: 6 whoever claims to abide in him ought to live [just] as he lived.

The New Commandment.† 7 Beloved, I am writing no new commandment to you but an old commandment that you had from the beginning. The old commandment is the word that you have heard. 8*† And yet I do write a new commandment to you, which holds true in him and among you, for the darkness is passing away, and the true light is already shining. 9* Whoever says he is in the light, yet hates his brother, is still in the darkness. 10* Whoever loves his brother remains in the light, and there is nothing in him to cause a fall. 11 Whoever hates his brother is in darkness; he walks in dark-

10: Eccl 2, 14; Jn 11, 10.

† 1, 1-4: There is a striking parallel to the prologue of the gospel of John (Jn 1, 1-18), but the emphasis here is not on the preexistent Word but rather on the apostles' witness to the incarnation of life by their experience of the historical Jesus. He is the Word of life (1; cf Jn 1, 4), the eternal life that was with the Father and was made visible (2; cf Jn 1, 14), and was heard, seen, looked upon, and touched by the apostles. The purpose of their teaching is to share that life, called fellowship . . . with the Father and with his Son, Jesus Christ, with those who receive their witness (3; Jn 1, 14.16).

1, 5-7: Light is to be understood here as truth and goodness; darkness here is error and depravity (cf Jn 3, 19-21; 17, 17; Eph 5, 8). To walk in light or darkness is to live according to truth or error, not merely intellectual but moral as well. Fellowship with God and with one another consists in a life according to the truth as found in God and in Christ.

1, 8-10: Denial of the condition of sin is self-deception and even contradictory of divine revelation; there is also the continual possibility of sin's recurrence. Forgiveness and deliverance from sin through Christ are assured through acknowledgment of them and repentance.

2, 1: Children: like the term "beloved," this is an expression of pastoral love (cf Jn 13, 33; 21, 5; 1 Cor 4, 14). Advocate: for the use of the term, see Jn 14, 16. Forgiveness of sin is assured through Christ's intercession and expiation or "offering"; the death of Christ effected the removal of sin.

2, 3-6: The way we may be sure: to those who claim, "I have known Christ and therefore I know him," our author insists on not mere intellectual knowledge but obedience to God's commandments in a life conformed to the example of Christ; this confirms our knowledge of him and is the love of God . . . perfected. Disparity between moral life and the commandments proves improper belief.

2, 7-11: The author expresses the continuity and freshness of mutual charity in Christian experience. Through Christ the commandment of love has become the light defeating the darkness of evil in a new age. All hatred as darkness is incompatible with the light and Christian life. Note also the characteristic Johannine polemic in which a positive assertion is emphasized by the negative statement of its opposite.

2, 8: Which holds true in him and among you: literally, "a thing that holds true in him and in you."

ness and does not know where he is going because the darkness has blinded his eyes.

Members of the Community.† 12*† I am writing to you, children, because your sins have been forgiven for his name's sake.

13* I am writing to you, fathers, because you know him who is from the beginning.

I am writing to you, young men, because you have conquered the evil one.

14 I write to you, children, because you know the Father.

I write to you, fathers, because you know him who is from the beginning.

I write to you, young men, because you are strong and the word of God remains in you, and you have conquered the evil one.

15*† Do not love the world or the things of the world. If anyone loves the world, the love of the Father is not in him. 16† For all that is in the world, sensual lust, enticement for the eyes, and a pretentious life, is not from the Father but is from the world. 17* Yet the world and its enticement are passing away. But whoever does the will of God remains forever.

Antichrists. 18*† Children, it is the last hour; and just as you heard that the antichrist was coming, so now many antichrists have appeared. Thus we know this is the last hour. 19† They went out from us, but they were not really of our number; if they had been, they would have remained with us. Their desertion shows that none of them was of our number. 20*† But you have the anointing that comes from the holy one, and you all have knowledge. 21* I write to you not because you do not know the truth but because you do, and because every lie is alien to the truth. 22*† Who is the liar? Whoever denies that Jesus is the Christ. Whoever denies the Father and the Son, this is the antichrist. 23* No one who denies the Son has the Father, but whoever confesses the Son has the Father as well.

Life from God's Anointing. 24*† Let what you heard from the beginning remain in you. If what you heard from the beginning remains in you, then you will remain in the Son and in the Father. 25* And this is the promise that he made us: eternal life. 26 I write you these things about those who would deceive you. 27 As for you, the anointing that you received from him remains in you, so that you do not need anyone to teach you. But his anointing teaches you about everything and is true and not false; just as it taught you, remain in him.

Children of God.† 28 And now, children, remain in him, so that when he appears we may have confidence and not be put to shame by him at his coming. 29 If you consider that he is righteous, you also know that everyone who acts in righteousness is begotten by him.

CHAPTER 3

1*† See what love the Father has bestowed on us that we may be called the children of God. Yet so we are. The reason the world does not know us is that it did not know him. 2*† Beloved, we are God's children now; what we shall be has not yet been revealed. We do know that when it is revealed we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. 3* Everyone who has this hope based on

2, 12-17: The Christian community that has experienced the grace of God through forgiveness of sin and knowledge of Christ is armed against the evil one.

2, 12: For his name's sake: because of Christ our sins are forgiven.

2, 15: The world: all that is hostile toward God and alienated from him. Love of the world and love of God are thus mutually exclusive; cf Jas 4, 4.

2, 16: Sensual lust: literally, "the lust of the flesh," inordinate desire for physical gratification. Enticement for the eyes: literally, "the lust of the eyes," avarice or covetousness; the eyes are regarded as the windows of the soul. Pretentious life: literally, "pride of life," arrogance or ostentation in one's earthly style of life that reflects a willful independence from God and others.

2, 18: It is the last hour: literally, "a last hour," the period between the death and resurrection of Christ and his second coming. The antichrist: opponent or adversary of Christ; the term appears only in 1-2 John, but "pseudochrists" (translated "false messiahs") in Mt 24, 24 and Mk 13, 22, and Paul's "lawless one" in 2 Thes 2, 3, are similar figures. Many antichrists: Mt, Mk, and Rv seem to indicate a collectivity of persons, here related to the false teachers.

2, 19: Not really of our number: the apostate teachers only proved their lack of faith by leaving the community.

2, 20: The anointing that comes from the holy one: this anointing is in the Old Testament sense of receiving the Spirit of God. The Holy One probably refers to Christ. True knowledge is the gift of the Spirit (cf Is 11, 2), and the function of the Spirit is to lead Christians to the truth (Jn 14, 17.26; 16, 13).

2, 22-23: Certain gnostics denied that the earthly Jesus was the Christ; to deny knowledge of the Son is to deny the Father, since only through the Son has God been fully revealed (Jn 1, 18; 14, 8-9).

2, 24: Continuity with the apostolic witness as proclaimed in the prologue is the safeguard of right belief.

2, 28-29: Our confidence at his judgment is based on the daily assurance of salvation. Our actions reflect our true relation to him.

3, 1-3: The greatest sign of God's love is the gift of his Son (Jn 3, 16) that has made Christians true children of God. This relationship is a present reality and also part of the life to come; true knowledge of God will ultimately be gained, and Christians prepare themselves now by virtuous lives in imitation of the Son.

3, 2: When it is revealed: or "when he is revealed" (the subject of the verb could be Christ).

him makes himself pure, as he is pure.

Avoiding Sin. [4]† Everyone who commits sin commits lawlessness, for sin is lawlessness. [5]* You know that he was revealed to take away sins, and in him there is no sin. [6] No one who remains in him sins; no one who sins has seen him or known him. [7] Children, let no one deceive you. The person who acts in righteousness is righteous, just as he is righteous. [8]* Whoever sins belongs to the devil, because the devil has sinned from the beginning. Indeed, the Son of God was revealed to destroy the works of the devil. [9]† No one who is begotten by God commits sin, because God's seed remains in him; he cannot sin because he is begotten by God. [10] In this way, the children of God and the children of the devil are made plain; no one who fails to act in righteousness belongs to God, nor anyone who does not love his brother.

III: LOVE FOR ONE ANOTHER

[11]† For this is the message you have heard from the beginning: we should love one another, [12] unlike Cain who belonged to the evil one and slaughtered his brother. Why did he slaughter him? Because his own works were evil, and those of his brother righteous. [13]* Do not be amazed, [then,] brothers, if the world hates you. [14]* We know that we have passed from death to life because we love our brothers. Whoever does not love remains in death. [15]* Everyone who hates his brother is a murderer, and you know that no murderer has eternal life remaining in him. [16]* The way we came to know love was that he laid down his life for us; so we ought to lay down our lives for our brothers. [17]* If someone who has worldly means sees a brother in need and refuses him compassion, how can the love of God remain in him? [18]* Children, let us love not in word or speech but in deed and truth.

Confidence before God.† [19]† [Now] this is how we shall know that we belong to the truth and reassure our hearts before him [20] in whatever our hearts condemn, for God is greater than our hearts and knows everything. [21] Beloved, if [our] hearts do not condemn us, we have confidence in God [22]* and receive from him whatever we ask, because we keep his commandments and do what pleases him. [23]* And his commandment is this: we should believe in the name of his Son, Jesus Christ, and love one another just as he commanded us. [24]* Those who keep his commandments remain in him, and he in them, and the way we know that he remains in us is from the Spirit that he gave us.

Testing the Spirits.† [1]* Beloved, do not trust every spirit but test the spirits to see whether they belong to God, because many false prophets have gone out into the world. [2]* This is how you can know the Spirit of God: every spirit that acknowledges Jesus Christ come in the flesh belongs to God, [3]*† and every spirit that does not acknowledge Jesus does not belong to God. This is the spirit of the antichrist that, as you heard, is to come, but in fact is already in the world. [4] You belong to God, children, and you have conquered them, for the one who is in you is greater than the 3, 4: Lawlessness: a reference to the activity of the antichrist, so it is expressed as hostility toward God and a rejection of Christ. The author goes on to contrast the states of sin and righteousness. Christians do not escape sin but realize that when they sin they cease to have fellowship with God. Virtue and sin distinguish the children of God from the children of the devil.

3, 9: A habitual sinner is a child of the devil, while a child of God, who by definition is in fellowship with God, cannot sin. Seed: Christ or the Spirit who shares the nature of God with the Christian.

3, 11-18: Love, even to the point of self-sacrifice, is the point of the commandment. The story of Cain and Abel (12-15; Gn 4, 1-16) presents the rivalry of two brothers, in a contrast of evil and righteousness, where envy led to murder. For Christians, proof of deliverance is love toward others, after the example of Christ. This includes concrete acts of charity, out of our material abundance.

3, 19-24: Living a life of faith in Jesus and of Christian love assures us of abiding in God no matter what our feelings may at times tell us. Our obedience gives us confidence in prayer and trust in God's judgment. This obedience includes our belief in Christ and love for one another.

3, 19b-20: This difficult passage may also be translated "we shall be at peace before him in whatever our hearts condemn, for . . ." or "and before God we shall convince our hearts, if our hearts condemn us, that God is greater than our hearts."

4, 1-6: Deception is possible in spiritual phenomena and may be tested by its relation to Christian doctrine (cf 1 Cor 12, 3); those who fail to acknowledge Jesus Christ in the flesh are false prophets and belong to the antichrist. Even though these false prophets are well received in the world, the Christian who belongs to God has a greater power in the truth.

4, 3: Does not acknowledge Jesus: some ancient manuscripts add "Christ" and/or "to have come in the flesh" (cf 2), and others read "every spirit that annuls (or severs) Jesus."

one who is in the world. 5* They belong to the world; accordingly, their teaching belongs to the world, and the world listens to them. 6* We belong to God, and anyone who knows God listens to us, while anyone who does not belong to God refuses to hear us. This is how we know the spirit of truth and the spirit of deceit.

God's Love and Christian Life.† 7 Beloved, let us love one another, because love is of God; everyone who loves is begotten by God and knows God. 8 Whoever is without love does not know God, for God is love. 9* In this way the love of God was revealed to us: God sent his only Son into the world so that we might have life through him. 10* In this is love: not that we have loved God, but that he loved us and sent his Son as expiation for our sins. 11 Beloved, if God so loved us, we also must love one another. 12* No one has ever seen God. Yet, if we love one another, God remains in us, and his love is brought to perfection in us.

13† This is how we know that we remain in him and he in us, that he has given us of his Spirit. 14 Moreover, we have seen and testify that the Father sent his Son as savior of the world. 15 Whoever acknowledges that Jesus is the Son of God, God remains in him and he in God. 16 We have come to know and to believe in the love God has for us.

God is love, and whoever remains in love remains in God and God in him. 17* In this is love brought to perfection among us, that we have confidence on the day of judgment because as he is, so are we in this world. 18 There is no fear in love, but perfect love drives out fear because fear has to do with punishment, and so one who fears is not yet perfect in love. 19 We love because he first loved us. 20*† If anyone says, "I love God," but hates his brother, he is a liar; for whoever does not love a brother whom he has seen cannot love God whom he has not seen. 21* This is the commandment we have from him: whoever loves God must also love his brother.

Faith is Victory over the World.† 1* Everyone who believes that Jesus is the Christ is begotten by God, and everyone who loves the father loves [also] the one begotten by him. 2 In this way we know that we love the children of God when we love God and obey his commandments. 3* For the love of God is this, that we keep his commandments. And his commandments are not burdensome, 4* for whoever is begotten by God conquers the world. And the victory that conquers the world is our faith. 5* Who [indeed] is the victor over the world but the one who believes that Jesus is the Son of God?

6*† This is the one who came through water and blood, Jesus Christ, not by water alone, but by water and blood. The Spirit is the one that testifies, and the Spirit is truth. 7 So there are three that testify, 8* the Spirit, the water, and the blood, and the three are of one accord. 9* If we accept human testimony, the testimony of God is surely greater. Now the testimony of God is this, that he has testified on behalf of his Son. 10* Whoever believes in the Son of God has this testimony within himself. Whoever does not believe God has made him a liar by not believing the testimony God has given about his Son. 11* And this is the testimony: God gave us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. 12 Whoever possesses the Son has life; whoever does not possess the Son of God does not have life.

4, 7-12: Love as we share in it testifies to the nature of God and to his presence in our lives. One who loves shows that one is a child of God and knows God, for God's very being is love; one without love is without God. The revelation of the nature of God's love is found in the free gift of his Son to us, so that we may share life with God and be delivered from our sins. The love we have for one another must be of the same sort: authentic, merciful; this unique Christian love is our proof that we know God and can "see" the invisible God.

4, 13-21: The testimony of the Spirit and that of faith join the testimony of love to confirm our knowledge of God. Our love is grounded in the confession of Jesus as the Son of God and the example of God's love for us. Christian life is founded on the knowledge of God as love and on his continuing presence that relieves us from fear of judgment (16-18). What Christ is gives us confidence, even as we live and love in this world. Yet Christian love is not abstract but lived in the concrete manner of love for one another.

4, 20: Cannot love God: some ancient manuscripts read "how can he love . . . ?"

5, 1-5: Children of God are identified not only by their love for others (4, 7-9) and for God (5, 1-2) but by their belief in the divine sonship of Jesus Christ. Faith, the acceptance of Jesus in his true character and the obedience in love to God's commands (3), is the source of the Christian's power in the world and conquers the world of evil (4-5), even as Christ overcame the world (Jn 16, 33).

5, 6-12: Water and blood (6) refers to Christ's baptism (Mt 3, 16-17) and to the shedding of his blood on the cross (Jn 19, 34). The Spirit was present at the baptism (Mt 3, 16; Mk 1, 10; Lk 3, 22; Jn 1, 32.34). The testimony to Christ as the Son of God is confirmed by divine witness (7-9), greater by far than the two legally required human witnesses (Dt 17, 6). To deny this is to deny God's truth; cf Jn 8, 17-18. The gist of the divine witness or testimony is that eternal life (11-12) is given in Christ and nowhere else. To possess the Son is not acceptance of a doctrine but of a person who lives now and provides life.

IV: EPILOGUE†

Prayer for Sinners. [13]* I write these things to you so that you may know that you have eternal life, you who believe in the name of the Son of God. [14]* And we have this confidence in him, that if we ask anything according to his will, he hears us. [15] And if we know that he hears us in regard to whatever we ask, we know that what we have asked him for is ours. [16]* If anyone sees his brother sinning, if the sin is not deadly, he should pray to God and he will give him life. This is only for those whose sin is not deadly. There is such a thing as deadly sin, about which I do not say that you should pray. [17] All wrongdoing is sin, but there is sin that is not deadly.

[18] We know that no one begotten by God sins; but the one begotten by God he protects, and the evil one cannot touch him. [19] We know that we belong to God, and the whole world is under the power of the evil one. [20]* We also know that the Son of God has come and has given us discernment to know the one who is true. And we are in the one who is true, in his Son Jesus Christ. He is the true God and eternal life. [21] Children, be on your guard against idols.

† 5, 13-21: As children of God we have confidence in prayer because of our intimate relationship with him (14-15). In love, we pray (16-17) for those who are in sin, but not in deadly sin (literally, "sin unto death"), probably referring to apostasy or activities brought on under the antichrist; cf Mk 3, 29; Heb 6, 4-6; 10, 26-31. Even in the latter case, however, prayer, while not enjoined, is not forbidden. The letter concludes with a summary of the themes of the letter (18-20). There is a sharp antithesis between the children of God and those belonging to the world and to the evil one. The Son reveals the God of truth; Christians dwell in the true God, in his Son, and have eternal life. The final verse (21) voices a perennial warning about idols, any type of rival to God.

The Second Letter of

JOHN

Written in response to similar problems, the Second and Third Letters of John are of the same length, perhaps determined by the practical consideration of the writing space on one piece of papyrus. In each letter the writer calls himself "the Presbyter," and their common authorship is further evidenced by internal similarities in style and wording, especially in the introductions and conclusions. The literary considerations that link 2 and 3 John also link them with the First Letter and the Gospel of John. The concern with "truth," christology, mutual love, the new commandment, antichrist, and the integrity of witness to the earthly Jesus mark these works as products of the Johannine school. The identity of the Presbyter is problematic. The use of the title implies more than age, and refers to his position of leadership in the early church. The absence of a proper name indicates that he was well known and acknowledged in authority by the communities to which he writes. Although traditionally attributed to John the apostle, these letters were probably written by a disciple or scribe of an apostle. The traditional place and date of composition, Ephesus at the end of the first century, are plausible for both letters.

The Second Letter is addressed to "the chosen Lady" and "to her children." This literary image of a particular Christian community reflects the specific destination and purpose of the letter. Unlike 1 John, this brief letter is not a theological treatise but a reply to problems within the church. The Johannine themes of love and truth are used to support practical advice on Christian living. The Presbyter encourages community members to show their Christianity by adhering to the great commandment of mutual love and to the historical truth about Jesus. The false teaching present among them is a spiritualizing christology that may tempt some members to discount teachings about the incarnation and death of Jesus the Christ; cf 1 Jn 4, 2. For their protection the Presbyter forbids hospitality toward unknown or "progressive" Christians to prevent their infiltration of the community. The Second Letter preserves the Johannine concerns of doctrinal purity and active love in the form of pastoral advice to a threatened community.

[1]*† The Presbyter to the chosen Lady and to her children whom I love in truth—and not only I but also all who know the truth—[2] because of the truth that dwells in us and will be with us forever. [3]† Grace, mercy, and peace will be with us from God the Father and from Jesus Christ the Father's Son in truth and love.

[4]† I rejoiced greatly to find some of your children walking in the truth just as we were commanded by the Father. [5] But now, Lady, I ask you, not as though I were writing a new commandment but the one we have had from the beginning: let us love one another. [6]*† For this is love, that we walk ac-

1: The chosen Lady: literally, "elected"; this could also be translated "Kyria (a woman's name) chosen (by God)" or "the lady Electa" or "Electa Kyria." The adjective "chosen" is applied to all Christians at the beginning of other New Testament letters (1 Pt 1, 1; Ti 1, 1). The description is of a specific community with "children" who are its members. The truth: the affirmation of Jesus in the flesh and in contrast to false teaching (7).

3: Grace, mercy, and peace: like 1 and 2 Tm this letter adds mercy to the terms used frequently in a salutation to describe Christian blessing; it appears only here in the Johannine writings. The author also puts the blessing in relation to truth and love, the watchwords of the Johannine teaching. The Father's Son: the title that affirms the close relationship of Christ to God; similar variations of this title occur elsewhere (Jn 1, 14; 3, 35), but the precise wording is not found elsewhere in the New Testament.

4: Some of your children: this refers to those whom the Presbyter has recently encountered, but it may also indicate the presence of false doctrine in the community: the Presbyter encourages those who have remained faithful. Walking in the truth: an expression used in the Johannine writings to describe a way of living in which the Christian faith is visibly expressed; cf 1 Jn 1, 6-7; 2, 6.11; 3 Jn 3.

6: His commandments: cf 1 Jn 3, 23; 2, 7-8; 4, 21; obedience to the commandment of faith and love includes all others.

cording to his commandments; this is the commandment, as you heard from the beginning, in which you should walk.
7*† Many deceivers have gone out into the world, those who do not acknowledge Jesus Christ as coming in the flesh; such is the deceitful one and the antichrist. 8† Look to yourselves that you do not lose what we worked for but may receive a full recompense.
9*† Anyone who is so "progressive" as not to remain in the teaching of the Christ does not have God; whoever remains in the teaching has the Father and the Son. 10*† If anyone comes to you and does not bring this doctrine, do not receive him in your house or even greet him; 11 for whoever greets him shares
in his evil works.
12*† Although I have much to write to you, I do not intend to use paper and ink. Instead, I hope to visit you and to speak face to face so that our joy may be complete. 13† The children of your chosen sister send you greetings.

7: The antichrist: see 1 Jn 2, 18-19.22; 4, 3.

8: You (plural): it is not certain whether this means the Christians addressed or includes the Presbyter, since some of the ancient Greek manuscripts and Greek Fathers have "we."

9: Anyone who is so "progressive": literally, "Anyone who goes ahead." Some gnostic groups held the doctrine of the Christ come in the flesh to be a first step in belief, which the more advanced and spiritual believer surpassed and abandoned in his knowledge of the spiritual Christ. The author affirms that fellowship with God may be gained only by holding to the complete doctrine of Jesus Christ (1 Jn 2, 22-23; 4, 2; 5, 5-6).

10-11: At this time false teachers were considered so dangerous and divisive as to be shunned completely. From this description they seem to be wandering preachers. We see here a natural suspicion of early Christians concerning such itinerants and can envisage the problems faced by missionaries such as those mentioned in 3 Jn 10.

12: Our joy: a number of other Greek manuscripts read "your joy."

13: Chosen sister: the community of which the Presbyter is now a part greets you (singular), the community of the Lady addressed.

The Third Letter of

JOHN

The Third Letter of John preserves a brief glimpse into the problems of missionary activity and local autonomy in the early church. In contrast to the other two letters of John, this work was addressed to a specific individual, Gaius. This letter is less theological in content and purpose. The author's goal was to secure hospitality and material support for his missionaries, and the Presbyter is writing to another member of the church who has welcomed missionaries in the past. The Presbyter commends Gaius for his hospitality and encourages his future help. He indicates he may come to challenge the policy of Diotrephes that is based on evil gossip.

The problems of the Presbyter in this short letter provide us with valuable evidence of the flexible and personal nature of authority in the early church. The Presbyter writes to Gaius, whom perhaps he had converted or instructed, on the basis of their personal links. The brothers have also confirmed him as a loyal Christian in action and belief. Gaius accepted the missionaries from the Presbyter and presumably will accept Demetrius on the Presbyter's recommendation. In contrast, Diotrephes refuses to receive either letters or friends of the Presbyter. Although he is portrayed as ambitious and hostile, he perhaps exemplifies the cautious and sectarian nature of early Christianity; for its own protection the local community mistrusted missionaries as false teachers. Most interestingly, Diotrephes seems comfortable in ignoring the requests of the Presbyter. The Presbyter seems to acknowledge that only a personal confrontation with Diotrephes will remedy the situation (10). The division, however, may also rest on doctrinal disagreement in which Gaius and the other "friends" accept the teaching of the Presbyter, and Diotrephes does not; the missionaries are not received for suspicion of theological error. Diotrephes has thus been viewed by some as an overly ambitious local upstart trying to thwart the advance of orthodox Christianity, by others as an orthodox church official suspicious of the teachings of the Presbyter and those in the Johannine school who think as he does, or by still others as a local leader anxious to keep the debates in the Johannine community out of his own congregation.

This brief letter and the situation that it mirrors show us how little we know about some details of early development in the church: schools of opinion existed around which questions of faith and life were discussed, and personal ties as well as doctrine and authority played a role in what happened amid divisions and unity.

5: You are faithful in all you do: Gaius's aid to the missionaries is a manifestation of his true Christian faith.

monial as well, and you know our testimony is true.

13* I have much to write to you, but I do not wish to write with pen and ink.
14 Instead, I hope to see you soon, when we can talk face to face. 15*† Peace be with you. The friends greet you; greet the friends there each by name.

† 7: The Name: of Jesus Christ (cf Acts 5, 41; 1 Jn 2, 12; 3, 23; 5, 13). Accepting nothing: not expecting support from the pagans to whom they preach the gospel, so that they will not be considered as beggars; they required support from other Christians; cf Paul's complaints to the Corinthians (1 Cor 9, 3-12).

9: Who loves to dominate: the Presbyter does not deny Diotrephes' place as leader but indicates that his ambition may have caused him to disregard his letter and his influence.

10: If I come: the Presbyter may visit the community to challenge the actions of Diotrephes toward himself and the missionaries. Will not receive the brothers: Diotrephes may have been critical of the teachings of the Presbyter and sought to maintain doctrinal purity; cf 1 Jn 2, 19 and 2 Jn 10-11.

11: Do not imitate evil: Gaius should not be influenced by the behavior of Diotrephes.

12: Demetrius: because of the fear of false teachers, Demetrius, perhaps the bearer of the letter, is provided with a recommendation from the Presbyter; cf 2 Cor 3, 1; Rom 16, 1. Even from the truth itself: this refers probably to the manner of Demetrius's life that testifies to his true belief; cf Gaius above (v 3).

15: Friends: although a Johannine term for Christians (Jn 15, 15), the word here may refer to those in the community loyal to the Presbyter and to Gaius.

The Letter of

JUDE

This letter is by its address attributed to "Jude, a slave of Jesus Christ and brother of James" (1). Since he is not identified as an apostle, this designation can hardly be meant to refer to the Jude or Judas who is listed as one of the Twelve (Lk 6, 16; Acts 1, 13; cf Jn 14, 22). The person intended is almost certainly the other Jude, named in the gospels among the relatives of Jesus (Mt 13, 55; Mk 6, 3), and the James who is listed there as his brother is the one to whom the Letter of James is attributed (see the Introduction to James). Nothing else is known of this Jude, and the apparent need to identify him by reference to his better-known brother indicates that he was a rather obscure personage in the early church.

The letter is addressed in the most general terms to "those who are called, beloved in God the Father and kept safe for Jesus Christ" (1), hence apparently to all Christians. But since its purpose is to warn the addressees against false teachers, the author must have had in mind one or more specific Christian communities located in the unidentified region where the errors in question constituted a danger. While the letter contains some Semitic features, there is nothing to identify the addressees specifically as Jewish Christians; indeed, the errors envisaged seem to reflect an early form of gnosticism, opposed to law, that points rather to the cultural context of the Gentile world. Like James and 2 Peter, the Letter of Jude manifests none of the typical features of the letter form except the address.

There is so much similarity between Jude and 2 Peter, especially Jude 4-16 and 2 Peter 2, 1-18, that there must be a literary relationship between them. Since there is no evidence for the view that both authors borrowed from the same source, it is usually supposed that one of them borrowed from the other. Most scholars believe that Jude is the earlier of the two, principally because he quotes two apocryphal Jewish works, the Assumption of Moses (9) and the Book of Enoch (14-15) as part of his structured argument, whereas 2 Peter omits both references. Since there was controversy in the early church about the propriety of citing noncanonical literature that included legendary material, it is more probable that a later writer would omit such references than that he would add them.

Many interpreters today consider Jude a pseudonymous work dating from the end of the first century or even later. In support of this view they adduce the following arguments: (a) the apostles are referred to as belonging to an age that has receded into the past (17-18); (b) faith is understood as a body of doctrine handed down by a process of tradition (3); (c) the author's competent Greek style shows that he must have had a Hellenistic cultural formation; (d) the gnostic character of the errors envisaged fits better into the early second century than into a period several decades earlier. While impressive, these arguments are not entirely compelling and do not completely rule out the possibility of composition around the year A.D. 80, when the historical Jude may still have been alive.

This little letter is an urgent note by an author who intended to write more fully about salvation to an unknown group of readers, but who was forced by dangers from false teachers worming their way into the community (3-4) to dash off a warning against them (5-16) and to deliver some pressing Christian admonitions (17-23). The letter is justly famous for its majestic closing doxology (24-25).

Address and Greeting. 1*† Jude, a slave of Jesus Christ and brother of James, to those who are called, beloved in God the Father and kept safe for Jesus Christ: 2* may mercy, peace, and love be yours in abundance.

Occasion for Writing.† 3 Beloved, although I was making every effort to write to you about our common salvation, I now feel a need to write to encourage you to contend for the faith that was once for all handed down to the holy ones. 4* For there have been some intruders, who long ago were designated for this condemnation, godless persons, who pervert the grace of our God into licentiousness and who deny our only Master and Lord, Jesus Christ.

The False Teachers. 5*† I wish to remind you, although you know all things, that [the] Lord who once saved a people from the land of Egypt later destroyed those who did not believe. 6*† The angels too, who did not keep to their own domain but deserted their proper dwelling, he has kept in eternal chains, in gloom, for the judgment of the great day. 7*† Likewise, Sodom, Gomorrah, and the surrounding towns, which, in the same manner as they, indulged in sexual promiscuity and practiced unnatural vice, serve as an example by undergoing a punishment of eternal fire.

8† Similarly, these dreamers nevertheless also defile the flesh, scorn lordship, and revile glorious beings. 9*† Yet the archangel Michael, when he argued with the devil in a dispute over the body of Moses, did not venture to pronounce a reviling judgment upon him but said, "May the Lord rebuke you!" 10* But these people revile what they do not understand and are destroyed by what they know by nature like irrational animals. 11*† Woe to them! They followed the way of Cain, abandoned themselves to Balaam's error for the sake of gain, and perished in the rebellion of Korah. 12*† These are blemishes on your love feasts, as they carouse fearlessly and look after themselves. They are waterless clouds blown about by winds, fruitless trees in late autumn, twice dead and uprooted. 13 They are like wild waves of the sea, foaming up their shameless deeds, wandering stars for whom the gloom of darkness has been reserved forever.

14*† Enoch, of the seventh generation from Adam, prophesied also about them when he said, "Behold, the Lord has come with his countless holy ones 15 to execute judgment on all and to convict everyone for all the godless deeds that they committed and for all the harsh words godless sinners have uttered against him." 16* These people are complainers, disgruntled ones who live by their desires; their mouths utter bombast as they fawn over people to gain advantage.

1: Jude . . . brother of James: for the identity of the author of this letter, see Introduction. To those who are called: the vocation to the Christian faith is God's free gift to those whom he loves and whom he safely protects in Christ until the Lord's second coming.

3-4: Our common salvation: the teachings of the Christian faith derived from the apostolic preaching and to be kept by the Christian community.

5: For this first example of divine punishment on those who had been saved but did not then keep faith, see Nm 14, 28-29 and the note there. Some manuscripts have the word "once" (hapax as at 3) after "you know"; some commentators have suggested that it means "knowing one thing" or "you know all things once for all." Instead of "[the] Lord" manuscripts vary, having "Jesus," "God," or no subject stated.

6: This second example draws on Gn 6, 1-4 as elaborated in the apocryphal Book of Enoch (cf 14): heavenly beings came to earth and had sexual intercourse with women. God punished them by casting them out of heaven into darkness and bondage.

7: Practiced unnatural vice: literally, "went after alien flesh." This example derives from Gn 19, 1-25, especially 4-11, when the townsmen of Sodom violated both hospitality and morality by demanding that Lot's two visitors (really messengers of Yahweh) be handed over to them so that they could abuse them sexually. Unnatural vice: this refers to the desire for intimacies by human beings with angels (the reverse of the example in 6). Sodom (whence "sodomy") and Gomorrah became proverbial as object lessons for God's punishment on sin (Is 1, 9; Jer 50, 40; Am 4, 11; Mt 10, 15; 2 Pt 2, 6).

8: Dreamers: the writer returns to the false teachers of v 4, applying charges from the three examples in vv 5, 6, 7. This may apply to claims they make for revelations they have received by night (to the author, hallucinations). Defile the flesh: this may mean bodily pollutions from the erotic dreams of sexual license (7). Lordship . . . glorious beings: these may reflect the Lord (5; Jesus, 4) whom they spurn and the angels (6; cf the note on 2 Pt 2, 10, here, as there, literally, "glories").

9: The archangel Michael . . . judgment: a reference to an incident in the apocryphal Assumption of Moses. Dt 34, 6 had said of Moses, literally in Greek, "they buried him" or "he (God?) buried him" (taken to mean "he was buried"). The later account tells how Michael, who was sent to bury him, was challenged by the devil's interest in the body. Our author draws out the point that if an archangel refrained from reviling even the devil, how wrong it is for mere human beings to revile glorious beings (angels).

11: Cain . . . Balaam . . . Korah: examples of rebellious men and of the punishment their conduct incurred: cf Gn 4, 8-16; Nm 16, 1-35; 31, 16. See the note on 2 Pt 2, 15.

12: Blemishes on your love feasts: or "hidden rocks" or "submerged reefs" (cf 13). The opponents engaged in scandalous conduct in connection with community gatherings called love feasts (agape meals), which were associated with eucharistic celebrations at certain stages of early Christian practice; cf 1 Cor 11, 18-34 and the note on 2 Pt 2, 13.

14-15: Cited from the apocryphal Book of Enoch 1, 9.

Exhortations. [17]* But you, beloved, remember the words spoken beforehand by the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ, [18]† for they told you, "In [the] last time there will be scoffers who will live according to their own godless desires." [19] These are the ones who cause divisions; they live on the natural plane, devoid of the Spirit. [20]* But you, beloved, build yourselves up in your most holy faith; pray in the holy Spirit. [21]* Keep yourselves in the love of God and wait for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ that leads to eternal life. [22]† On those who waver, have mercy; [23]† save others by snatching them out of the fire; on others have mercy with fear, abhorring even the outer garment stained by the flesh.

Doxology.† [24]* To the one who is able to keep you from stumbling and to present you unblemished and exultant, in the presence of his glory, [25]* to the only God, our savior, through Jesus Christ our Lord be glory, majesty, power, and authority from ages past, now, and for ages to come. Amen.

18: This is the substance of much early Christian preaching rather than a direct quotation of any of the various New Testament passages on this theme (see Mk 13, 22; Acts 20, 30; 1 Tm 4, 1-3; 2 Pt 3, 3).

22: Have mercy: some manuscripts read "convince," "confute," or "reprove." Others have "even though you waver" or "doubt" instead of who waver.

23: With fear: some manuscripts connect the phrase "with fear" with the imperative "save" or with the participle "snatching." Other manuscripts omit the phrase "on others have mercy," so that only two groups are envisioned. Rescue of those led astray and caution in the endeavor are both enjoined. Outer garment stained by the flesh: the imagery may come from Zec 3, 3-5, just as that of snatching . . . out of the fire comes from Zec 3, 2; the very garments of the godless are to be abhorred because of their contagion.

24-25: With this liturgical statement about the power of God to keep the faithful from stumbling, and praise to him through Jesus Christ, the letter reaches its conclusion by returning to the themes with which it began (1-2).

The Revelation to

JOHN

The Apocalypse, or Revelation to John, the last book of the Bible, is one of the most difficult to understand because it abounds in unfamiliar and extravagant symbolism, which at best appears unusual to the modern reader. Symbolic language, however, is one of the chief characteristics of apocalyptic literature, of which this book is an outstanding example. Such literature enjoyed wide popularity in both Jewish and Christian circles from ca. 200 B.C. to A.D. 200.

This book contains an account of visions in symbolic and allegorical language borrowed extensively from the Old Testament, especially Ezekiel, Zechariah, and Daniel. Whether or not these visions were real experiences of the author or simply literary conventions employed by him is an open question.

*This much, however, is certain: symbolic descriptions are not to be taken as literal descriptions, nor is the symbolism meant to be pictured realistically. One would find it difficult and repulsive to visualize a lamb with seven horns and seven eyes; yet Jesus Christ is described in precisely such words (5, 6). The author used these images to suggest Christ's universal (seven) power (horns) and knowledge (eyes). A significant feature of apocalyptic writing is the use of symbolic colors, metals, garments (1, 13-16; 3, 18; 4, 4; 6, 1-8; 17, 4; 19, 8), and numbers (*four signifies the world, six imperfection, seven totality of perfection, twelve Israel's tribes or the apostles, one thousand immensity). Finally the vindictive language in the book (6, 9-10; 18, 1—19, 4) is also to be understood symbolically and not literally. The cries for vengeance on the lips of Christian martyrs that sound so harsh are in fact literary devices the author employed to evoke in the reader and hearer a feeling of horror for apostasy and rebellion that will be severely punished by God.

The lurid descriptions of the punishment of Jezebel (2, 22) and of the destruction of the great harlot, Babylon (16, 9—19, 2), are likewise literary devices. The metaphor of Babylon as harlot would be wrongly construed if interpreted literally. On the other hand, the stylized figure of the woman clothed with the sun (12, 1-6), depicting the New Israel, may seem to be a negative stereotype. It is necessary to look beyond the literal meaning to see that these images mean to convey a sense of God's wrath at sin in the former case and trust in God's providential care over the church in the latter.

The Book of Revelation cannot be adequately understood except against the historical background that occasioned its writing. Like Daniel and other apocalypses, it was composed as resistance literature to meet a crisis. The book itself suggests that the crisis was ruthless persecution of the early church by the Roman authorities; the harlot Babylon symbolizes pagan Rome, the city on seven hills (17, 9). The book is, then, an exhortation and admonition to Christians of the first century to stand firm in the faith and to avoid compromise with paganism, despite the threat of adversity and martyrdom; they are to await patiently the fulfillment of God's mighty promises. The triumph of God in the world of men and women remains a mystery, to be accepted in faith and longed for in hope. It is a triumph that unfolded in the history of Jesus of Nazareth and continues to unfold in the history of the individual Christian who follows the way of the cross, even, if necessary, to a martyr's death.

Though the perspective is eschatological—ultimate salvation and victory are said to take place at the end of the present age when Christ will come in glory at the parousia—the book presents the decisive struggle of Christ and his followers against Satan and his cohorts as already over. Christ's overwhelming defeat of the kingdom of Satan ushered in the everlasting reign of God (11, 15; 12, 10).

Even the forces of evil unwittingly carry out the divine plan (17, 17), for God is the sovereign Lord of history.

The Book of Revelation had its origin in a time of crisis, but it remains valid and meaningful for Christians of all time. In the face of apparently insuperable evil, either from within or from without, all Christians are called to trust in Jesus' promise, "Behold, I am with you always, until the end of the age" (Mt 28, 20). Those who remain steadfast in their faith and confidence in the risen Lord need have no fear. Suffering, persecution, even death by martyrdom, though remaining impenetrable mysteries of evil, do not comprise an absurd dead end. No matter what adversity or sacrifice Christians may endure, they will in the end triumph over Satan and his forces because of their fidelity to Christ the victor. This is the enduring message of the book; it is a message of hope and consolation and challenge for all who dare to believe.

The author of the book calls himself John (1, 1.4.9; 22, 8), who because of his Christian faith has been exiled to the rocky island of Patmos, a Roman penal colony. Although he never claims to be John the apostle, whose name is attached to the fourth gospel, he was so identified by several of the early church Fathers, including Justin, Irenaeus, Clement of Alexandria, Tertullian, Cyprian, and Hippolytus. This identification, however, was denied by other Fathers, including Denis of Alexandria, Eusebius of Caesarea, Cyril of Jerusalem, Gregory Nazianzen, and John Chrysostom. Indeed, vocabulary, grammar, and style make it doubtful that the book could have been put into its present form by the same person(s) responsible for the fourth gospel. Nevertheless, there are definite linguistic and theological affinities between the two books. The tone of the letters to the seven churches (1, 4—3, 22) is indicative of the great authority the author enjoyed over the Christian communities in Asia. It is possible, therefore, that he was a disciple of John the apostle, who is traditionally associated with that part of the world. The date of the book in its present form is probably near the end of the reign of Domitian (A.D. 81-96), a fierce persecutor of the Christians.

The principal divisions of the Book of Revelation are the following:

- I: Prologue (1, 1-3)
- II: Letters to the Churches of Asia (1, 4—3, 22)
- III: God and the Lamb in Heaven (4, 1—5, 14)
- IV: The Seven Seals, Trumpets, and Plagues, with Interludes (6, 1—16, 21)
- V. The Punishment of Babylon and the Destruction of Pagan Nations (17, 1—20, 15)
- VI: The New Creation (21, 1—22, 5)
- VII: Epilogue (22, 6-21)

I: PROLOGUE†

CHAPTER 1

1* The revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave to him, to show his servants what must happen soon. He made it known by sending his angel to his servant John, 2 who gives witness to the word of God and to the testimony of Jesus Christ by reporting what he saw. 3*† Blessed is the one who reads aloud and blessed are those who listen to this prophetic message and heed what is written in it, for the appointed time is near.

1, 1: 22, 6-8.20; Dn 2, 28 / 19, 10. 3: 22, 7 / Lk 11, 28.

† 1, 1-3: This prologue describes the source, contents, and audience of the book and forms an inclusion with the epilogue (22, 6-21), with its similar themes and expressions.

1, 3: Blessed is the one: this is the first of seven beatitudes in this book; the others are in 14, 13; 16, 15; 19, 9; 20, 6; 22, 7.14. This prophetic message: literally, "the words of the prophecy"; so 22, 7.10.18.19 by inclusion. The appointed time: when Jesus will return in glory; cf 1, 7; 3, 11; 22, 7.10.12.20.

II: LETTERS TO THE CHURCHES OF ASIA

Greeting. † [4]† John, to the seven churches in Asia: grace to you and peace from him who is and who was and who is to come, and from the seven spirits before his throne, [5]† and from Jesus Christ, the faithful witness, the firstborn of the dead and ruler of the kings of the earth. To him who loves us and has freed us from our sins by his blood, [6]* who has made us into a kingdom, priests for his God and Father, to him be glory and power forever [and ever]. Amen.

[7]* Behold, he is coming amid the clouds,
and every eye will see him,
even those who pierced him.
All the peoples of the earth will lament him.
Yes. Amen.

[8]*† "I am the Alpha and the Omega," says the Lord God, "the one who is and who was and who is to come, the almighty."

The First Vision. † [9]† I, John, your brother, who share with you the distress, the kingdom, and the endurance we have in Jesus, found myself on the island called Patmos because I proclaimed God's word and gave testimony to Jesus. [10]† I was caught up in spirit on the Lord's day and heard behind me a voice as loud as a trumpet, [11]† which said, "Write on a scroll what you see and send it to the seven churches: to Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergamum, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia, and Laodicea." [12]† Then I turned to see whose voice it was that spoke to me, and when I turned, I saw seven gold lampstands [13]† and in the midst of the lampstands one like a son of man, wearing an ankle-length robe, with a gold sash around his chest. [14]† The hair of his head was as white as white wool or as snow, and his eyes were like a fiery flame. [15]† His feet were like polished brass refined in a furnace, and his voice was like the sound of rushing water. [16]† In his right hand he held seven stars. A sharp two-edged sword came out of his mouth, and his face shone like the sun at its brightest.

[17]*† When I caught sight of him, I fell down at his feet as though dead. He touched me with his right hand and said, "Do not be afraid. I am the first and the last, [18]† the one who lives. Once I was dead, but now I am alive forever and ever. I hold the keys to death and the netherworld. [19]† Write down, therefore, what you have seen, and what is happening, and what will happen after-

16: Heb 4, 12.
17: Dn 8, 18 / 1, 8.

1, 4-8: Although Revelation begins and ends (22, 21) with Christian epistolary formulae, there is nothing between chs 4 and 22 resembling a letter. The author here employs the standard word order for greetings in Greek letter writing: "N. to N., greetings . . ."; see the note on Rom 1, 1.

1, 4: Seven churches in Asia: Asia refers to the Roman province of that name in western Asia Minor (modern Turkey); these representative churches are mentioned by name in v 11, and each is the recipient of a message (2, 1—3, 22). Seven is the biblical number suggesting fullness and completeness; thus the seer is writing for the whole church.

1, 5: Freed us: the majority of Greek manuscripts and several early versions read "washed us"; but "freed us" is supported by the best manuscripts and fits well with Old Testament imagery, e.g., Is 40, 2.

1, 8: The Alpha and the Omega: the first and last letters of the Greek alphabet. In 22, 13 the same words occur together with the expressions "the First and the Last, the Beginning and the End"; cf 17; 2, 8; 21, 6; Is 41, 4; 44, 6.

1, 9-20: In this first vision, the seer is commanded to write what he sees to the seven churches (9-11). He sees Christ in glory, whom he depicts in stock apocalyptic imagery (12-16), and hears him describe himself in terms meant to encourage Christians by emphasizing his victory over death (17-20).

1, 9: Island called Patmos: one of the Sporades islands in the Aegean Sea, some fifty miles south of Ephesus, used by the Romans as a penal colony. Because I proclaimed God's word: literally, "on account of God's word."

1, 10: The Lord's day: Sunday. As loud as a trumpet: the imagery is derived from the theophany at Sinai (Ex 19, 16.19; cf Heb 12, 19 and the trumpet in other eschatological settings in Is 27, 13; Jl 2, 1; Mt 24, 31; 1 Cor 15, 52; 1 Thes 4, 16).

1, 11: Scroll: a papyrus roll.

1, 12-16: A symbolic description of Christ in glory. The metaphorical language is not to be understood literally; cf Introduction.

1, 13: Son of man: see the note on Mk 8, 31. Ankle-length robe: Christ is priest; cf Ex 28, 4; 29, 5; Wis 18, 24; Zec 3, 4. Gold sash: Christ is king; cf Ex 28, 4; 1 Mc 10, 89; 11, 58; Dn 10, 5.

1, 14: Hair . . . as white as white wool or as snow: Christ is eternal, clothed with the dignity that belonged to the "Ancient of Days"; cf 18; Dn 7, 9. His eyes were like a fiery flame: Christ is portrayed as all-knowing; cf 2, 23; Ps 7, 10; Jer 17, 10; and similar expressions in 2, 18; 19, 12; cf Dn 10, 6.

1, 15: His feet . . . furnace: Christ is depicted as unchangeable; cf Ez 1, 27; Dn 10, 6. The Greek word translated "refined" is unconnected grammatically with any other word in the sentence. His voice . . . water: Christ speaks with divine authority; cf Ez 1, 24.

1, 16: Seven stars: in the pagan world, Mithras and the Caesars were represented with seven stars in their right hand, symbolizing their universal dominion. A sharp two-edged sword: this refers to the word of God (cf Eph 6, 17; Heb 4, 12) that will destroy unrepentant sinners; cf 2, 16; 19, 15; Wis 18, 15; Is 11, 4; 49, 2. His face . . . brightest: this symbolizes the divine majesty of Christ; cf 10, 1; 21, 23; Jgs 5, 31; Is 60, 19; Mt 17, 2.

1, 17: It was an Old Testament belief that for sinful human beings to see God was to die; cf Ex 19, 21; 33, 20; Jgs 6, 22-23; Is 6, 5.

1, 18: Netherworld: Greek Hades, Hebrew Sheol, the abode of the dead; cf 20, 13-14; Nm 16, 33.

1, 19: What you have seen, and what is happening, and what will happen afterwards: the three parts of the Book of Revelation, the vision (10-20), the situation in the seven churches (chs 2-3), and the events of chs 6-22.

wards. [20]† This is the secret meaning of the seven stars you saw in my right hand, and of the seven gold lampstands:
the seven stars are the angels of the seven churches, and the seven lamp-stands are the seven churches.

CHAPTER 2

To Ephesus.† [1]† "To the angel of the church in Ephesus, write this:
" 'The one who holds the seven stars
in his right hand and walks in the midst of the seven gold lampstands says this:
[2]† "I know your works, your labor, and your endurance, and that you cannot tolerate the wicked; you have tested those who call themselves apostles but are not, and discovered that they are impostors. [3] Moreover, you have endurance and have suffered for my name, and you have not grown weary. [4] Yet I hold this against you: you have lost the love you had at first. [5] Realize how far you have fallen. Repent, and do the works you did at first. Otherwise, I will come to you and remove your lamp-stand from its place, unless you repent.
[6]† But you have this in your favor: you hate the works of the Nicolaitans, which I also hate.
[7]*† " ' 'Whoever has ears ought to hear what the Spirit says to the churches. To the victor I will give the right to eat from the tree of life that is in the garden of God." '
To Smyrna.† [8]† "To the angel of the church in Smyrna, write this:
" 'The first and the last, who once died
but came to life, says this: [9]*† "I know your tribulation and poverty, but you are rich. I know the slander of those who claim to be Jews and are not, but rather are members of the assembly of Satan. [10] Do not be afraid of anything that you are going to suffer. Indeed, the devil will throw some of you into prison, that you may be tested, and you will face an ordeal for ten days. Remain faithful until death, and I will give you the crown of life.
[11]*† " ' 'Whoever has ears ought to hear what the Spirit says to the churches. The victor shall not be harmed by the second death." '
To Pergamum.† [12]† "To the angel of the church in Pergamum, write this:
" 'The one with the sharp two-edged sword says this: [13]† "I know that you live where Satan's throne is, and yet you hold fast to my name and have not denied your faith in me, not even in the days of Antipas, my faithful witness, who was martyred among you, where Satan lives. [14]*† Yet I have a few things

1, 20: Secret meaning: literally, "mystery." Angels: these are the presiding spirits of the seven churches. Angels were thought to be in charge of the physical world (cf 7, 1; 14, 18; 16, 5) and of nations (Dn 10, 13; 12, 1), communities (the seven churches), and individuals (Mt 18, 10; Acts 12, 15). Some have seen in the "angel" of each of the seven churches its pastor or a personification of the spirit of the congregation.

2, 1—3, 22: Each of the seven letters follows the same pattern: address; description of the exalted Christ; blame and/or praise for the church addressed; threat and/or admonition; final exhortation and promise to all Christians.

2, 1-7: The letter to Ephesus praises the members of the church there for their works and virtues, including discerning false teachers (2-3), but admonishes them to repent and return to their former devotion (4-5). It concludes with a reference to the Nicolaitans (see the note on 6) and a promise that the victor will have access to eternal life (7).

2, 1: Ephesus: this great ancient city had a population of ca. 250,000; it was the capital of the Roman province of Asia and the commercial, cultural, and religious center of Asia. The other six churches were located in the same province, situated roughly in a circle; they were selected for geographical reasons rather than for the size of their Christian communities. Walks in the midst of the seven gold lampstands: this signifies that Christ is always present in the church; see the note on 1, 4.

2, 2: Who call themselves . . . impostors: this refers to unauthorized and perverse missionaries; cf Acts 20, 29-30.

2, 6: Nicolaitans: these are perhaps the impostors of v 2; see the note on vv 14-15. There is little evidence for connecting this group with Nicolaus, the proselyte from Antioch, mentioned in Acts 6, 5.

2, 7: Victor: referring to any Christian individual who holds fast to the faith and does God's will in the face of persecution. The tree of life that is in the garden of God: this is a reference to the tree in the primeval paradise (Gn 2, 9); cf 22, 2.14.19. The decree excluding humanity from the tree of life has been revoked by Christ.

2, 8-11: The letter to Smyrna encourages the Christians in this important commercial center by telling them that although they are impoverished, they are nevertheless rich, and calls those Jews who are slandering them members of the assembly of Satan (9). There is no admonition; rather, the Christians are told that they will suffer much, even death, but the time of tribulation will be short compared to their eternal reward (10), and they will thus escape final damnation (11).

2, 8: Smyrna: modern Izmir, ca. thirty miles north of Ephesus, and the chief city of Lydia, with a temple to the goddess Roma. It was renowned for its loyalty to Rome, and it also had a large Jewish community very hostile toward Christians.

2, 9-10: The church in Smyrna was materially poor but spiritually rich. Accusations made by Jewish brethren there occasioned the persecution of Christians; cf Acts 14, 2.19; 17, 5.13.

2, 11: The second death: this refers to the eternal death, when sinners will receive their final punishment; cf 20, 6.14-15; 21, 8.

2, 12-17: The letter to Pergamum praises the members of the church for persevering in their faith in Christ even in the midst of a pagan setting and in face of persecution and martyrdom (13). But it admonishes them about members who advocate an unprincipled morality (14; cf 2 Pt 2, 15; Jude 11) and others who follow the teaching of the Nicolaitans (15; see the note there). It urges them to repent (16) and promises them the hidden manna and Christ's amulet (17).

2, 12: Pergamum: modern Bergama, ca. forty-five miles northeast of Smyrna, a center for various kinds of pagan worship. It also had an outstanding library (the word parchment is derived from its name).

2, 13: Satan's throne: the reference is to emperor worship and other pagan practices that flourished in Pergamum, perhaps specifically to the white marble altar erected and dedicated to Zeus by Eumenes II (197-160 B.C.).

2, 14-15: Like Balaam, the biblical prototype of the religious compromiser (cf Nm 25, 1-3; 31, 16; 2 Pt 2, 15; Jude 11), the Nicolaitans in Pergamum and Ephesus (6) accommodated their Christian faith to paganism. They abused the principle of liberty enunciated by Paul (1 Cor 9, 19-23).

against you. You have some people there who hold to the teaching of Balaam, who instructed Balak to put a stumbling block before the Israelites: to eat food sacrificed to idols and to play the harlot. 15 Likewise, you also have some people who hold to the teaching of [the] Nicolaitans. 16 Therefore, repent. Otherwise, I will come to you quickly and wage war against them with the sword of my mouth.

17*† "'"Whoever has ears ought to hear what the Spirit says to the churches. To the victor I shall give some of the hidden manna; I shall also give a white amulet upon which is inscribed a new name, which no one knows except the one who receives it."'

To Thyatira.† 18† "To the angel of the church in Thyatira, write this:

"'The Son of God, whose eyes are like a fiery flame and whose feet are like polished brass, says this: 19 "I know your works, your love, faith, service, and endurance, and that your last works are greater than the first. 20† Yet I hold this against you, that you tolerate the woman Jezebel, who calls herself a prophetess, who teaches and misleads my servants to play the harlot and to eat food sacrificed to idols. 21 I have given her time to repent, but she refuses to repent of her harlotry. 22 So I will cast her on a sickbed and plunge those who commit adultery with her into intense suffering unless they repent of her works. 23*† I will also put her children to death. Thus shall all the churches come to know that I am the searcher of hearts and minds and that I will give each of you what your works deserve. 24† But I say to the rest of you in Thyatira, who do not uphold this teaching and know nothing of the so-called deep secrets of Satan: on you I will place no further burden, 25 except that you must hold fast to what you have until I come.

26*†"'"To the victor, who keeps to my ways until the end,
I will give authority over the nations.
27 He will rule them with an iron rod.
Like clay vessels will they be smashed,
28 just as I received authority from my Father. And to him I will give the morning star.
29"'"Whoever has ears ought to hear what the Spirit says to the churches."'

CHAPTER 3

To Sardis.† 1† "To the angel of the church in Sardis, write this:

"'The one who has the seven spirits of God and the seven stars says this: "I know your works, that you have the reputation of being alive, but you are dead. 2 Be watchful and strengthen what is left, which is going to die, for I have not found your works complete in the sight of my God. 3* Remember then how you accepted and heard; keep it, and repent. If you are not watchful, I will come like a thief, and you will never know at what hour I will come upon you. 4* However, you have a few people in Sardis who have not soiled their garments; they will walk with me dressed in white, because they are worthy.

5*†"'"The victor will thus be dressed

4: 7, 13-14.
5: Ps 69, 29; Dn 12, 1 / Mt 10, 32.

†2, 17: The hidden manna: this is the food of life; cf Ps 78, 24-25. White amulet: literally, "white stone," on which was written a magical name, whose power could be tapped by one who knew the secret name. It is used here as a symbol of victory and joy; cf 3, 4-5. New name: this is a reference to the Christian's rebirth in Christ; cf 3, 12; 19, 12; Is 62, 2; 65, 15.

2, 18-29: The letter to Thyatira praises the progress in virtue of this small Christian community (19) but admonishes them for tolerating a false prophet who leads them astray (20). Her fate is sealed, but there is hope of repentance for her followers (21-22). Otherwise, they too shall die (23). They are warned against Satanic power or knowledge (24-25). Those who remain faithful will share in the messianic reign, having authority over nations (26-27), and will in fact possess Christ himself (28).

2, 18: Thyatira: modern Akhisar, ca. forty miles southeast of Pergamum, a frontier town famous for its workers' guilds (cf Acts 16, 14), membership in which may have involved festal meals in pagan temples.

2, 20: The scheming and treacherous Jezebel of old (cf 1 Kgs 19, 1-2; 21, 1-14; 2 Kgs 9, 22.30-34) introduced pagan customs into the religion of Israel; this new Jezebel was doing the same to Christianity.

2, 23: Children: spiritual descendants.

2, 24: The so-called deep secrets of Satan: literally, "the deep things of Satan," a scathing reference to the perverse teaching of the Nicolaitans (15).

2, 26-28: The Christian who perseveres in faith will share in Christ's messianic authority (cf Ps 2, 8-9) and resurrection victory over death, symbolized by the morning star; cf 22, 16.

2, 26: Who keeps to my ways: literally, "who keeps my works."

3, 1-6: The letter to Sardis does not praise the community but admonishes its members to watchfulness, mutual support, and repentance (2-3). The few who have remained pure and faithful will share Christ's victory and will be inscribed in the book of life (4-5).

3, 1: Sardis: this city, located ca. thirty miles southeast of Thyatira, was once the capital of Lydia, known for its wealth at the time of Croesus (6th century B.C.). Its citadel, reputed to be unassailable, was captured by surprise, first by Cyrus and later by Antiochus. The church is therefore warned to be on guard.

3, 5: In white: white is a sign of victory and joy as well as resurrection; see the note on 2, 17. The book of life: the roll in which the names of the redeemed are kept; cf 13, 8; 17, 8; 20, 12.15; 21, 27; Phil 4, 3; Dn 12, 1. They will be acknowledged by Christ in heaven; cf Mt 10, 32.

from the book of life but will acknowledge his name in the presence of my Father and of his angels.

what the Spirit says to the churches." '
To Philadelphia.† 7*† "To the angel of the church in Philadelphia, write this:

" 'The holy one, the true,
who holds the key of David,
who opens and no one shall close,
who closes and no one shall open,

says this:
8† " ' ' "I know your works (behold, I have left an open door before you, which no one can close). You have limited strength, and yet you have kept my word and have not denied my name.
9* Behold, I will make those of the assembly of Satan who claim to be Jews and are not, but are lying, behold I will make them come and fall prostrate at your feet, and they will realize that I love you. 10† Because you have kept my message of endurance, I will keep you safe in the time of trial that is going to come to the whole world to test
the inhabitants of the earth. 11* I am coming quickly. Hold fast to what you have, so that no one may take your crown.
12*† " ' ' "The victor I will make into a pillar in the temple of my God, and he will never leave it again. On him I will inscribe the name of my God and the name of the city of my God, the new Jerusalem, which comes down out of heaven from my God, as well as my new name.
13 " ' ' "Whoever has ears ought to hear what the Spirit says to the churches." '
To Laodicea.† 14*† "To the angel of the church in Laodicea, write this:
" 'The Amen, the faithful and true
witness, the source of God's creation, says this: 15† "I know your works; I know that you are neither cold nor hot.
I wish you were either cold or hot.
16† So, because you are lukewarm, neither hot nor cold, I will spit you out of my mouth. 17*† For you say, 'I am rich and affluent and have no need of anything,' and yet do not realize that you are wretched, pitiable, poor, blind, and naked. 18† I advise you to buy from me gold refined by fire so that you may be rich, and white garments to put on so that your shameful nakedness may not be exposed, and buy ointment to smear on your eyes so that you may see.
19* Those whom I love, I reprove and chastise. Be earnest, therefore, and repent.
20† " ' ' "Behold, I stand at the door and knock. If anyone hears my voice and opens the door, [then] I will enter his house and dine with him, and he with me. 21* I will give the victor the right to sit with me on my throne, as I myself
first won the victory and sit with my Father on his throne.

3, 7-13: The letter to Philadelphia praises the Christians there for remaining faithful even with their limited strength (8). Members of the assembly of Satan are again singled out (9; see 2, 9 above). There is no admonition; rather, the letter promises that they will be kept safe at the great trial (10-11) and that the victors will become pillars of the heavenly temple, upon which three names will be inscribed: God, Jerusalem, and Christ (12).

3, 7: Philadelphia: modern Alasehir, ca. thirty miles southeast of Sardis, founded by Attalus II Philadelphus of Pergamum to be an "open door" (8) for Greek culture; it was destroyed by an earthquake in A.D. 17. Rebuilt by money from the Emperor Tiberius, the city was renamed Neo-Caesarea; this may explain the allusions to "name" in v 12. Key of David: to the heavenly city of David (cf Is 22, 22), "the new Jerusalem" (12), over which Christ has supreme authority.

3, 8: An open door: opportunities for sharing and proclaiming the faith; cf Acts 14, 27; 1 Cor 16, 9; 2 Cor 2, 12.

3, 10: My message of endurance: this does not refer to a saying of Jesus about patience but to the example of Christ's patient endurance. The inhabitants of the earth: literally, "those who live on the earth." This expression, which also occurs in 6, 10; 8, 13; 11, 10; 13, 8.12.14; 17, 2.8, always refers to the pagan world.

3, 12: Pillar: this may be an allusion to the rebuilding of the city; see the note on v 7. New Jerusalem: it is described in 21, 10—22, 5.

3, 14-22: The letter to Laodicea reprimands the community for being lukewarm (15-16), but no particular faults are singled out. Their material prosperity is contrasted with their spiritual poverty, the violet tunics that were the source of their wealth with the white robe of baptism, and their famous eye ointment with true spiritual perception (17-18). But Christ's chastisement is inspired by love and a desire to be allowed to share the messianic banquet with his followers in the heavenly kingdom (19-21).

3, 14: Laodicea: ca. forty miles southeast of Philadelphia and ca. eighty miles east of Ephesus, a wealthy industrial and commercial center, with a renowned medical school. It exported fine woolen garments and was famous for its eye salves. It was so wealthy that it was proudly rebuilt without outside aid after the devastating earthquake of A.D. 60/61. The Amen: this is a divine title (cf Hebrew text of Is 65, 16) applied to Christ; cf 2 Cor 1, 20. Source of God's creation: literally, "the beginning of God's creation," a concept found also in Jn 1, 3; Col 1, 16-17; Heb 1, 2; cf Prv 8, 22-31; Wis 9, 1-2.

3, 15-16: Halfhearted commitment to the faith is nauseating to Christ; cf Rom 12, 11.

3, 16: Spit: literally, "vomit." The image is that of a beverage that should be either hot or cold. Perhaps there is an allusion to the hot springs of Hierapolis across the Lycus river from Laodicea, which would have been lukewarm by the time they reached Laodicea.

3, 17: Economic prosperity occasioned spiritual bankruptcy.

3, 18: Gold . . . fire: God's grace. White garments: symbol of an upright life; the city was noted for its violet/purple cloth. Ointment . . . eyes: to remove spiritual blindness; one of the city's exports was eye ointment (see the note on 3, 14).

3, 20: Christ invites all to the messianic banquet in heaven; cf Is 25, 6; Lk 14, 15; 22, 30.

III: GOD AND THE LAMB IN HEAVEN

CHAPTER 4

Vision of Heavenly Worship.† 1† After this I had a vision of an open door to heaven, and I heard the trumpetlike voice that had spoken to me before, saying, "Come up here and I will show you what must happen afterwards." 2† At once I was caught up in spirit. A throne was there in heaven, and on the throne sat 3 one whose appearance sparkled like jasper and carnelian. Around the throne was a halo as brilliant as an emerald. 4*† Surrounding the throne I saw twenty-four other thrones on which twenty-four elders sat, dressed in white garments and with gold crowns on their heads. 5† From the throne came flashes of lightning, rumblings, and peals of thunder. Seven flaming torches burned in front of the throne, which are the seven spirits of God. 6*† In front of the throne was something that resembled a sea of glass like crystal.

In the center and around the throne, there were four living creatures covered with eyes in front and in back. 7† The first creature resembled a lion, the second was like a calf, the third had a face like that of a human being, and the fourth looked like an eagle in flight. 8*† The four living creatures, each of them with six wings, were covered with eyes inside and out. Day and night they do not stop exclaiming:

"Holy, holy, holy is the Lord God almighty, who was, and who is, and who is to come."

9 Whenever the living creatures give glory and honor and thanks to the one who sits on the throne, who lives forever and ever, 10 the twenty-four elders fall down before the one who sits on the throne and worship him, who lives forever and ever. They throw down their crowns before the throne, exclaiming:

11* "Worthy are you, Lord our God,
to receive glory and honor and power,
for you created all things;
because of your will they came to be and were created."

CHAPTER 5

The Scroll and the Lamb.† 1† I saw a scroll in the right hand of the one who sat on the throne. It had writing on both sides and was sealed with seven seals. 2 Then I saw a mighty angel who proclaimed in a loud voice, "Who is worthy to open the scroll and break its seals?" 3 But no one in heaven or on earth or under the earth was able to open the scroll or to examine it. 4 I shed many tears because no one was found worthy to open the scroll or to examine it. 5*† One of the elders said to me, "Do not weep. The lion of the tribe of Judah, the root of David, has triumphed, enabling him to open the scroll with its seven seals."

6*† Then I saw standing in the midst of the throne and the four living creatures and the elders, a Lamb that seemed to have been slain. He had seven horns and seven eyes; these are

4, 1-11: The seer now describes a vision of the heavenly court in worship of God enthroned. He reverently avoids naming or describing God but pictures twenty-four elders in priestly and regal attire (4) and God's throne and its surroundings made of precious gems and other symbols that traditionally express the majesty of God (5-6). Universal creation is represented by the four living creatures (6-7). Along with the twenty-four elders, they praise God unceasingly in humble adoration (8-11).

4, 1: The ancients viewed heaven as a solid vault, entered by way of actual doors.

4, 2-8: Much of the imagery here is taken from Ez 1 and 10.

4, 4: Twenty-four elders: these represent the twelve tribes of Israel and the twelve apostles; cf 21, 12-14.

4, 5: Flashes of lightning, rumblings, and peals of thunder: as in other descriptions of God's appearance or activity; cf 8, 5; 11, 19; 16, 18; Ex 19, 16; Ez 1, 4.13. The seven spirits of God: the seven "angels of the presence" as in 8, 2 and Tb 12, 15.

4, 6: A sea of glass like crystal: an image adapted from Ez 1, 22-26. Four living creatures: these are symbols taken from Ez 1, 5-21; they are identified as cherubim in Ez 10, 20. Covered with eyes: these suggest God's knowledge and concern.

4, 7: Lion . . . calf . . . human being . . . eagle: these symbolize, respectively, what is noblest, strongest, wisest, and swiftest in creation. Calf: traditionally translated "ox," the Greek word refers to a heifer or young bull. Since the second century, these four creatures have been used as symbols of the evangelists Mark, Luke, Matthew, and John, respectively.

4, 8: Six wings: like the seraphim of Is 6, 2.

5, 1-14: The seer now describes a papyrus roll in God's right hand (1) with seven seals indicating the importance of the message. A mighty angel asks who is worthy to open the scroll, i.e., who can accomplish God's salvific plan (2). There is despair at first when no one in creation can do it (3-4). But the seer is comforted by an elder who tells him that Christ, called the lion of the tribe of Judah, has won the right to open it (5). Christ then appears as a Lamb, coming to receive the scroll from God (6-7), for which he is acclaimed as at a coronation (8-10). This is followed by a doxology of the angels (11-12) and then finally by the heavenly church united with all of creation (13-14).

5, 1: A scroll: a papyrus roll possibly containing a list of afflictions for sinners (cf Ez 2, 9-10) or God's plan for the world. Sealed with seven seals: it is totally hidden from all but God. Only the Lamb (7-9) has the right to carry out the divine plan.

5, 5: The lion of the tribe of Judah, the root of David: these are the messianic titles applied to Christ to symbolize his victory; cf 22, 16; Gn 49, 9; Is 11, 1.10; Mt 1, 1.

5, 6: Christ is the Paschal Lamb without blemish, whose blood saved the new Israel from sin and death; cf Ex 12; Is 53, 7; Jn 1, 29.36; Acts 8, 32; 1 Pt 1, 18-19. This is the main title for Christ in Rv, used twenty-eight times. Seven horns and seven eyes: Christ has the fullness (see the note on 1, 4) of power (horns) and knowledge (eyes); cf Zec 4, 10. [Seven] spirits: as in 1, 4; 3, 1; and 4, 5.

the [seven] spirits of God sent out into the whole world. 7 He came and received the scroll from the right hand of the one who sat on the throne.
8 When he took it, the four living creatures and the twenty-four elders fell down before the Lamb. Each of the elders held a harp and gold bowls filled with incense, which are the prayers of the holy ones. 9 They sang a new hymn:

"Worthy are you to receive the scroll
and to break open its seals, for you were slain and with your blood you purchased for God
those from every tribe and tongue, people and nation.
10* You made them a kingdom and priests for our God,
and they will reign on earth."

11*† I looked again and heard the voices of many angels who surrounded the throne and the living creatures and the elders. They were countless in number, 12 and they cried out in a loud voice:

"Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power and riches, wisdom and strength,
honor and glory and blessing."

13 Then I heard every creature in heaven and on earth and under the earth and in the sea, everything in the universe, cry out:

"To the one who sits on the throne
and to the Lamb
be blessing and honor, glory and might,
forever and ever."

14 The four living creatures answered,
"Amen," and the elders fell down and worshiped.

IV: THE SEVEN SEALS, TRUMPETS, AND PLAGUES, WITH INTERLUDES†

CHAPTER 6

The First Six Seals.† 1† Then I watched while the Lamb broke open the first of the seven seals, and I heard one of the four living creatures cry out in a voice like thunder, "Come forward."
2*† I looked, and there was a white horse, and its rider had a bow. He was given a crown, and he rode forth victorious to further his victories.

3 When he broke open the second seal,
I heard the second living creature cry out, "Come forward." 4*† Another horse came out, a red one. Its rider was given power to take peace away from the earth, so that people would slaughter one another. And he was given a huge sword.

5† When he broke open the third seal,
I heard the third living creature cry out,
"Come forward." I looked, and there was a black horse, and its rider held a scale in his hand. 6*† I heard what seemed to be a voice in the midst of the four living creatures. It said, "A ration of wheat costs a day's pay, and three rations of barley cost a day's pay. But do not damage the olive oil or the wine."

7 When he broke open the fourth seal,
I heard the voice of the fourth living creature cry out, "Come forward."
8*† I looked, and there was a pale green horse. Its rider was named Death, and Hades accompanied him. They were given authority over a quarter of the earth, to kill with sword, famine, and plague, and by means of the beasts of the earth.

9† When he broke open the fifth seal,
I saw underneath the altar the souls of those who had been slaughtered be-

6: Lv 26, 26; Ez 4, 16-17.
8: Ez 14, 21.

† 5, 11: Countless: literally, "100,000,000 plus 1,000,000," used by the author to express infinity.

6, 1—16, 21: A series of seven disasters now begins as each seal is broken (6, 1—8, 1), followed by a similar series as seven trumpets sound (8, 2—11, 19) and as seven angels pour bowls on the earth causing plagues (15, 1—16, 21). These gloomy sequences are interrupted by longer or shorter scenes suggesting the triumph of God and his witnesses (e.g., chs 7, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14).

6, 1-17: This chapter provides a symbolic description of the contents of the sealed scroll. The breaking of the first four seals reveals four riders. The first rider (of a white horse) is a conquering power (1-2), the second (red horse) a symbol of bloody war (3-4), the third (black horse) a symbol of famine (5-6), the fourth (pale green horse) a symbol of Death himself, accompanied by Hades (the netherworld) as his page (7-8). Verse 8b summarizes the role of all four riders. The breaking of the fifth seal reveals Christian martyrs in an attitude of sacrifice as blood poured out at the foot of an altar begging God for vindication, which will come only when their quota is filled; but they are given a white robe symbolic of victory (9-11). The breaking of the sixth seal reveals typical apocalyptic signs in the sky and the sheer terror of all people at the imminent divine judgment (12-17).

6, 1-8: The imagery is adapted from Zec 1, 8-10; 6, 1-8.

6, 2: White horse . . . bow: this may perhaps allude specifically to the Parthians on the eastern border of the Roman empire. Expert in the use of the bow, they constantly harassed the Romans and won a major victory in A.D. 62; see the note on 9, 13-21. But the Old Testament imagery typifies the history of oppression of God's people at all times.

6, 4: Huge sword: this is a symbol of war and violence; cf Ez 21, 14-17.

6, 5: Black horse: this is a symbol of famine, the usual accompaniment of war in antiquity; cf Lv 26, 26; Ez 4, 16-17. The scale is a symbol of shortage of food with a corresponding rise in price.

6, 6: A day's pay: literally, "a denarius," a Roman silver coin that constitutes a day's wage in Mt 20, 2. Because of the famine, food was rationed and sold at an exorbitant price. A liter of flour was considered a day's ration in the Greek historians Herodotus and Diogenes Laertius. Barley: food of the poor (Jn 6, 9.13; cf 2 Kgs 7, 1.16.18); it was also used to feed animals; cf 1 Kgs 5, 8. Do not damage: the olive and the vine are to be used more sparingly in time of famine.

6, 8: Pale green: symbol of death and decay; cf Ez 14, 21.

6, 9: The altar: this altar corresponds to the altar of holocausts in the temple in Jerusalem; see also 11, 1. Because of the witness . . . word of God: literally, "because of the word of God and the witness they had borne."

cause of the witness they bore to the word of God. 10† They cried out in a loud voice, "How long will it be, holy and true master, before you sit in judgment and avenge our blood on the inhabitants of the earth?" 11 Each of them was given a white robe, and they were told to be patient a little while longer until the number was filled of their fellow servants and brothers who were going to be killed as they had been.

12*† Then I watched while he broke open the sixth seal, and there was a great earthquake; the sun turned as black as dark sackcloth and the whole moon became like blood. 13† The stars in the sky fell to the earth like unripe figs shaken loose from the tree in a strong wind. 14*† Then the sky was divided like a torn scroll curling up, and every mountain and island was moved from its place. 15† The kings of the earth, the nobles, the military officers, the rich, the powerful, and every slave and free person hid themselves in caves and among mountain crags. 16* They cried out to the mountains and the rocks, "Fall on us and hide us from the face of the one who sits on the throne and from the wrath of the Lamb, 17† because the great day of their wrath has come and who can withstand it?"

CHAPTER 7†

The 144,000 Sealed. 1*† After this I saw four angels standing at the four corners of the earth, holding back the four winds of the earth so that no wind could blow on land or sea or against any tree. 2† Then I saw another angel come up from the East, holding the seal of the living God. He cried out in a loud voice to the four angels who were given power to damage the land and the sea, 3* "Do not damage the land or the sea or the trees until we put the seal on the foreheads of the servants of our God." 4*† I heard the number of those who had been marked with the seal, one hundred and forty-four thousand marked from every tribe of the Israelites: 5† twelve thousand were marked from the tribe of Judah, twelve thousand from the tribe of Reuben, twelve thousand from the tribe of Gad, 6 twelve thousand from the tribe of Asher, twelve thousand from the tribe of Naphtali, twelve thousand from the tribe of Manasseh, 7 twelve thousand from the tribe of Simeon, twelve thousand from the tribe of Levi, twelve thousand from the tribe of Issachar, 8 twelve thousand from the tribe of Zebulun, twelve thousand from the tribe of Joseph, and twelve thousand were marked from the tribe of Benjamin.

Triumph of the Elect. 9† After this I had a vision of a great multitude, which no one could count, from every nation, race, people, and tongue. They stood before the throne and before the Lamb, wearing white robes and holding palm branches in their hands. 10† They cried out in a loud voice:

> "Salvation comes from our God,
> who is seated on the throne,
> and from the Lamb."

11 All the angels stood around the throne and around the elders and the four living creatures. They prostrated themselves before the throne, worshiped God, 12 and exclaimed:

> "Amen. Blessing and glory, wisdom > and thanksgiving,
> honor, power, and might > be to our God forever and ever.
> Amen."

3: Ex 12, 7-14; Ez 9, 4; 2 Cor 1, 22; Eph 1, 13; 4, 30.
4: 14, 1.

6, 10: Holy and true master: Old Testament usage as well as the context indicates that this is addressed to God rather than to Christ.

6, 12-14: Symbolic rather than literal description of the cosmic upheavals attending the day of the Lord when the martyrs' prayer for vindication (10) would be answered; cf Am 8, 8-9; Is 34, 4; 50, 3; Jl 2, 10; 3, 3-4; Mt 24, 4-36; Mk 13, 5-37; Lk 21, 8-36.

6, 12: Dark sackcloth: for mourning, sackcloth was made from the skin of a black goat.

6, 13: Unripe figs: literally, "summer (or winter) fruit."

6, 14: Was divided: literally, "was split," like a broken papyrus roll torn in two, each half then curling up to form a roll on either side.

6, 15: Nobles: literally, "courtiers," "grandees." Military officers: literally, "commanders of 1,000 men," used in Josephus and other Greek authors as the equivalent of the Roman tribunus militum. The listing of various ranks of society represents the universality of terror at the impending doom.

6, 17: Their: this reading is attested in the best manuscripts, but the vast majority read "his" in reference to the wrath of the Lamb in the preceding verse.

7, 1-17: An interlude of two visions precedes the breaking of the seventh seal, just as two more will separate the sixth and seventh trumpets (ch 10). In the first vision (1-8), the elect receive the seal of the living God as protection against the coming cataclysm; cf 14, 1; Ez 9, 4-6; 2 Cor 1, 22; Eph 1, 13; 4, 30. The second vision (9-17) portrays the faithful Christians before God's throne to encourage those on earth to persevere to the end, even to death.

7, 1: The four corners of the earth: the earth is seen as a table or rectangular surface.

7, 2: East: literally, "rising of the sun." The east was considered the source of light and the place of paradise (Gn 2, 8). Seal: whatever was marked by the impression of one's signet ring belonged to that person and was under his protection.

7, 4-9: One hundred and forty-four thousand: the square of twelve (the number of Israel's tribes) multiplied by a thousand, symbolic of the new Israel (cf 14, 1-5; Gal 6, 16; Jas 1, 1) that embraces people from every nation, race, people, and tongue (9).

7, 5-8: Judah is placed first because of Christ; cf "the Lion of the tribe of Judah" (5, 5). Dan is omitted because of a later tradition that the antichrist would arise from it.

7, 9: White robes . . . palm branches: symbols of joy and victory; see the note on 3, 5.

7, 10: Salvation comes from: literally, "(let) salvation (be ascribed) to." A similar hymn of praise is found at the fall of the dragon (12, 10) and of Babylon (19, 1).

13 Then one of the elders spoke up and said to me, "Who are these wearing white robes, and where did they come from?" 14*† I said to him, "My lord, you are the one who knows." He said to me,
"These are the ones who have survived the time of great distress; they have washed their robes and made them
white in the blood of the Lamb.

15 "For this reason they stand before God's throne
and worship him day and night
in his temple.
The one who sits on the throne will shelter them.
16* They will not hunger or thirst any-
more,
nor will the sun or any heat strike
them.
17*†For the Lamb who is in the center of the throne will shepherd
them
and lead them to springs of life-giving water,
and God will wipe away every tear from their eyes."

CHAPTER 8†

The Seven Trumpets. 1*† When he broke open the seventh seal, there was silence in heaven for about half an hour. 2* And I saw that the seven angels who stood before God were given seven trumpets.

The Gold Censer. 3*† Another angel came and stood at the altar, holding a gold censer. He was given a great quantity of incense to offer, along with the prayers of all the holy ones, on the gold altar that was before the throne. 4 The smoke of the incense along with the prayers of the holy ones went up before God from the hand of the angel. 5* Then the angel took the censer, filled it with burning coals from the altar, and hurled it down to the earth. There were peals of thunder, rumblings, flashes of lightning, and an earthquake.

The First Four Trumpets. 6* The seven angels who were holding the seven trumpets prepared to blow them.

7† When the first one blew his trumpet, there came hail and fire mixed with blood, which was hurled down to the earth. A third of the land was burned up, along with a third of the trees and all green grass.

8*† When the second angel blew his trumpet, something like a large burning mountain was hurled into the sea. A third of the sea turned to blood, 9† a third of the creatures living in the sea died, and a third of the ships were wrecked.

10* When the third angel blew his trumpet, a large star burning like a torch fell from the sky. It fell on a third of the rivers and on the springs of water. 11*† The star was called "Wormwood," and a third of all the water turned to wormwood. Many people died from this water, because it was made bitter.

12* When the fourth angel blew his trumpet, a third of the sun, a third of the moon, and a third of the stars were struck, so that a third of them became dark. The day lost its light for a third of the time, as did the night.

13† Then I looked again and heard an eagle flying high overhead cry out in a loud voice, "Woe! Woe! Woe to the inhabitants of the earth from the rest of the trumpet blasts that the three angels are about to blow!"

CHAPTER 9

The Fifth Trumpet. 1*† Then the fifth angel blew his trumpet, and I saw

† 7, 14: Time of great distress: fierce persecution by the Romans; cf Introduction.

7, 17: Life-giving water: literally, "the water of life," God's grace, which flows from Christ; cf 21, 6; 22, 1.17; Jn 4, 10.14.

8, 1-13: The breaking of the seventh seal produces at first silence and then seven symbolic disasters, each announced by a trumpet blast, of which the first four form a unit as did the first four seals. A minor liturgy (3-5) is enclosed by a vision of seven angels (2.6). Then follow the first four trumpet blasts, each heralding catastrophes modeled on the plagues of Egypt affecting the traditional prophetic third (cf Ez 5, 12) of the earth, sea, fresh water, and stars (7-12). Finally, there is a vision of an eagle warning of the last three trumpet blasts (13).

8, 1: Silence in heaven: as in Zep 1, 7, a prelude to the eschatological woes that are to follow; cf Introduction.

8, 3: Altar: there seems to be only one altar in the heavenly temple, corresponding to the altar of holocausts in 6, 9, and here to the altar of incense in Jerusalem; cf also 9, 13; 11, 1; 14, 18; 16, 7.

8, 7: This woe resembles the seventh plague of Egypt (Ex 9, 23-24); cf Jl 3, 3.

8, 8-11: The background of these two woes is the first plague of Egypt (Ex 7, 20-21).

8, 9: Creatures living in the sea: literally, "creatures in the sea that had souls."

8, 11: Wormwood: an extremely bitter and malignant plant symbolizing the punishment God inflicts on the ungodly; cf Jer 9, 12-14; 23, 15.

8, 13: Woe! Woe! Woe: each of the three woes pronounced by the angel represents a separate disaster; cf 9, 12; 11, 14. The final woe, released by the seventh trumpet blast, includes the plagues of ch 16.

9, 1-12: The fifth trumpet heralds a woe containing elements from the eighth and ninth plagues of Egypt (Ex 10, 12-15.21-23) but specifically reminiscent of the invasion of locusts in Jl 1, 4—2, 10.

9, 1: A star: late Judaism represented fallen powers as stars (Is 14, 12-15; Lk 10, 18; Jude 13), but a comparison with 1, 20 and 20, 1 suggests that here it means an angel. The passage to the abyss: referring to Sheol, the netherworld, where Satan and the fallen angels are kept for a thousand years, to be cast afterwards into the pool of fire; cf 20, 7-10. The abyss was conceived of as a vast subterranean cavern full of fire. Its only link with the earth was a kind of passage or mine shaft, which was kept locked.

a star that had fallen from the sky to the earth. It was given the key for the passage to the abyss. 2* It opened the passage to the abyss, and smoke came up out of the passage like smoke from a huge furnace. The sun and the air were darkened by the smoke from the passage. 3*† Locusts came out of the smoke onto the land, and they were given the same power as scorpions of the earth. 4 They were told not to harm the grass of the earth or any plant or any tree, but only those people who did not have the seal of God on their foreheads. 5† They were not allowed to kill them but only to torment them for five months; the torment they inflicted was like that of a scorpion when it stings a person. 6* During that time these people will seek death but will not find it, and they will long to die but death will escape them.

7*† The appearance of the locusts was like that of horses ready for battle. On their heads they wore what looked like crowns of gold; their faces were like human faces, 8* and they had hair like women's hair. Their teeth were like lions' teeth, 9 and they had chests like iron breastplates. The sound of their wings was like the sound of many horse-drawn chariots racing into battle. 10 They had tails like scorpions, with stingers; with their tails they had power to harm people for five months. 11† They had as their king the angel of the abyss, whose name in Hebrew is Abaddon and in Greek Apollyon.

12 The first woe has passed, but there are two more to come.

The Sixth Trumpet.† 13*† Then the sixth angel blew his trumpet, and I heard a voice coming from the [four] horns of the gold altar before God, 14† telling the sixth angel who held the trumpet, "Release the four angels who are bound at the banks of the great river Euphrates." 15 So the four angels were released, who were prepared for this hour, day, month, and year to kill a third of the human race. 16 The number of cavalry troops was two hundred million; I heard their number. 17*† Now in my vision this is how I saw the horses and their riders. They wore red, blue, and yellow breastplates, and the horses' heads were like heads of lions, and out of their mouths came fire, smoke, and sulfur. 18 By these three plagues of fire, smoke, and sulfur that came out of their mouths a third of the human race was killed. 19 For the power of the horses is in their mouths and in their tails; for their tails are like snakes, with heads that inflict harm.

20*† The rest of the human race, who were not killed by these plagues, did not repent of the works of their hands, to give up the worship of demons and idols made from gold, silver, bronze, stone, and wood, which cannot see or hear or walk. 21 Nor did they repent of their murders, their magic potions, their unchastity, or their robberies.

CHAPTER 10

The Angel with the Small Scroll.† 1† Then I saw another mighty angel come down from heaven wrapped in a cloud, with a halo around his head; his face was like the sun and his feet were like pillars of fire. 2† In his hand he held a small scroll that had been opened. He placed his right foot on the sea and his left foot on the land, 3* and then he cried out in a loud voice as a lion roars. When he cried out, the seven thunders raised their voices, too. 4 When the seven thunders had spoken, I was about to write it down; but I heard a voice from heaven say, "Seal up what the seven thunders have spoken, but do not write it down." 5 Then the angel I saw standing on the sea and on the land raised his right hand to heaven 6*† and swore by the 9, 3: Scorpions: their poisonous sting was proverbial; Ez 2, 6; Lk 11, 12.

9, 5: For five months: more or less corresponding to the life-span of locusts.

9, 7-10: Eight characteristics are listed to show the eschatological and diabolical nature of these locusts.

9, 11: Abaddon: Hebrew (more precisely, Aramaic) for destruction or ruin. Apollyon: Greek for the "Destroyer."

9, 13-21: The sixth trumpet heralds a woe representing another diabolical attack symbolized by an invasion by the Parthians living east of the Euphrates; see the note on 6, 2. At the appointed time (15), the frightful horses act as God's agents of judgment. The imaginative details are not to be taken literally; see Introduction and the note on 6, 12-14.

9, 13: [Four]: many Greek manuscripts and versions omit the word. The horns were situated at the four corners of the altar (Ex 27, 2; 30, 2-3); see the note on 8, 3.

9, 14-15: The four angels: they are symbolic of the destructive activity that will be extended throughout the universe.

9, 17: Blue: literally, "hyacinth-colored." Yellow: literally, "sulfurous."

9, 20: The works of their hands: i.e., the gods their hands had made.

10, 1—11, 14: An interlude in two scenes (10, 1-11 and 11, 1-14) precedes the sounding of the seventh trumpet; cf 7, 1-17. The first vision describes an angel astride sea and land like a colossus, with a small scroll open, the contents of which indicate that the end is imminent (ch 10). The second vision is of the measuring of the temple and of two witnesses, whose martyrdom means that the kingdom of God is about to be inaugurated.

10, 1-4: The seven thunders: God's voice announcing judgment and doom; cf Ps 29, 3-9, where thunder, as the voice of Yahweh, is praised seven times.

10, 2: He placed . . . on the land: this symbolizes the universality of the angel's message, as does the figure of the small scroll open to be read.

10, 6: Heaven and earth and sea: the three parts of the universe. No more delay: cf Dn 12, 7; Hb 2, 3.

one who lives forever and ever, who created heaven and earth and sea and all that is in them, "There shall be no more delay. 7*† At the time when you hear the seventh angel blow his trumpet, the mysterious plan of God shall be fulfilled, as he promised to his servants the prophets."

8 Then the voice that I had heard from heaven spoke to me again and said, "Go, take the scroll that lies open in the hand of the angel who is standing on the sea and on the land." 9† So I went up to the angel and told him to give me the small scroll. He said to me, "Take and swallow it. It will turn your stomach sour, but in your mouth it will taste as sweet as honey." 10* I took the small scroll from the angel's hand and swallowed it. In my mouth it was like sweet honey, but when I had eaten it, my stomach turned sour. 11† Then someone said to me, "You must prophesy again about many peoples, nations, tongues, and kings."

CHAPTER 11

The Two Witnesses. 1*† Then I was given a measuring rod like a staff and I was told, "Come and measure the temple of God and the altar, and count those who are worshiping in it. 2† But exclude the outer court of the temple; do not measure it, for it has been handed over to the Gentiles, who will trample the holy city for forty-two months. 3† I will commission my two witnesses to prophesy for those twelve hundred and sixty days, wearing sackcloth." 4*† These are the two olive trees and the two lampstands that stand before the Lord of the earth. 5† If anyone wants to harm them, fire comes out of their mouths and devours their enemies. In this way, anyone wanting to harm them is sure to be slain. 6* They have the power to close up the sky so that no rain can fall during the time of their prophesying. They also have power to turn water into blood and to afflict the earth with any plague as often as they wish.

7*† When they have finished their testimony, the beast that comes up from the abyss will wage war against them and conquer them and kill them. 8† Their corpses will lie in the main street of the great city, which has the symbolic names "Sodom" and "Egypt," where indeed their Lord was crucified. 9† Those from every people, tribe, tongue, and nation will gaze on their corpses for three and a half days, and they will not allow their corpses to be buried. 10 The inhabitants of the earth will gloat over them and be glad and exchange gifts because these two prophets tormented the inhabitants of the earth. 11* But after the three and a half days, a breath of life from God entered them. When they stood on their feet, great fear fell on those who saw them. 12* Then they heard a loud voice from heaven say to them, "Come up here." So they went up to heaven in a cloud as their enemies looked on. 13† At that moment there was a great earthquake, and a tenth of the city fell in ruins. Seven thousand people were killed during the earthquake; the rest were terrified and gave glory to the God of heaven.

14 The second woe has passed, but the third is coming soon.

10, 7: The mysterious plan of God: literally, "the mystery of God," the end of the present age when the forces of evil will be put down (17, 1—19, 4.11-21; 20, 7-10; cf 2 Thes 2, 6-12; Rom 16, 25-26), and the establishment of the reign of God when all creation will be made new (21, 1—22, 5).

10, 9-10: The small scroll was sweet because it predicted the final victory of God's people; it was sour because it also announced their sufferings. Cf Ez 3, 1-3.

10, 11: This further prophecy is contained in chs 12-22.

11, 1: The temple and altar symbolize the new Israel; see the note on 7, 4-9. The worshipers represent Christians. The measuring of the temple (cf Ez 40, 3—42, 20; 47, 1-12; Zec 2, 5-6) suggests that God will preserve the faithful remnant (cf Is 4, 2-3) who remain true to Christ (14, 1-5).

11, 2: The outer court: the Court of the Gentiles. Trample . . . forty-two months: the duration of the vicious persecution of the Jews by Antiochus IV Epiphanes (Dn 7, 25; 12, 7); this persecution of three and a half years (half of seven, counted as 1260 days in 3; 12, 6) became the prototype of periods of trial for God's people; cf Lk 4, 25; Jas 5, 17. The reference here is to the persecution by the Romans; cf Introduction.

11, 3: The two witnesses, wearing sackcloth symbolizing lamentation and repentance, cannot readily be identified. Do they represent Moses and Elijah, or the Law and the Prophets, or Peter and Paul? Most probably they refer to the universal church, especially the Christian martyrs, fulfilling the office of witness (two because of Dt 19, 15; cf Mk 6, 7; Jn 8, 17).

11, 4: The two olive trees and the two lampstands: the martyrs who stand in the presence of the Lord; the imagery is taken from Zec 4, 1-3.11-14, where the olive trees refer to Zerubbabel and Joshua.

11, 5-6: These details are derived from stories of Moses, who turned water into blood (Ex 7, 17-20), and of Elijah, who called down fire from heaven (1 Kgs 18, 36-40; 2 Kgs 1, 10) and closed up the sky for three years (1 Kgs 17, 1; cf 18, 1).

11, 7: The beast . . . from the abyss: the Roman emperor Nero, who symbolizes the forces of evil, or the antichrist (13, 1.8; 17, 8); cf Dn 7, 2-8.11-12.19-22 and Introduction.

11, 8: The great city: this expression is used constantly in Rv for Babylon, i.e., Rome; cf 14, 8; 16, 19; 17, 18; 18, 2.10.21. "Sodom" and "Egypt": symbols of immorality (cf Is 1, 10) and oppression of God's people (cf Ex 1, 11-14). Where indeed their Lord was crucified: not the geographical but the symbolic Jerusalem that rejects God and his witnesses, i.e., Rome, called Babylon in chs 16-18; see the note on 17, 9 and Introduction.

11, 9-12: Over the martyrdom (7) of the two witnesses, now called prophets, the ungodly rejoice for three and a half days, a symbolic period of time; see the note on v 2. Afterwards they go in triumph to heaven, as did Elijah (2 Kgs 2, 11).

11, 13: Seven thousand people: a symbolic sum to represent all social classes (seven) and large numbers (thousands); cf Introduction.

The Seventh Trumpet.† 15 Then the seventh angel blew his trumpet. There were loud voices in heaven, saying, "The kingdom of the world now belongs to our Lord and to his Anointed, and he will reign forever and ever." 16 The twenty-four elders who sat on their thrones before God prostrated themselves and worshiped God 17 and said:

"We give thanks to you, Lord God almighty,
who are and who were.
For you have assumed your great power
and have established your reign.
18* The nations raged,
but your wrath has come,
and the time for the dead to be judged,
and to recompense your servants, the prophets,
and the holy ones and those who fear your name,
the small and the great alike,
and to destroy those who destroy the earth."

19 Then God's temple in heaven was opened, and the ark of his covenant could be seen in the temple. There were flashes of lightning, rumblings, and peals of thunder, an earthquake, and a violent hailstorm.

CHAPTER 12

The Woman and the Dragon.† 1*† A great sign appeared in the sky, a woman clothed with the sun, with the moon under her feet, and on her head a crown of twelve stars. 2† She was with child and wailed aloud in pain as she labored to give birth. 3*† Then another sign appeared in the sky; it was a huge red dragon, with seven heads and ten horns, and on its heads were seven diadems. 4* Its tail swept away a third of the stars in the sky and hurled them down to the earth. Then the dragon stood before the woman about to give birth, to devour her child when she gave birth. 5*† She gave birth to a son, a male child, destined to rule all the nations with an iron rod. Her child was caught up to God and his throne. 6† The woman herself fled into the desert where she had a place prepared by God, that there she might be taken care of for twelve hundred and sixty days.

7† Then war broke out in heaven; Michael and his angels battled against the dragon. The dragon and its angels fought back, 8 but they did not prevail and there was no longer any place for them in heaven. 9*† The huge dragon, the ancient serpent, who is called the Devil and Satan, who deceived the whole world, was thrown down to earth, and its angels were thrown down with it.

10† Then I heard a loud voice in heaven say:
"Now have salvation and power come,
and the kingdom of our God
and the authority of his Anointed.
For the accuser of our brothers is cast out,
who accuses them before our God day and night.
11 They conquered him by the blood of the Lamb

11, 15-19: The seventh trumpet proclaims the coming of God's reign after the victory over diabolical powers; see the note on 10, 7.

12, 1—14, 20: This central section of Rv portrays the power of evil, represented by a dragon, in opposition to God and his people. First, the dragon pursues the woman about to give birth, but her son is saved and "caught up to God and his throne" (12, 5). Then Michael and his angels cast the dragon and his angels out of heaven (12, 7-9). After this, the dragon tries to attack the boy indirectly by attacking members of his church (12, 13-18). A beast, symbolizing the Roman empire, then becomes the dragon's agent, mortally wounded but restored to life and worshiped by all the world (13, 1-10). A second beast arises from the land, symbolizing the antichrist, which leads people astray by its prodigies to idolize the first beast (13, 11-18). This is followed by a vision of the Lamb and his faithful ones, and the proclamation of imminent judgment upon the world in terms of the wine of God's wrath (14, 1-20).

12, 1-6: The woman adorned with the sun, the moon, and the stars (images taken from Gn 37, 9-10) symbolizes God's people in the Old and the New Testament. The Israel of old gave birth to the Messiah (5) and then became the new Israel, the church, which suffers persecution by the dragon (6.13-17); cf Is 50, 1; 66, 7; Jer 50, 12. This corresponds to a widespread myth throughout the ancient world that a goddess pregnant with a savior was pursued by a horrible monster; by miraculous intervention, she bore a son who then killed the monster.

12, 2: Because of Eve's sin, the woman gives birth in distress and pain (Gn 3, 16; cf Is 66, 7-14).

12, 3: Huge red dragon: the Devil or Satan (cf 9; 20, 2), symbol of the forces of evil, a mythical monster known also as Leviathan (Ps 74, 13-14) or Rahab (Jb 26, 12-13; Ps 89, 11). Seven diadems: these are symbolic of the fullness of the dragon's sovereignty over the kingdoms of this world; cf Christ with many diadems (19, 12).

12, 5: Rule . . . iron rod: fulfilled in 19, 15; cf Ps 2, 9. Was caught up to God: reference to Christ's ascension.

12, 6: God protects the persecuted church in the desert, the traditional Old Testament place of refuge for the afflicted, according to the typology of the Exodus; see the note on 11, 2.

12, 7-12: Michael, mentioned only here in Rv, wins a victory over the dragon. A hymn of praise follows.

12, 7: Michael: the archangel, guardian and champion of Israel; cf Dn 10, 13.21; 12, 1; Jude 9. In Hebrew, the name Michael means "Who can compare with God?"; cf 13, 4.

12, 9: The ancient serpent: who seduced Eve (Gn 3, 1-6), mother of the human race; cf 20, 2; Eph 6, 11-12. Was thrown down: allusion to the expulsion of Satan from heaven; cf Lk 10, 18.

12, 10: The accuser: the meaning of the Hebrew word "Satan," found in v 9; Jb 1—2; Zec 3, 1; 1 Chr 21, 1; he continues to accuse Christ's disciples.

and by the word of their testimony;
love for life did not deter them from death.
12 Therefore, rejoice, you heavens,
and you who dwell in them.
But woe to you, earth and sea,
for the Devil has come down to you in great fury,
for he knows he has but a short time."

13* When the dragon saw that it had been thrown down to the earth, it pursued the woman who had given birth to the male child. 14*† But the woman was given the two wings of the great eagle, so that she could fly to her place in the desert, where, far from the serpent, she was taken care of for a year, two years, and a half-year. 15† The serpent, however, spewed a torrent of water out of his mouth after the woman to sweep her away with the current. 16 But the earth helped the woman and opened its mouth and swallowed the flood that the dragon spewed out of its mouth. 17*† Then the dragon became angry with the woman and went off to wage war against the rest of her offspring, those who keep God's commandments and bear witness to Jesus. 18† It took its position on the sand of the sea.

The First Beast.† 1* Then I saw a beast come out of the sea with ten horns and seven heads; on its horns were ten diadems, and on its heads blasphemous name[s]. 2*† The beast I saw was like a leopard, but it had feet like a bear's, and its mouth was like the mouth of a lion. To it the dragon gave its own power and throne, along with great authority. 3† I saw that one of its heads seemed to have been mortally wounded, but this mortal wound was healed. Fascinated, the whole world followed after the beast. 4† They worshiped the dragon because it gave its authority to the beast; they also worshiped the beast and said, "Who can compare with the beast or who can fight against it?"

5*† The beast was given a mouth uttering proud boasts and blasphemies, and it was given authority to act for forty-two months. 6 It opened its mouth to utter blasphemies against God, blaspheming his name and his dwelling and those who dwell in heaven. 7* It was also allowed to wage war against the holy ones and conquer them, and it was granted authority over every tribe, people, tongue, and nation. 8* All the inhabitants of the earth will worship it, all whose names were not written from the foundation of the world in the book of life, which belongs to the Lamb who was slain.

9* Whoever has ears ought to hear these words.
10* Anyone destined for captivity goes into captivity.
Anyone destined to be slain by the sword shall be slain by the sword.

Such is the faithful endurance of the holy ones.

The Second Beast.† 11 Then I saw another beast come up out of the earth; it had two horns like a lamb's but spoke like a dragon. 12 It wielded all the authority of the first beast in its sight and made the earth and its inhabitants worship the first beast, whose mortal wound had been healed. 13* It performed great signs, even making fire come down from heaven to earth in the sight of everyone. 14 It deceived the inhabitants of the earth with the signs it was allowed to perform in the sight of the first beast, telling them to make an image for the beast who had been wounded by the sword and revived. 15* It was then per-

† 12, 14: Great eagle: symbol of the power and swiftness of divine help; cf Ex 19, 4; Dt 32, 11; Is 40, 31.

12, 15: The serpent is depicted as the sea monster; cf 13, 1; Is 27, 1; Ez 32, 2; Ps 74, 13-14.

12, 17: Although the church is protected by God's special providence (16), the individual Christian is to expect persecution and suffering.

12, 18: It took its position: many later manuscripts and versions read "I took my position," thus connecting the sentence to the following paragraph.

13, 1-10: This wild beast, combining features of the four beasts in Dn 7, 2-28, symbolizes the Roman empire; the seven heads represent the emperors; see the notes on 17, 10 and 17, 12-14. The blasphemous names are the divine titles assumed by the emperors.

13, 2: Satan (12, 9), the prince of this world (Jn 12, 31), commissioned the beast to persecute the church (5-7).

13, 3: This may be a reference to the popular legend that Nero would come back to life and rule again after his death (which occurred in A.D. 68 from a self-inflicted stab wound in the throat); cf v 14; 17, 8. Domitian (A.D. 81-96) embodied all the cruelty and impiety of Nero. Cf Introduction.

13, 4: Worshiped the beast: allusion to emperor worship, which Domitian insisted upon and ruthlessly enforced. Who can compare with the beast: perhaps a deliberate parody of the name Michael; see the note on 12, 7.

13, 5-6: Domitian, like Antiochus IV Epiphanes (Dn 7, 8.11.25), demanded that he be called by divine titles such as "our lord and god" and "Jupiter." See the note on 11, 2.

13, 5: Forty-two months: this is the same duration as the profanation of the holy city (11, 2), the prophetic mission of the two witnesses (11, 3), and the retreat of the woman into the desert (12, 6.14).

13, 11-18: The second beast is described in terms of the false prophets (cf 16, 13; 19, 20; 20, 10) who accompany the false messiahs (the first beast); cf Mt 24, 24; Mk 13, 22; 2 Thes 2, 9; cf also Dt 13, 2-4. Christians had either to worship the emperor and his image or to suffer martyrdom.

mitted to breathe life into the beast's image, so that the beast's image could speak and [could] have anyone who did not worship it put to death. [16]* It forced all the people, small and great, rich and poor, free and slave, to be given a stamped image on their right hands or their foreheads, [17] so that no one could buy or sell except one who had the stamped image of the beast's name or the number that stood for its name.

[18]*† Wisdom is needed here; one who understands can calculate the number of the beast, for it is a number that stands for a person. His number is six hundred and sixty-six.

CHAPTER 14

The Lamb's Companions.† [1]† Then I looked and there was the Lamb standing on Mount Zion, and with him a hundred and forty-four thousand who had his name and his Father's name written on their foreheads. [2] I heard a sound from heaven like the sound of rushing water or a loud peal of thunder. The sound I heard was like that of harpists playing their harps. [3] They were singing [what seemed to be] a new hymn before the throne, before the four living creatures and the elders. No one could learn this hymn except the hundred and forty-four thousand who had been ransomed from the earth. [4]† These are they who were not defiled with women; they are virgins and these are the ones who follow the Lamb wherever he goes. They have been ransomed as the first-fruits of the human race for God and the Lamb. [5]† On their lips no deceit has been found; they are unblemished.

The Three Angels.† [6]† Then I saw another angel flying high overhead, with everlasting good news to announce to those who dwell on earth, to every nation, tribe, tongue, and people. [7]* He said in a loud voice, "Fear God and give him glory, for his time has come to sit in judgment. Worship him who made heaven and earth and sea and springs of water."

[8]*† A second angel followed, saying:

> "Fallen, fallen is Babylon the great,
> that made all the nations drink the wine of her licentious passion."

[9] A third angel followed them and said in a loud voice, "Anyone who worships the beast or its image, or accepts its mark on forehead or hand, [10]† will also drink the wine of God's fury, poured full strength into the cup of his wrath, and will be tormented in burning sulfur before the holy angels and before the Lamb. [11]* The smoke of the fire that torments them will rise forever and ever, and there will be no relief day or night for those who worship the beast or its image or accept the mark of its name." [12]*† Here is what sustains the holy ones who keep God's commandments and their faith in Jesus.

[13]*† I heard a voice from heaven say, "Write this: Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from now on." "Yes," said the Spirit, "let them find rest from their labors, for their works accompany them."

13, 18: Each of the letters of the alphabet in Hebrew as well as in Greek has a numerical value. Many possible combinations of letters will add up to 666, and many candidates have been nominated for this infamous number. The most likely is the emperor Caesar Nero (see the note on 13, 3), the Greek form of whose name in Hebrew letters gives the required sum. (The Latin form of this name equals 616, which is the reading of a few manuscripts.) Nero personifies the emperors who viciously persecuted the church. It has also been observed that "6" represents imperfection, falling short of the perfect number "7," and is represented here in a triple or superlative form.

14, 1-5: Now follows a tender and consoling vision of the Lamb and his companions.

14, 1: Mount Zion: in Jerusalem, the traditional place where the true remnant, the Israel of faith, is to be gathered in the messianic reign; cf 2 Kgs 19, 30-31; Jl 3, 5; Ob 17; Mi 4, 6-8; Zep 3, 12-20. A hundred and forty-four thousand: see the note on 7, 4-9. His Father's name . . . foreheads: in contrast to the pagans who were marked with the name or number of the beast (13, 16-17).

14, 4: Virgins: metaphorically, because they never indulged in any idolatrous practices, which are considered in the Old Testament to be adultery and fornication (2, 14-15.20-22; 17, 1-6; cf Ez 16, 1-58; 23, 1-49). The parallel passages (7, 3; 22, 4) indicate that the 144,000 whose foreheads are sealed represent all Christian people.

14, 5: No deceit: because they did not deny Christ or do homage to the beast. Lying is characteristic of the opponents of Christ (Jn 8, 44), but the Suffering Servant spoke no falsehood (Is 53, 9; 1 Pt 2, 22). Unblemished: a cultic term taken from the vocabulary of sacrificial ritual.

14, 6-13: Three angels proclaim imminent judgment on the pagan world, calling all peoples to worship God the creator. Babylon (Rome) will fall, and its supporters will be tormented forever.

14, 6: Everlasting good news: that God's eternal reign is about to begin; see the note on 10, 7.

14, 8: This verse anticipates the lengthy dirge over Babylon (Rome) in 18, 1—19, 4. The oracle of Is 21, 9 to Babylon is applied here.

14, 10-11: The wine of God's fury: image taken from Is 51, 17; Jer 25, 15-16; 49, 12; 51, 7; Ez 23, 31-34. Eternal punishment in the fiery pool of burning sulfur (or "fire and brimstone"; cf Gn 19, 24) is also reserved for the Devil, the beast, and the false prophet (19, 20; 20, 10; 21, 8).

14, 12: In addition to faith in Jesus, the seer insists upon the necessity and value of works, as in 2, 23; 20, 12-13; 22, 12; cf Mt 16, 27; Rom 2, 6.

14, 13: See the note on 1, 3. According to Jewish thought, people's actions followed them as witnesses before the court of God.

The Harvest of the Earth.† 14* Then I looked and there was a white cloud, and sitting on the cloud one who looked like a son of man, with a gold crown on his head and a sharp sickle in his hand. 15* Another angel came out of the temple, crying out in a loud voice to the one sitting on the cloud, "Use your sickle and reap the harvest, for the time to reap has come, because the earth's harvest is fully ripe." 16 So the one who was sitting on the cloud swung his sickle over the earth, and the earth was harvested.

17 Then another angel came out of the temple in heaven who also had a sharp sickle. 18† Then another angel [came] from the altar, [who] was in charge of the fire, and cried out in a loud voice to the one who had the sharp sickle, "Use your sharp sickle and cut the clusters from the earth's vines, for its grapes are ripe." 19* So the angel swung his sickle over the earth and cut the earth's vintage. He threw it into the great wine press of God's fury. 20† The wine press was trodden outside the city and blood poured out of the wine press to the height of a horse's bridle for two hundred miles.

CHAPTER 15

The Seven Last Plagues.† 1† Then I saw in heaven another sign, great and awe-inspiring: seven angels with the seven last plagues, for through them God's fury is accomplished.

2*† Then I saw something like a sea of glass mingled with fire. On the sea of glass were standing those who had won the victory over the beast and its image and the number that signified its name. They were holding God's harps, 3*† and they sang the song of Moses, the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb:

"Great and wonderful are your works,
Lord God almighty.
Just and true are your ways,
O king of the nations.
4* Who will not fear you, Lord,
or glorify your name?
For you alone are holy.
All the nations will come
and worship before you,
for your righteous acts have been revealed."

5† After this I had another vision. The temple that is the heavenly tent of testimony opened, 6* and the seven angels with the seven plagues came out of the temple. They were dressed in clean white linen, with a gold sash around their chests. 7 One of the four living creatures gave the seven angels seven gold bowls filled with the fury of God, who lives forever and ever. 8* Then the temple became so filled with the smoke from God's glory and might that no one could enter it until the seven plagues of the seven angels had been accomplished.

CHAPTER 16

The Seven Bowls.† 1 I heard a loud voice speaking from the temple to the seven angels, "Go and pour out the seven bowls of God's fury upon the earth."

2† The first angel went and poured out his bowl on the earth. Festering and ugly sores broke out on those who had the mark of the beast or worshiped its image.

3† The second angel poured out his bowl on the sea. The sea turned to blood like that from a corpse; every creature living in the sea died.

4* The third angel poured out his bowl on the rivers and springs of water. These also turned to blood. 5* Then I

14, 14-20: The reaping of the harvest symbolizes the gathering of the elect in the final judgment, while the reaping and treading of the grapes symbolizes the doom of the ungodly (cf Jl 4, 12-13; Is 63, 1-6) that will come in 19, 11-21.

14, 18: Altar: there was only one altar in the heavenly temple; see the notes above on 6, 9; 8, 3; 11, 1.

14, 20: Two hundred miles: literally sixteen hundred stades. The stadion, a Greek unit of measurement, was about 607 feet in length, approximately the length of a furlong.

15, 1—16, 21: The seven bowls, the third and last group of seven after the seven seals and the seven trumpets, foreshadow the final cataclysm. Again, the series is introduced by a heavenly prelude, in which the victors over the beast sing the canticle of Moses (15, 2-4).

15, 1-4: A vision of the victorious martyrs precedes the vision of woe in 15, 5—16, 21; cf 7, 9-12.

15, 2: Mingled with fire: fire symbolizes the sanctity involved in facing God, reflected in the trials that have prepared the victorious Christians or in God's wrath.

15, 3: The song of Moses: the song that Moses and the Israelites sang after their escape from the oppression of Egypt (Ex 15, 1-18). The martyrs have escaped from the oppression of the Devil. Nations: many other Greek manuscripts and versions read "ages."

15, 5-8: Seven angels receive the bowls of God's wrath.

15, 5: Tent of testimony: the name of the meeting tent in the Greek text of Ex 40. Cf 2 Mc 2, 4-7.

16, 1-21: These seven bowls, like the seven seals (6, 1-17; 8, 1) and the seven trumpets (8, 2—9, 21; 11, 15-19), bring on a succession of disasters modeled in part on the plagues of Egypt (Ex 7—12). See the note on 6, 12-14.

16, 2: Like the sixth Egyptian plague (Ex 9, 8-11).

16, 3-4: Like the first Egyptian plague (Ex 7, 20-21). The same woe followed the blowing of the second trumpet (8, 8-9).

heard the angel in charge of the waters say:

"You are just, O Holy One,
who are and who were,
in passing this sentence.
6* For they have shed the blood of the holy ones and the prophets,
and you [have] given them blood
to drink;
it is what they deserve."
7* Then I heard the altar cry out,
"Yes, Lord God almighty,
your judgments are true and just."

8 The fourth angel poured out his bowl on the sun. It was given the power to burn people with fire. 9* People were burned by the scorching heat and blasphemed the name of God who had power over these plagues, but they did not repent or give him glory.

10*† The fifth angel poured out his bowl on the throne of the beast. Its kingdom was plunged into darkness, and people bit their tongues in pain 11* and blasphemed the God of heaven because of their pains and sores. But they did not repent of their works.

12† The sixth angel emptied his bowl on the great river Euphrates. Its water was dried up to prepare the way for the kings of the East. 13*† I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come from the mouth of the dragon, from the mouth of the beast, and from the mouth of the false prophet. 14* These were demonic spirits who performed signs. They went out to the kings of the whole world to assemble them for the battle on the great day of God the almighty. 15*† ("Behold, I am coming like a thief." Blessed is the one who watches and keeps his clothes ready, so that he may not go naked and people see him exposed.) 16† They then assembled the kings in the place that is named Armageddon in Hebrew.

17* The seventh angel poured out his bowl into the air. A loud voice came out of the temple from the throne, saying, "It is done." 18* Then there were lightning flashes, rumblings, and peals of thunder, and a great earthquake. It was such a violent earthquake that there has never been one like it since the human race began on earth. 19† The great city was split into three parts, and the gentile cities fell. But God remembered great Babylon, giving it the cup filled with the wine of his fury and wrath. 20† Every island fled, and mountains disappeared. 21* Large hailstones like huge weights came down from the sky on people, and they blasphemed God for the plague of hail because this plague was so severe.

V: THE PUNISHMENT OF BABYLON AND THE DESTRUCTION OF PAGAN NATIONS

CHAPTER 17

Babylon the Great.† 1*† Then one of the seven angels who were holding the seven bowls came and said to me, "Come here. I will show you the judgment on the great harlot who lives near the many waters. 2*† The kings of the earth have had intercourse with her, and the inhabitants of the earth became drunk on the wine of her harlotry." 3*† Then he carried me away in spirit to a deserted place where I saw a woman seated on a scarlet beast that was covered with blasphemous names, with seven heads and ten horns. 4*† The woman was wearing purple and scarlet and adorned with gold, precious stones, and pearls. She held in her hand a gold cup that was filled with the abominable and sordid deeds of her harlotry. 5 On her forehead was written a name, which is a mystery, "Babylon the great, the mother of harlots and of the abominations of the earth." 6 I saw that the woman was drunk on the blood of the holy ones and on the blood of the witnesses to Jesus.

17, 1-6: Babylon, the symbolic name (5) of Rome, is graphically described as "the great harlot."

17, 2: Intercourse . . . harlotry: see the note on 14, 4. The pagan kings subject to Rome adopted the cult of the emperor.

Meaning of the Beast and Harlot.† When I saw her I was greatly amazed.
7 The angel said to me, "Why are you amazed? I will explain to you the mystery of the woman and of the beast that carries her, the beast with the seven heads and the ten horns. 8*† The beast that you saw existed once but now exists no longer. It will come up from the abyss and is headed for destruction. The inhabitants of the earth whose names have not been written in the book of life from the foundation of the world shall be amazed when they see the beast, because it existed once but exists no longer, and yet it will come again.
9*† Here is a clue for one who has wisdom. The seven heads represent seven hills upon which the woman sits. They also represent seven kings: 10† five have already fallen, one still lives, and the last has not yet come, and when he comes he must remain only a short while. 11† The beast that existed once but exists no longer is an eighth king, but really belongs to the seven and is headed for destruction. 12*† The ten horns that you saw represent ten kings who have not yet been crowned; they will receive royal authority along with the beast for one hour. 13 They are of one mind and will give their power and authority to the beast. 14* They will fight with the Lamb, but the Lamb will conquer them, for he is Lord of lords and king of kings, and those with him are called, chosen, and faithful."
15 Then he said to me, "The waters that you saw where the harlot lives represent large numbers of peoples, nations, and tongues. 16*† The ten horns that you saw and the beast will hate the harlot; they will leave her desolate and naked; they will eat her flesh and consume her with fire. 17 For God has put it into their minds to carry out his purpose and to make them come to an agreement to give their kingdom to the beast until the words of God are accomplished. 18 The woman whom you saw represents the great city that has sovereignty over the kings of the earth."

CHAPTER 18

The Fall of Babylon.† 1* After this I saw another angel coming down from heaven, having great authority, and the earth became illumined by his splendor.
2*† He cried out in a mighty voice:

"Fallen, fallen is Babylon the great.
She has become a haunt for demons.
She is a cage for every unclean spirit,
a cage for every unclean bird,
[a cage for every unclean] and disgusting [beast].
3*† For all the nations have drunk
the wine of her licentious passion.
The kings of the earth had intercourse with her,
and the merchants of the earth grew rich from her drive for luxury."

4*† Then I heard another voice from heaven say:

"Depart from her, my people,
so as not to take part in her sins
and receive a share in her plagues, 5* for her sins are piled up to the sky,
and God remembers her crimes.
6* Pay her back as she has paid others.
Pay her back double for her deeds.
Into her cup pour double what she poured.
7* To the measure of her boasting and wantonness repay her in torment and grief;
for she said to herself,
'I sit enthroned as queen;
I am no widow,
and I will never know grief.'

17, 6b-18: An interpretation of the vision is here given.

17, 8: Allusion to the belief that the dead Nero would return to power (11); see the note on 13, 3.

17, 9: Here is a clue: literally, "Here a mind that has wisdom." Seven hills: of Rome.

17, 10: There is little agreement as to the identity of the Roman emperors alluded to here. The number seven (9) suggests that all the emperors are meant; see the note on 1, 4.

17, 11: The beast: Nero; see the note on v 8.

17, 12-13: Ten kings who have not yet been crowned: perhaps Parthian satraps who are to accompany the revived Nero (the beast) in his march on Rome to regain power; see the note on 13, 3. In 19, 11-21, the Lamb and his companions will conquer them.

17, 16-18: The ten horns: the ten pagan kings (12) who unwittingly fulfill God's will against harlot Rome, the great city; cf Ez 16, 37.

18, 1—19, 4: A stirring dirge over the fall of Babylon-Rome. The perspective is prophetic, as if the fall of Rome had already taken place. The imagery here, as elsewhere in this book, is not to be taken literally. The vindictiveness of some of the language, borrowed from the scathing Old Testament prophecies against Babylon, Tyre, and Nineveh (Is 23; 24; 27; Jer 50-51; Ez 26-27), is meant to portray symbolically the inexorable demands of God's holiness and justice; cf Introduction. The section concludes with a joyous canticle on the future glory of heaven.

18, 2: Many Greek manuscripts and versions omit a cage for every unclean . . . beast.

18, 3-24: Rome is condemned for her immorality, symbol of idolatry (see the note on 14, 4), and for persecuting the church; cf 19, 2.

18, 4: Depart from her: not evacuation of the city but separation from sinners, as always in apocalyptic literature.

8 Therefore, her plagues will come in one day, pestilence, grief, and famine;
she will be consumed by fire.
For mighty is the Lord God who judges her."

9 The kings of the earth who had intercourse with her in their wantonness will weep and mourn over her when they see the smoke of her pyre. 10 They will keep their distance for fear of the torment inflicted on her, and they will say:

"Alas, alas, great city,
Babylon, mighty city.
In one hour your judgment has come."

11† The merchants of the earth will weep and mourn for her, because there will be no more markets for their cargo: 12 their cargo of gold, silver, precious stones, and pearls; fine linen, purple silk, and scarlet cloth; fragrant wood of every kind, all articles of ivory and all articles of the most expensive wood, bronze, iron, and marble; 13† cinnamon, spice, incense, myrrh, and frankincense; wine, olive oil, fine flour, and wheat; cattle and sheep, horses and chariots, and slaves, that is, human beings.

14* "The fruit you craved has left you.
All your luxury and splendor are gone,
never again will one find them."

15 The merchants who deal in these goods, who grew rich from her, will keep their distance for fear of the torment inflicted on her. Weeping and mourning, 16* they cry out:

"Alas, alas, great city,
wearing fine linen, purple and scarlet,
adorned [in] gold, precious stones, and pearls.
17 In one hour this great wealth has been ruined."

Every captain of a ship, every traveler at sea, sailors, and seafaring merchants stood at a distance 18 and cried out when they saw the smoke of her pyre, "What city could compare with the great city?" 19* They threw dust on their heads and cried out, weeping and mourning:

"Alas, alas, great city,
in which all who had ships at sea grew rich from her wealth.
In one hour she has been ruined.
20* Rejoice over her, heaven,
you holy ones, apostles, and prophets.
For God has judged your case against her."

21* A mighty angel picked up a stone like a huge millstone and threw it into the sea and said:

"With such force will Babylon the great city be thrown down,
and will never be found again.
22* No melodies of harpists and musicians,
flutists and trumpeters,
will ever be heard in you again.
No craftsmen in any trade
will ever be found in you again.
No sound of the millstone
will ever be heard in you again.
23* No light from a lamp
will ever be seen in you again.
No voices of bride and groom
will ever be heard in you again.
Because your merchants were the great ones of the world,
all nations were led astray by your magic potion.
24* In her was found the blood of prophets and holy ones
and all who have been slain on the earth."

CHAPTER 19

1† After this I heard what sounded like the loud voice of a great multitude in heaven, saying:

"Alleluia!
Salvation, glory, and might belong to our God,
2* for true and just are his judgments.
He has condemned the great harlot who corrupted the earth with her harlotry.
He has avenged on her the blood of his servants."

3* They said a second time:

"Alleluia! Smoke will rise from her forever and ever."

4 The twenty-four elders and the four living creatures fell down and worshiped God who sat on the throne, saying, "Amen. Alleluia."

19, 1.3.4.6: Alleluia: found only here in the New Testament, this frequent exclamation of praise in the Hebrew psalms was important in Jewish liturgy.

The Victory Song.† [5]* A voice coming from the throne said:

"Praise our God, all you his servants,
[and] you who revere him, small and great."

[6] Then I heard something like the sound of a great multitude or the sound of rushing water or mighty peals of thunder, as they said:

"Alleluia!
The Lord has established his reign,
[our] God, the almighty.
[7]*† Let us rejoice and be glad and give him glory.
For the wedding day of the Lamb has come,
his bride has made herself ready.
[8]*† She was allowed to wear
a bright, clean linen garment."

(The linen represents the righteous deeds of the holy ones.)

[9]† Then the angel said to me, "Write this: Blessed are those who have been called to the wedding feast of the Lamb." And he said to me, "These words are true; they come from God." [10]† I fell at his feet to worship him. But he said to me, "Don't! I am a fellow servant of yours and of your brothers who bear witness to Jesus. Worship God. Witness to Jesus is the spirit of prophecy."

The King of Kings.† [11]* Then I saw the heavens opened, and there was a white horse; its rider was [called] "Faithful and True." He judges and wages war in righteousness. [12]† His eyes were [like] a fiery flame, and on his head were many diadems. He had a name inscribed that no one knows except himself. [13]† He wore a cloak that had been dipped in blood, and his name was called the Word of God. [14]* The armies of heaven followed him, mounted on white horses and wearing clean white linen. [15]† Out of his mouth came a sharp sword to strike the nations. He will rule them with an iron rod, and he himself will tread out in the wine press the wine of the fury and wrath of God the almighty. [16] He has a name written on his cloak and on his thigh, "King of kings and Lord of lords."

[17]† Then I saw an angel standing on the sun. He cried out [in] a loud voice to all the birds flying high overhead, "Come here. Gather for God's great feast, [18]* to eat the flesh of kings, the flesh of military officers, and the flesh of warriors, the flesh of horses and of their riders, and the flesh of all, free and slave, small and great." [19] Then I saw the beast and the kings of the earth and their armies gathered to fight against the one riding the horse and against his army. [20]*† The beast was caught and with it the false prophet who had performed in its sight the signs by which he led astray those who had accepted the mark of the beast and those who had worshiped its image. The two were thrown alive into the fiery pool burning with sulfur. [21] The rest were killed by the sword that came out of the mouth of the one riding the horse, and all the birds gorged themselves on their flesh.

19, 7: The wedding day of the Lamb: symbol of God's reign about to begin (21, 1—22, 5); see the note on 10, 7. His bride: the church; cf 2 Cor 11, 2; Eph 5, 22-27. Marriage is one of the biblical metaphors used to describe the covenant relationship between God and his people; cf Hos 2, 16-22; Is 54, 5-6; 62, 5; Ez 16, 6-14. Hence, idolatry and apostasy are viewed as adultery and harlotry (Hos 2, 4-15; Ez 16, 15-63); see the note on 14, 4.

19, 8: See the note on 14, 12.

19, 9: Blessed: see the note on 1, 3.

19, 10: The spirit of prophecy: as the prophets were inspired to proclaim God's word, so the Christian is called to give witness to the Word of God (13) made flesh; cf 1, 2; 6, 9; 12, 17.

19, 11-16: Symbolic description of the exalted Christ (cf 1, 13-16) who together with the armies of heaven overcomes the beast and its followers; cf 17, 14.

19, 12: A name: in Semitic thought, the name conveyed the reality of the person; cf Mt 11, 27; Lk 10, 22.

19, 13: Had been dipped in: other Greek manuscripts and versions read "had been sprinkled with"; cf v 15. The Word of God: Christ is the revelation of the Father; cf Jn 1, 1.14; 1 Jn 2, 14.

19, 15: The treading of the wine press is a prophetic symbol used to describe the destruction of God's enemies; cf Is 63, 1-6; Jl 4, 13.

19, 17-21: The certainty of Christ's victory is proclaimed by an angel, followed by a reference to the mustering of enemy forces and a fearsome description of their annihilation. The gruesome imagery is borrowed from Ez 39, 4.17-20.

19, 20: Beast . . . false prophet: see the notes on ch 13. The fiery pool . . . sulfur: symbol of God's punishment (14, 10; 20, 10.14-15), different from the abyss; see the note on 9, 1.

20, 1-6: Like the other numerical values in this book, the thousand years are not to be taken literally; they symbolize the long period of time between the chaining up of Satan (a symbol for Christ's resurrection-victory over death and the forces of evil) and the end of the world. During this time God's people share in the glorious reign of God that is present to them by virtue of their baptismal victory over death and sin; cf Rom 6, 1-8; Jn 5, 24-25; 16, 33; 1 Jn 3, 14; Eph 2, 1.

20, 1: Abyss: see the note on 9, 1.

2*† He seized the dragon, the ancient serpent, which is the Devil or Satan, and tied it up for a thousand years 3 and threw it into the abyss, which he locked over it and sealed, so that it could no longer lead the nations astray until the thousand years are completed. After this, it is to be released for a short time.

4*† Then I saw thrones; those who sat on them were entrusted with judgment. I also saw the souls of those who had been beheaded for their witness to Jesus and for the word of God, and who had not worshiped the beast or its image nor had accepted its mark on their foreheads or hands. They came to life and they reigned with Christ for a thousand years. 5 The rest of the dead did not come to life until the thousand years were over. This is the first resurrection. 6† Blessed and holy is the one who shares in the first resurrection. The second death has no power over these; they will be priests of God and of Christ, and they will reign with him for [the] thousand years.

7† When the thousand years are completed, Satan will be released from his prison. 8*† He will go out to deceive the nations at the four corners of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them for battle; their number is like the sand of the sea. 9*† They invaded the breadth of the earth and surrounded the camp of the holy ones and the beloved city. But fire came down from heaven and consumed them. 10 The Devil who had led them astray was thrown into the pool of fire and sulfur, where the beast and the false prophet were. There they will be tormented day and night forever and ever.

The Large White Throne.† 11* Next I saw a large white throne and the one who was sitting on it. The earth and the sky fled from his presence and there was no place for them. 12*† I saw the dead, the great and the lowly, standing before the throne, and scrolls were opened. Then another scroll was opened, the book of life. The dead were judged according to their deeds, by what was written in the scrolls. 13† The sea gave up its dead; then Death and Hades gave up their dead. All the dead were judged according to their deeds. 14*† Then Death and Hades were thrown into the pool of fire. (This pool of fire is the second death.) 15 Anyone whose name was not found written in the book of life was thrown into the pool of fire.

VI: THE NEW CREATION†

The New Heaven and the New Earth. 1*† Then I saw a new heaven and a new earth. The former heaven and the former earth had passed away, and the sea was no more. 2*† I also saw the holy city, a new Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven from God, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. 3*† I heard a loud voice from the throne saying, "Behold, God's dwelling is with the human race. He will dwell with them and they will be his people and God himself will always be with them [as their God]. 4* He will wipe every tear from their eyes, and there shall be no more death or mourning, wailing or pain, [for] the old order has passed away."

5*† The one who sat on the throne said, "Behold, I make all things new." Then he said, "Write these words down, for they are trustworthy and true." 6*† He said to me, "They are accomplished. I [am] the Alpha and the Omega, the beginning and the end. To the thirsty I will give a gift from the spring of life-giving water. 7*† The vic-

20, 9: The breadth of the earth: Palestine. The beloved city: Jerusalem; see the note on 14, 1.

20, 11-15: A description of the final judgment. After the intermediate reign of Christ, all the dead are raised and judged, thus inaugurating the new age.

20, 12: The book of life: see the note on 3, 5. Judged . . . scrolls: see the note on 14, 12.

20, 13: Hades: the netherworld; see the note on 1, 18.

20, 14: Second death: see the note on 2, 11.

21, 1—22, 5: A description of God's eternal kingdom in heaven under the symbols of a new heaven and a new earth; cf Is 65, 17-25; 66, 22; Mt 19, 28.

21, 1: Sea . . . no more: because as home of the dragon it was doomed to disappear; cf Jb 7, 12.

21, 2: New Jerusalem . . . bride: symbol of the church (Gal 4, 26); see the note on 19, 7.

21, 3: People: other ancient manuscripts read a plural, "peoples."

21, 3-4: Language taken from Ez 37, 27; Is 25, 8; 35, 10; cf 7, 17.

21, 5: The one . . . on the throne: God himself; cf 4, 1-11.

21, 6: They are accomplished: God's reign has already begun; see the note on 20, 1-6. Alpha . . . Omega: see the note on 1, 8. Life-giving water: see the note on 7, 17.

21, 7: The victor: over the forces of evil; see the conclusions of the seven letters (2, 7.11.17.26; 3, 5.12.21). He will be my son: the victorious Christian enjoys divine affiliation by adoption (Gal 4, 4-7; Rom 8, 14-17); see the note on 2, 26-28.

tor will inherit these gifts, and I shall be his God, and he will be my son. 8*† But as for cowards, the unfaithful, the depraved, murderers, the unchaste, sorcerers, idol-worshipers, and deceivers of every sort, their lot is in the burning pool of fire and sulfur, which is the second death."

The New Jerusalem.† 9† One of the seven angels who held the seven bowls filled with the seven last plagues came and said to me, "Come here. I will show you the bride, the wife of the Lamb." 10* He took me in spirit to a great, high mountain and showed me the holy city Jerusalem coming down out of heaven from God. 11* It gleamed with the splendor of God. Its radiance was like that of a precious stone, like jasper, clear as crystal. 12 It had a massive, high wall, with twelve gates where twelve angels were stationed and on which names were inscribed, [the names] of the twelve tribes of the Israelites. 13* There were three gates facing east, three north, three south, and three west. 14*† The wall of the city had twelve courses of stones as its foundation, on which were inscribed the twelve names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb.

15† The one who spoke to me held a gold measuring rod to measure the city, its gates, and its wall. 16† The city was square, its length the same as [also] its width. He measured the city with the rod and found it fifteen hundred miles in length and width and height. 17† He also measured its wall: one hundred and forty-four cubits according to the standard unit of measurement the angel used. 18† The wall was constructed of jasper, while the city was pure gold, clear as glass. 19* The foundations of the city wall were decorated with every precious stone; the first course of stones was jasper, the second sapphire, the third chalcedony, the fourth emerald, 20 the fifth sardonyx, the sixth carnelian, the seventh chrysolite, the eighth beryl, the ninth topaz, the tenth chrysoprase, the eleventh hyacinth, and the twelfth amethyst. 21 The twelve gates were twelve pearls, each of the gates made from a single pearl; and the street of the city was of pure gold, transparent as glass.

22*† I saw no temple in the city, for its temple is the Lord God almighty and the Lamb. 23*† The city had no need of sun or moon to shine on it, for the glory of God gave it light, and its lamp was the Lamb. 24*† The nations will walk by its light, and to it the kings of the earth will bring their treasure. 25 During the day its gates will never be shut, and there will be no night there. 26 The treasure and wealth of the nations will be brought there, 27* but nothing unclean will enter it, nor any[one] who does abominable things or tells lies. Only those will enter whose names are written in the Lamb's book of life.

CHAPTER 22

1*† Then the angel showed me the river of life-giving water, sparkling like crystal, flowing from the throne of God and of the Lamb 2† down the middle of its street. On either side of the river grew the tree of life that produces fruit twelve times a year, once each month; the leaves of the trees serve as medicine for the nations. 3 Nothing accursed will be found there anymore. The throne of God and of the Lamb will be in it, and his servants will worship him. 4† They will look upon his face, and his name will be on their foreheads. 5* Night will be no more, nor will they need light from lamp or sun, for the Lord God shall give them light, and they shall reign forever and ever.

21, 8: Cowards: their conviction is so weak that they deny Christ in time of trial and become traitors. Second death: see the note on 2, 11.

21, 9—22, 5: Symbolic descriptions of the new Jerusalem, the church. Most of the images are borrowed from Ez 40—48.

21, 9: The bride, the wife of the Lamb: the church (2), the new Jerusalem (10); cf 2 Cor 11, 2.

21, 14: Courses of stones . . . apostles: literally, "twelve foundations"; cf Eph 2, 19-20.

21, 15-17: The city is shaped like a gigantic cube, a symbol of perfection (cf 1 Kgs 6, 19-20). The measurements of the city and its wall are multiples of the symbolic number twelve; see the note on 7, 4-9.

21, 16: Fifteen hundred miles: literally, twelve thousand stades, about 12,000 furlongs (see the note on 14, 20); the number is symbolic: twelve (the apostles as leaders of the new Israel) multiplied by 1,000 (the immensity of Christians); cf Introduction. In length and width and height: literally, "its length and width and height are the same."

21, 17: One hundred and forty-four cubits: the cubit was about eighteen inches in length. Standard unit of measurement the angel used: literally, "by a human measure, i.e., an angel's."

21, 18-21: The gold and precious gems symbolize the beauty and excellence of the church; cf Ex 28, 15-21; Tb 13, 16-17; Is 54, 11-12.

21, 22: Christ is present throughout the church; hence, no temple is needed as an earthly dwelling for God; cf Mt 18, 20; 28, 20; Jn 4, 21.

21, 23: Lamp . . . Lamb: cf Jn 8, 12.

21, 24-27: All men and women of good will are welcome in the church; cf Is 60, 1.3.5.11. The . . . book of life: see the note on 3, 5.

22, 1.17: Life-giving water: see the note on 7, 17.

22, 2: The tree of life: cf v 14; see the note on 2, 7. Fruit . . . medicine: cf Ez 47, 12.

22, 4: Look upon his face: cf Mt 5, 8; 1 Cor 13, 12; 1 Jn 3, 2.

VII: EPILOGUE†

6* And he said to me, "These words are trustworthy and true, and the Lord, the God of prophetic spirits, sent his angel to show his servants what must happen soon." 7*† "Behold, I am coming soon." Blessed is the one who keeps the prophetic message of this book.
8 It is I, John, who heard and saw these things, and when I heard and saw them I fell down to worship at the feet of the angel who showed them to me.
9* But he said to me, "Don't! I am a fellow servant of yours and of your brothers the prophets and of those who keep the message of this book. Worship God." 10† Then he said to me, "Do not seal up the prophetic words of this book, for the appointed time is near. 11 Let the wicked still act wickedly, and the filthy still be filthy. The righteous must still do right, and the holy still be holy." 12* "Behold, I am coming soon. I bring with me the recompense I will give to each according to his deeds. 13*† I am the Alpha and the Omega, the first and the last, the beginning and the end."
14*† Blessed are they who wash their robes so as to have the right to the tree of life and enter the city through its gates. 15* Outside are the dogs, the sorcerers, the unchaste, the murderers, the idol-worshipers, and all who love and practice deceit.
16*† "I, Jesus, sent my angel to give you this testimony for the churches. I am the root and offspring of David, the bright morning star."
17*† The Spirit and the bride say,
"Come." Let the hearer say, "Come."
Let the one who thirsts come forward, and the one who wants it receive the gift of life-giving water.
18 I warn everyone who hears the prophetic words in this book: if anyone adds to them, God will add to him the plagues described in this book, 19* and if anyone takes away from the words in this prophetic book, God will take away his share in the tree of life and in the holy city described in this book.
20*† The one who gives this testimony says, "Yes, I am coming soon." Amen!
Come, Lord Jesus!
21 The grace of the Lord Jesus be with all.

THE ENGLISH VERSIONS OF THE BIBLE

BY JOHN BERCHMANS DOCKERY, O.F.M.

Bibliography—The choice is very large. Only a selection of works which give a comprehensive treatment of the subject is offered here. The two classic works on the subject of English versions are: The Cambridge History of the Bible: the West from the Reformation to the present day, ed. S. L. Greenslade, Cambridge, 1963; H. Pope: English Versions of the Bible, revised and amplified by S. Bullough, St. Louis, Mo., 1952.
Other General Works: F. F. Bruce, The English Bible: a history of translations, London, 1961. A short, clear, up-to-date account of the history and development of the Bible in England; T. H. Darlow and H. F. Moule, Historical Catalogue of Printed Editions of Holy Scripture, London, 1903–11; vol. I English Editions; J. R. Dore, Old Bibles: an Account of the Early versions of the English Bible, 1882;[2] F. Kenyon, Our Bible and the Ancient Manuscripts, 1958[3], chs. X—XII; J. G. MacGregor, The Bible in the Making, 1961; W. F. Moulton, The History of the English Bible, last complete ed., 1911—abridged ed., 1937; E. H. Robertson, The New Translations of the Bible, 1959; H. W. Robinson (ed.), The Bible in its Ancient and English Versions, Oxford, 1940; Reprinted with appendix Oxford, 1954; L. A. Weigle, The English New Testament from Tyndale to the RSV, Nashville, 1949; London, 1950; B. F. Westcott: A General View of the History of the English Bible, 1905, 3rd revision by W. A. Wright.

Earliest English Bible—Some paraphrases and translations into the vernacular were made in England of at least some parts of the Bible about the end of the seventh century and continued by Bede and others. In those days the standard of literacy was low, books, before printing was invented, very scarce, and educated people were able to read Latin. In the ninth century King Alfred translated or caused to be translated several books of the Bible, as did Aldhelm and Aelfric. But the Bible in general use was the Latin Vulgate. "In no part of the western world was this version studied more diligently and copied more lovingly and faithfully than in Great Britain and Ireland." F. F. Bruce, The English Bible, I. Possibly the finest MS of this Bible, the Codex Amiatinus was made in England at Jarrow or Wearmouth. One early form of translation was the interlinear gloss—i.e., a translation between the lines of a Latin MS. Thus the Lindisfarne Gospels, a magnificent MS in Latin, has an interlinear translation in the Northumbrian dialect of the tenth century. The Norman Conquest radically modified and slowed down the development of English as a national language and in consequence translations into the vernacular continued to be sporadic and partial until the fourteenth century, when English began to emerge as a national language, a blend of Norman French and the various Anglo-Saxon dialects. Some objected to the vernacular Scriptures and complained that "the jewel of the clergy has become the toy of the laity." Nevertheless the demand, inevitably, grew as English came to be more widely spoken by the educated classes. Hitherto they had been satisfied with either Latin or Norman-French Bibles. St. Thomas More, Cranmer and even Foxe the martyrologist affirm the existence of English versions, at least of large portions of the Bible before Wycliffe's time and MSS have survived of English translations of the Gospels (11th century) Mark, Luke, St. Paul's Epistles (14th century). Apocalypse (11th century).

John Wycliffe—However, it is now generally accepted that the first complete English version of the Bible was made toward the end of the fourteenth century by Wycliffe and his followers. Wycliffe was perhaps the most eminent theologian of his time at Oxford and a great popular preacher who fiercely attacked the abuses of the age. Unfortunately in doing so he expressed unorthodox views concerning the sacraments of Penance and the Eucharist, the use of relics and against the celibacy of the clergy. He strongly advocated a translation of the Scriptures into English so that the poor people could read God's Word for themselves. Such a version would also make it easier for him to propagate his teachings. Wycliffe and his companions made a translation of the NT in 1380, followed by one of the OT two years later, both of course from the Latin Vulgate and the latter including the deuterocanonical books. It is uncertain what part Wycliffe took in the translation. He may have translated the NT but most of the OT was the work of Nicholas of Hereford, one of his ardent supporters. Nicholas was vice-Chancellor of the University of Oxford but later retired to the Carthusian monastery at Coventry where he died. Hereford's work on the OT is scholarly and literal; that of his collaborators more free and colloquial. Many familiar phrases from the Wycliffite Bible are found in most later English versions, e.g., "strait is the gate and narewe the way"; "the beame and the mote." In 1384, after Wycliffe's death, John Purvey, one of his followers revised the translation. In the general prologue Purvey expressed his indebtedness to Nicholas of Lyra, the Franciscan scholar and expert in Hebrew and rabbinical studies who represented the culmination of a long tradition in these fields of knowledge.

Wycliffe's teachings were condemned repeatedly in England during the latter part of the fourteenth century and at the Council of Oxford, 1408 translations of the Scriptures into the vernacular were forbidden unless and until they were fully approved by Church authority. The reason for this was the use made of the Wycliffite Bible in spreading the doctrines of Lollardy. In fact there was nothing unorthodox in the translation itself though, in the prologue, novel views on the Eucharist were expressed, incompatible with the faith. Finally in 1415 at the Council of Florence all Wycliffe's works were condemned. The actual Bibles, however, continued in use, shorn of their heretical prologue, and were in the possession of both religious houses and those of the nobility. Many of these Bibles may now be seen in the British Museum—mostly copies of the second Wycliffite version. The suggestion that these Bibles are really Catholic translations from the time before Wycliffe has now been abandoned. Once separated from the prologue there was no reason why they should not be used by Catholics and they came to be tacitly accepted. It should be noted that the Council of Oxford did not condemn vernacular translations. As Sir Thomas More said: "It neither forbiddeth the translations to be read that were already well done of old before Wycliffe's days, nor damneth his because it was new but because it was naught; nor prohibiteth new to be made but provideth that they shall not be read if they be made amiss till they be by good examination amended.' A Dialogue against Heresies.

First Printed Editions—The year 1525 saw the publication of the NT in Tyndale's translation and in 1530 there appeared his translation of the Pentateuch from the Hebrew. This was soon followed by Jonah. Unfortunately, like Wycliffe, Tyndale made his translation a vehicle for bitter attacks on the Church.

Tyndale was put to death in 1536 but left his translation of the OT in manuscript. The English ecclesiastical authorities condemned his Bible because it was considered to be part of the Lutheran reform. In their view much of the wording of the text and the prefaces emphasized basic principles of the reformers, e.g., justification by faith alone. The real reason for the condemnation seems rather to have been himself than his Bible, for his leanings toward Lutheranism were well known. It was on account of these opinions that he was compelled to carry out his work on the continent. His translation was a great improvement on that of Wycliffe, especially in literary merit, e.g., his translation of 1 Corinthians 13 has persevered through many versions. As regards orthodox Catholic teaching his translation gave some grounds for condemnation—his NT clearly reflects the influence of Luther's 1522 NT. The authorities objected to his rejection of "priest" for "elder," "church" for "congregation" and his notes were offensive to the Church. In 1543 Parliament banned it as a "crafty, false and untrue translation"; yet it is estimated that 80% of the words in the RV stand as in Tyndale's NT, and his Pentateuch formed the basis of most subsequent English versions. Cuthbert Tunstall, Bishop of London, had never encouraged Tyndale's efforts and, being especially perturbed by the circulation of this Bible, had it condemned and burned.

In the NT Tyndale used the Greek text of Erasmus and compared it with the Vulgate. In the OT he translated from the Hebrew, also comparing it with the Vulgate and Luther's German version. Tyndale's later corrections departed more from the Vulgate and from Wycliffe and his 1534 edition of the NT formed the basis for the AV, RV, and RSV. When Cranmer became Archbishop of Canterbury in 1533 the making of a new translation was committed to Miles Coverdale (1488-1569). He had been an Augustinian friar who left his Order under the influence of the Reformation, repudiated Catholicism and became the first Protestant Bishop of Exeter. In 1535 his English Bible was published. He did not claim Tyndale's knowledge of ancient languages but he made use of Tyndale's translation, together with Latin and German versions, as the title-page says, "translated from Douche and Latin." He followed Luther's example of putting the deuterocanonical books (he called them Hagiographa but later they were named Apocrypha by non-Catholics), at the end of the OT. Later English versions followed this example or omitted them. Coverdale's Bible was issued without royal authority but apparently there were no obstacles to its circulation. The second edition in 1537 received royal license, "set forth with the Kynges most gracious licence"; yet in 1546 King Henry forbade anyone to have a copy of either Tyndale's or Coverdale's NT. Because Coverdale's translation was not made from the original languages, it did not satisfy scholars. It may have been tactful of Coverdale not to mention Tyndale's Bible, but his NT is mainly Tyndale. It was essentially a "Protestant" version, e.g., "congregation" for "church," etc., but Coverdale was not a controversialist as Tyndale was. He was the first to introduce chapter summaries. One part of his Bible, the Psalter, has remained in the Prayer Book, as his English style has lent itself to singing.

In 1537 another English version appeared, known as the Matthew Bible. It was thought to be the work of a Thomas Matthew but now it is generally considered to be a composite translation edited by John Rogers (1500-55), a friend of Tyndale who became a Protestant under his influence. Some think that "Matthew" stands for Tyndale's own name, but in any case the pseudonym was probably used to protect the translator from the fate that overtook Tyndale. In fact Rogers became one of the first of the Marian martyrs. His work was a revision mainly of Tyndale with emendations from Coverdale. The king gave it royal license but did not authorize it for use in public worship. Numerous editions appeared; the last in 1551. This version welded together the best in Tyndale and Coverdale; his dependence on Tyndale is clear from his copious and offensive notes—it was the controversial nature of these that spoiled his work, though the Matthew Bible was an important influence on later versions.

The Great Bible, so called on account of its size (11" x 16½"), was an attempt to supersede the two existing Bibles, Coverdale and Matthew, both considered unsatisfactory for one reason or another. Thomas Cromwell, deciding that these two Bibles stood in need of revision, assigned the work to Coverdale. It was now generally accepted by the reformers that the English Bible should be translated from the original languages. For this reason Coverdale worked on the Matthew Bible rather than on his own; but he was influenced by Tyndale's translation, especially in his retention of his ecclesiastical vocabulary. He used the last edition of Tyndale's NT of 1534–35, corrected by Sebastian Munster's Latin version of the Hebrew OT, the Latin Bible of Erasmus and the Complutensian Polyglot.

The Great Bible, often known as Cromwell's Bible first appeared in 1539 and though not considered heretical by Catholics, was defective in many places. It was the first English Bible to be authorized for public use in churches. In 1542 Convocation made an unsuccessful attempt to have it corrected by the Vulgate but a second edition had appeared in 1540, for which Cranmer himself had written the preface (hence often known as Cranmer's Bible), which became the standard text. There were seven editions of it in the next two years and many more before the last edition of 1569. As the publicly used Bible it remained unchallenged until the appearance of the Bishop's Bible in 1568. During Mary's reign no definite steps were taken to suppress it, though many English Bibles were burned. Neither Parliament nor royal proclamation denounced the Great Bible and when Elizabeth came to the throne, it was still in general use throughout the country.

Richard Taverner (1505-77) was a lawyer and a Greek scholar though he knew no Hebrew; he was a layman, the only one to produce an entire Bible, but licensed to preach by Edward VI. He revised the Matthew Bible and from the standpoint of scholarship, the result was a great improvement, particularly in his accurate rendering of the Greek article. He aimed at compression and vividness often substituting a Saxon word for a Latin word (e.g., "spokesman" for "advocate") and did not hesitate to coin words. He also introduced many strange spellings, e.g., "peax" for "peace," "hable" for "able." Owing to his lack of Hebrew, his standard of accuracy in the OT was not as high as in the NT; he merely polished up the text of Matthew's OT. His influence on later versions was slight but some of his words and expressions have survived, e.g., his use of "parable" for "similitude." The first edition of 1539 is the most reliable as later editions contain many alterations by Bishop Becke. Taverner's own marginal notes were not controversial and the Bible might have had a better reception had it not appeared so short a time before the Great Bible which entirely eclipsed it. The last edition was in 1552. It is of interest to note that a certain A. Marler was granted permission to sell copies of the Great Bible in 1541, unbound for 10/—and bound for 12/—a copy (in today's money about £30 and £36).

During the reign of Edward VI when all restrictions on reading the Bible were removed, thirty-five editions of the NT appeared and thirteen of the whole Bible. When the young king died and Mary Tudor succeeded, publications of the English Scriptures ceased and her reign witnessed only one edition, the NT from Geneva in 1557. It was at this time that a number of clerics left the country to join Knox and Calvin. Among these were Coverdale, Beza, and William Whittingham, sometime Fellow of All Souls, Oxford, and related by marriage to Calvin. These exiles decided to produce another English version, which became known as the Geneva Bible. Several hands took part in its completion. The NT was a revision of Tyndale's by Whittingham, more specifically Matthew's version of Tyndale, with some changes based on Beza's Latin NT of 1556. It was apparently only an interim edition for in 1560 there appeared the full Bible with a dedicatory epistle to Queen Elizabeth. The OT was a thorough revision of the Great Bible. Instead of the usual black letter type, Roman and italic types were used which rendered it much easier to read and this won it a place never achieved by previous Bibles. Its phrases find an echo in Scripture-quotations from Shakespeare to Bunyan. It remained the family Bible until the outbreak of the Civil War in 1642. For the first time in an English Bible the text was divided into verses. Its widespread popularity was due also to its quarto size. It was appointed to be read in the Churches in Scotland, though never in England. At least 140 editions of the whole Bible or NT were printed. It superseded the Great Bible and also held its own against the Bishops' Bible and even against the AV for a generation. The notes for the original 1560 edition emphasize "justification by faith alone" and make frequent attacks on Rome, thus making this first edition Protestant rather than Calvinistic. Later editions supply notes of a more Calvinistic nature; indeed this Bible played no small part in promoting English Puritanism. In spite of this, the AV was to benefit considerably from the scholarship of the Geneva translators. It formed a turning point in the history of the English Bible for it was more independent than the Great Bible which relied on Matthew, as Matthew relied on Tyndale. The Geneva Bible started afresh and a new way was opened for the later AV of 1611.

The growing popularity of the Geneva Bible made it impossible to continue reading the Great Bible in church. Apprehensive of the Calvinistic tendencies of the Geneva Bible Archbishop Matthew Parker in 1561 submitted a plan for the revision of the Great Bible. The Bishops' Bible, as it came to be called, took seven years to complete. The Great Bible was checked by the Hebrew text and the controversial notes were omitted; though it contained notes strongly Protestant in tone, these were neither anti-Catholic nor anti-Calvinist. On the whole the revision was inadequate and unsatisfactory, being little more than a safe and dignified compromise. It went through many editions until the last in 1606, but copies of the NT continued to be printed until 1619. In 1571 Convocation ordered this Bible to be used throughout the country and in 1572 there was a considerable revision of it, especially of the NT. Though not a work of high merit, it formed the official basis for the revision of 1611. It was the first text to be published in England by episcopal authority.

Catholic Bible—Meanwhile Catholics were considering a vernacular Bible and it was the professors of the English College at Douay who took up the work. Mainly from Oxford and exiled on account of their faith, even in Douay they were not left at rest; a storm on the political horizon threatened the existence of the college and caused its transfer to Rheims for fifteen years (1578-93). The chief names concerned with this translation of the Bible were: (1) William Allen (1532-94) Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford, Principal of St. Mary's Hall and Canon of York, who, refusing to conform in 1561, withdrew to Louvain. He opened the English College at Douay in 1568 and later founded a similar college in Rome. He was created Cardinal and appointed to the Sistine commission for the revision of the Septuagint and the Vulgate. (2) Gregory Martin (d. 1582), scholar of St. John's College, Oxford, poet, Hebraist, and Greek scholar. He too refused to conform to the religious changes in England and went to Douay in 1570. (3) Richard Bristow (1538-81), Fellow of Exeter College, Oxford, was a convert to Catholicism. He taught at Douay and went as its rector to Rheims. (4) William Reynolds (1544-94), another convert to the Catholic Church, from New College, Oxford, also went to Douay.

On 16 October 1578 Gregory Martin began an E. translation of the Bible in order to meet "the heretical corruptions imposed upon the English nation." He determined "to translate two chapters a day with Dr. Alanus and Mr. Bristous as revisors." In 1582 there was printed at Rheims the NT translated "faithfully into English out of the authentical Latin . . . diligently conferred with the Greek . . . especially for the discovery of the corruptions of divers late translations and for clearing the controversies in religion of these days . . . ." The reason for the translation was "not of necessity . . . but upon consideration of the present time and condition of our country"; i.e., a vernacular version would not have been necessary in more peaceful times. The preface goes on to say that the Church "never wholly condemned all vulgar versions" but gave warning against indiscriminate interpretation. The Council of Oxford, called by Thomas Arundel, Archbishop of Canterbury, in 1408, had demanded diocesan approval for the publication of Bibles. The translators of the Rheims NT went on to explain that, lest any doctrinal error should creep in or the true sense of the Holy Ghost be missed, they had followed the Fathers and Jerome himself "in keeping religiously the very barbarisms of the vulgar Latin text," e.g., "supersubstantial bread" (Mt 6, 11); "similitude of the prevarication of Adam" (Rom. 5, 14). The annotations, considerable in extent, were added "to show the studious reader both the heretical corruptions and false deductions." Then follow the reasons why the Vulgate was used for the translation: its ancient character, its tradition, its accuracy and its sincerity as well as the decree of the Council of Trent. The Rheims translators set out to produce a literal translation as they clearly point out in their preface of 1582. Further light is thrown on the intentions of the translators by a book published in the same year, 1582, by Martin entitled, A Discoverie of the manifold corruptions of the Holy Scriptures by the Hereticks of our dais, especially the English Sectaries and of their foule dealing herein by partial and false translations to the advantage of their heresies in the English Bibles used and authorised since the time of Schisme. In this work Martin makes a careful study of a number of phrases in the English Bibles and comparing them with the Hebrew or Greek expressions establishes the accuracy of the recently published Catholic Bible; he also asserts that many of the inaccuracies have been due to the influence of the new religious teachings. The following year this expression of strong Catholic views was answered in equally strong language by William Fulke, Master of Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, in his Defense of the Sincere and true translation of the holie Scriptures into the English tong against the manifold cavils, frivolous quarrels and imprudent slanders of Gregory Martin, one of the readers of Popish divinitie in the trayterous Seminarie of Rhemes.

The groundwork of the Rheims NT was supplied by the existing English versions from which Martin did not hesitate to borrow freely; his renderings often bear a striking resemblance to Coverdale's diglot of 1538. The translation also shows traces of a careful study of the Bishops' Bible and the Geneva Bible and through them of the earlier translators from Tyndale onward. But generally speaking, the Rheims NT follows Wycliffe, whereas Protestant translations follow Tyndale. The notes in the first edition of this Catholic NT were most probably contributed by Bristow. The preface, termed "ingenious" by its critics, gives reasons for publishing a new English translation. Many critics gratuitously suggested that the obscure style was deliberately adopted in order to prevent readers from understanding the Bible; the Catholic Church, they said, had been compelled by circumstances to produce vernacular Bibles but made it as difficult as possible to understand them! Later scholars, among them Carleton and Westcott, have praised the accuracy of the Rheims-Douay version. Among points to be specially noted is the careful treatment of the definite article arising from a study of the Greek text, as Taverner had shown. In 1589 William Fulke, continuing his controversy, published the Bishops' version and the Rheims NT in parallel columns. This secured for the Catholic NT a publicity which it would not have otherwise obtained and this publicity was indirectly responsible for the marked influence of the Rheims NT on the AV.

It was not until 1609-10 that the Catholic OT was published in two volumes. In the preface the editors declare that the work had been "completed long since but lack of funds prevented its publication before." Another reason for the delay may have been that this OT, based on an unofficial Louvain text, might be corrected by the Sistine edition of the Vulgate published in 1590. It is again stated in the preface that the real purpose of the translation was polemical: "Now since Luther and his followers have pretended that the Catholic Roman faith and doctrine should be contrary to God's written word and that the Scriptures were not suffered in vulgar languages lest the people should see the truth and withal these new masters corruptly turning the Scriptures into diverse tongues, as might best serve their own opinions, against this false suggestion and practice, Catholic pastors have, for one especial remedy, set forth true and sincere translations in most languages of the Latin Church." Criticisms were made against the OT such as had been launched against the NT, especially its too close adherence to the Latin text. There was a partial reversal of this attitude when many of the improved translations of the Rheims NT were introduced into the AV (the Douay OT appeared too late to influence the AV), e.g., "converted" (convertantur) for "turn" (Mk 4, 12); "founded" (fundata) for "grounded" (Eph 3, 17); "centurion" (centurio) for "captain" (Acts 10, 22); "sign" (signum) for "badge, token" (Mt 26, 48); "clemency" (clementia) for "courtesy" (Acts 24, 4). Not only did the Rheims NT introduce such Latin words into the English language but it also influenced the AV in the direction of modernization, e.g., "moisture" for "moistness" (Lk 8, 6); "what man is there" for "what man is it" (Acts 19, 35); "distresses" for "anguishes" (2 Cor 12, 10). The Rheims-Douay gave a glossary ("explication") of new words and it is surprising how many have become well established, e.g., acquisition, advent, allegory, assumption, calumniate, character, evangelize, neophyte, resuscitate, victim, etc. The Psalter was thought to be the weakest part of the translation; but this was because Jerome's Gallican Psalter, made from the Septuagint, had been included in the Vulgate and not his translation from the Hebrew. In the Douay OT there were annotations of a doctrinal nature, most valuable at a time when the Catholic body in England was so short of pastors. The purpose of these notes was to interpret the text in conformity with the faith of the editors and the decrees of the Council of Trent, as well as to rebut the arguments of the reformers. The deuterocanonical books are found distributed among the other canonical books in the Catholic OT. At a time when there was almost no knowledge of the relative value of MSS of original texts, the Rheims-Douay Bible, based on the Latin, drew attention to an important fact. Since the Vulgate was made in the fourth century many readings contained in it might be more exact than those in very late and corrupt Greek MSS that were used to make translations in the sixteenth century. But obviously one must bear in mind the fact that the Vulgate MSS too were subject to error. No further edition of the Rheims-Douay version appeared for another hundred years.

Authorized Version (called in USA King James Version)—The official authority given to the Bishops' Bible caused the Puritans to agitate for a new translation, to which James I agreed. Almost all existing English Bibles, including the Rheims NT were used as sources with the Bishops' Bible of 1572 as the main text. The translators were to keep the "old ecclesiastical words" because it was feared that the Puritans would discard all ecclesiastical tradition. The completed work appeared in 1611 and became known later as the Authorized Version. It was, in fact, never officially authorized either by Church or State, though the king's "speciall command" conferred considerable authority and it became the official Bible of the Church of England until modern times. It was favorably accepted by the non-conformist Churches. Being translated from the original texts, it claimed to be more accurate than a translation from the Latin, but (as has already been seen) this did not necessarily follow. Its notes do not stress differences in theological views, and scholarly marginal notes add much to textual criticism. The Apocrypha were included as it was not until the Long Parliament of 1644 that the books of the Hebrew canon only were directed to be read in the Church of England. After the Restoration this policy was reversed but the non-conformists continued for the most part to disregard the deuterocanonical books. The AV weathered all attacks and nearly a thousand editions of all or part were published between 1611 and 1800. Alterations were found in many editions: "Thou art Christ" (Mt 16, 16) became "Thou art the Christ"; "The words of Jesus" (Mt 26, 75) became "the word of Jesus"; "For press" (Mk 2, 4) became "for the press"; "He came and worshipped" (Mk 5, 6) became "He ran and worshipped." The revisers were accused of being "damnable corrupters of God's word" for making such changes. Though the AV received no approbation from Convocation or Parliament, it obtained a pre-eminent place on its own merits, "the noblest monument of English prose." It was published in Scotland in 1633, in Ireland in 1714, and in the American colonies in 1752.

Later Catholic Editions—During the course of the hundred years following the publication of the only existing Catholic English Bible, its language became increasingly strange. "In a number of places it is unintelligible and all over so grating to the ears of such as are accustomed to speak, in a manner, another language, that most people will not be at the pains to reading them." As an example of the truth of this criticism by Dr. Nary Numbers 6, 17 reads in the Rheims-Douay edition, "The ram he shal immolate for a pacifique host to the Lord, offering withal the baskette of azymes and the libamentes that by custom are dew." With the authority of the Archbishop of Dublin, Dr. Nary published a modernized version of the NT in 1718. His sense of English rhythm was excellent and he had a high ideal of the translator's task, being probably ahead of his time in his understanding of it. He had another object in view, namely, to replace "Bibles that are so bulky that they cannot conveniently be carried about for public devotion; and so scarce and dear that the generality of people neither have nor can procure them for private use." In 1730 another President of the English College, Douay, Dr. Robert Witham, published a revision of the Rheims NT. In his preface, having praised the work of the original translators for producing such a true and literal translation and not a paraphrase, Witham thought that "the Rheims translators followed too scrupulously the Latin, even to the placing of words." He changed almost every verse in his revision of the NT. The censor of this edition was Dr. Richard Challoner, vice-president of the College at Douay. The same year Challoner returned to England to work on the mission and in 1738 a new revision of the NT appeared which was probably the work of Challoner, assisted by Francis Blyth, O.D.C. Both these men were converts from Protestantism and being familiar with the language of the AV did not hesitate to adopt many of its renderings. Thus, the young man who followed our Lord (Mk 14, 51), and, according to the Rheims translation was "clothed with sindon upon the bare," became "cloathed with linnen cloath over his naked body." Challoner's wide pastoral experience made him familiar with the needs of the people for whom the English Bible was required. This qualification more than made up for any lack of the profound scholarship that adorned the previous translators. Challoner's aim was to give his people a Bible they would read and understand and carry about with them; and this he did in the further revision of the NT of 1749. In this edition further alterations were made toward the AV and the expressions so familiar to modern readers of the Catholic Bible were introduced, e.g., instead of "But when I was made a man, I did away the things that belonged to a little one" Challoner wrote, "But when I became a man, I put away the things of a child" (1 Cor 13, 11). The next year, 1750, the whole Bible was published, "newly revised and corrected according to the Clementine edition of the Scriptures." It went through six editions in the lifetime of Challoner who died in his ninetieth year in 1781. His corrections in the OT almost amounted to a new translation. There must of necessity be a certain resemblance between any two Catholic versions, both translated from the Vulgate; but, this connection between the Douay and Challoner's being allowed for, Challoner's version is nearer to the AV than it is to the Douay in phraseology and diction. In the NT the Gospels are the best, the Epistles the least satisfactory part of his work. In the necessary simplifying of the English text, there was some loss of the dignity and rhythm of the original version of 1582; but Challoner produced what has been the Bible of English Catholics for nearly two hundred years. Nevertheless differing texts are found, due to the changes by different editors. For example, Bernard MacMahon produced a new edition in 1783 which professed to be a revision of Challoner and basically it is, but there are over five hundred variations and still more in an 1816 edition, known as Dr. Troy's Bible. Dr. Cotton maintained that the changes made in subsequent editions of the Rheims-Douay Bible produced a Bible further from the AV than Challoner's Bible ever was (H. Cotton, Rhemes and Doway. An attempt to shew what has been done by the Roman Catholics for the diffusion of the Holy Scriptures in English, Oxford, 1855. On this work cf H. Pope, op. cit., 92–97).

Revised Version—In the course of time, the need was felt for a revision of the AV as new sources of knowledge became available. In 1856 a petition for a royal commission was put before the House of Commons, but not until 1870 did the Convocation of Canterbury decide to undertake the work. A committee was formed of members of the Church of England as well as of other non-Catholic communions (Cardinal Newman was invited but felt unable to accept). They published the NT in 1881, the whole Bible in 1885, and the Apocrypha in 1894. In the preface to the NT the debt of the AV to the Rheims NT was at last publicly recognized. Though possessing greater accuracy than the AV, the RV lacked its style and dignity. But all agree that its appearance was a milestone in the history of the English Bible and a greater landmark than early critics ever suspected. Its scholarship has never been disputed.

The revisers were "to introduce as few alterations as possible into the text of the AV consistently with faithfulness," as the preface states. The Greek text they used, based on Septuagint (B) and (S), was the work of B. F. Westcott and F. J. A. Hort, both occupying professional chairs at Cambridge. For the OT the Massoretic text was employed. Toward the end of the nineteenth century, revisers in America were at work and produced in 1901 the American Standard Version, a recension of the RV in which were included words and phrases that were a matter of preference for Americans, e.g., "Holy Spirit" for "Holy Ghost." In general the American revisers desired a more extensive elimination of archaic words than the English revisers wished, e.g., the American version of the Lord's Prayer reverted to the "who art in heaven" of the Rheims NT. Perhaps the major defect of both the RV and the ASV of the NT is that they are too literal and follow the Greek order of words rather than the natural English word order.

The International Council of Education appointed in 1937 a committee of scholars to revise the American Standard Version and their work was published as the Revised Standard Version of the NT in 1946 and of the OT in 1952. The revision is "based on the consonantal Hebrew text" for the OT, and for the NT the best available texts. "The major reason for the revision of the King James' version . . . is the change since 1611 in English usage." Over twelve million copies of the RSV were sold within ten years.

Other Modern Non-Catholic Versions—Only briefly can mention be made of a number of modern English Protestant texts: (1) Richard Weymouth: NT in 1902, a careful, conservative, and literary translation; (2) Twentieth Century NT (1898, revised 1904), changed the traditional order of books to the chronological order; (3) James Moffat: the whole Bible (1913-24), a one-man translation, the first for nearly four hundred years and a complete breakaway from the style of the AV. It became most popular; (4) Basic English Bible, 1949 (it uses only a thousand words), has a simple direct style; (5) New English Bible, 1961, under the direction of Dr. C. H. Dodd, aims at rendering the original into idiomatic English designed primarily for private use; (6) J. B. Phillips's version has achieved a very wide circulation, especially of its separate parts in paperbacks: Epistles (London, 1947), Gospels (1952), Acts (1955), Revelation (1958); NT in one volume (1958). His principles of translation are: use only language that is commonly spoken; expand if necessary to make the meaning clear; keep the style flowing and easy to read; (7) New American Standard Bible, 1971, updated the ASV into more acceptable English style, and recent Hebrew and Greek textual discoveries were incorporated into the text; (8) New International Version, 1978, enlisted an international team of scholars and attempted a translation acceptable to all English-speaking peoples through the use of an eclectic Greek text, the Massoretic Hebrew text, and current English style; (9) New King James Bible (NT, 1979; NT with Psalms, 1980; complete Bible, 1982) is a complete revision of the 1611 AV or King James Version and endeavors to update the archaisms of the AV while retaining its style and beauty of language.

Modern Catholic Versions—In 1811 a revision of Challoner's version, which became known as Dr. Hay's version, went through a number of editions in Ireland. In the same year Thomas Haydock, printer and schoolmaster in Manchester, suggested that his brother, the Rev. George Haydock of Ushaw College, should prepare a new translation. It was mainly Challoner and published in fortnightly parts. Other editions of Challoner appeared but when Bible Societies began to produce their cheap copies, Catholics felt they should do something similar, so the "Catholic Board" inaugurated the "Roman Catholic Bible Society." After initial difficulties about the text and notes, the NT was published in 1815 "stereotyped from the edition published by authority in 1749," i.e., Challoner's revision, though the notes were abridged and the text modernized ("said" for "saith"; "my" for "mine"). Between 1816 and 1829 the text of Challoner's third revision was published in several editions. Dr. John Lingard made a translation of the Gospels from the Greek, using the Vulgate wherever possible. In 1857 Cardinal Wiseman approached Newman about the possibility of a new translation but nothing came of it. It must suffice to say that during the next hundred years ninety different editions of the NT were published and fifty-six of the complete Bible; a figure that does not include the vast number of editions appearing in America (See H. Pope: English Versions, 719–46).

Twentieth-Century Catholic Versions

The Westminster Version is an unofficial (i.e., not commissioned by the Hierarchy) English translation from the original languages. The NT under the direction of Cuthbert Lattey, S. J., was completed in 1936; but the OT remains unfinished. The translation of both Testaments, though uneven, is good, and the version is accompanied by copious notes and commentaries. It is interesting to notice that in the OT proper names appear as in the AV and not as in the Vulgate.

Confraternity Version of the New Testament (NT) was begun in the U.S.A. before the 1939–45 war as a translation from the Vulgate under the auspices of the Episcopal Committee of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine. This translation of the NT was published in 1941.

New American Bible—Early in 1944 in conformity with the encyclical of Pope Pius XII, Divino Afflante Spiritu, the Episcopal Committee of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine requested the Catholic Biblical Association of America to produce a completely new translation of the Bible from the original languages of Hebrew, Aramaic, and Greek, and to present the sense of biblical text as accurately as possible. The better understanding of these languages and the steady progress of the science of textual criticism allowed the translators and editors to approach more closely than ever before the sense of what the sacred authors actually wrote.

The OT, first published as a series of four volumes, was, upon completion of the NT in 1970, named the New American Bible. The translation has had great influence upon the American Catholic people, especially in widespread use in public worship.

Further advances in biblical scholarship and identification of pastoral needs brought about a revision of the NT text, completed and published in 1986. The revision fulfilled a fourfold purpose: (1) greater consistency of vocabulary, (2) sensitivity to the need of inclusive language in favor of women, (3) greater attention to public proclamation in sacred liturgy, and (4) provision of more abundant and upgraded explanatory material. The Revised NT, like the first edition, was accomplished with the collaboration of scholars from other Christian churches in response to the encouragement of Vatican Council II (Dei Verbum 22).

Knox Version—In 1939 Monsignor Ronald Knox was asked by the English Hierarchy to make a translation of the NT from the Vulgate. Knox's aim was to express the Bible "in timeless English" in a style that was "accurate, intelligible, idiomatic, readable." He pointed out that a literal translation was not always accurate. The NT, authorized by the Archbishops and Bishops of England and Wales, appeared in 1945. The preface stated that it was not intended to displace the Rheims version of the NT, "on the contrary we now have two official versions in the Church in this country." The translation was completely new, breaking away from all previous translations and became popular both in England and America. It had the overwhelming advantage of being the work of a single author who was a master of English. In 1949 his OT was published for private use only, though it bore the imprimatur of Cardinal Griffin. It represented what Knox himself claimed to be "my idea of how the OT ought to be translated." This meant that his translation was written in a freer, more personal style than was found in the NT. In this edition of the OT the book of Psalms was a translation from the Vulgate Gallican Psalter, but Knox gave in an appendix a translation into English of the new Latin psalter made in 1943 from the Hebrew by members of the Pontifical Biblical Institute. In the 1955 edition of Knox's Bible the Gallican Psalter is replaced by this new psalter.

RSV Catholic Edition—The whole story of the Bible from Wycliffe to modern times has been one of divergence and differences in English versions. In our own days a change in this long tradition is being effected and there is a movement in the direction of a common Bible. Thus the Second Vatican Council commended the making of present-day versions from the original text of the Bible for the use of the faithful, and added: "As opportunity offers, and with the approval of Church authority, such versions can be made in collaboration with our separated brothers and be available for use by all Christians" (De divina Rev., 22). In England it was thought that one practical approach to this ideal would be to edit an existing version. The recently published RSV seemed to be the best starting point. The preliminary difficulties were surmounted and the NT was ready by 1956, but then Cardinal Griffin, who had approved the plan, died and things remained in abeyance until Archbishop Gray of St. Andrews and Edinburgh gave his imprimatur to the NT of the RSV Catholic edition in 1964.

In 1966 the whole Bible in the RSV Catholic edition was published. In it: (1) the deuterocanonical books (known to Protestants as the Apocrypha, are included, and moreover in their traditional Catholic order as in the Septuagint and the Vulgate; (2) in accordance with Canon Law, explanatory notes are supplied; (3) a small number of changes of wording has been made, where the textual evidence is evenly balanced; (4) some passages omitted in RSV have been restored. The publication of this Bible is a great step forward toward the ideal of a common Bible.

The Jerusalem Bible is a translation from the original languages following closely the critical text on which the well-known Bible de Jerusalem is based and providing an English version of the notes appended to the French translation. It thus provides for Catholics in English-speaking countries not only a version from the original languages but an annotated Bible for the first time in many years. The translation, the work of many hands, is adequate, and effectively brings out the meaning. It attempts to render the originals into good standard English, which at times can be beautiful but at others pedestrian. The whole Bible was published in 1966.

Meanwhile in the U.S.A. a promising and significant step of another kind was taken when the production of the Anchor Bible was begun. This is described by its editors as a project of international and interfaith scope: Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish scholars from many countries contribute individual volumes under the general editorship of William Foxwell Albright and David Noel Freedman. Each volume contains a new translation of the particular book concerned, together with introduction and notes; and while the work "is aimed at the general reader with no special formal training in biblical studies, yet it is written with the most exacting standards of scholarship."

LITERARY FORMS OF THE BIBLE

EUGENE A. LAVERDIERE, S.S.S.

Literature cannot be separated from the form in which it is written. A literary form is the exact type of writing which an author uses to express his ideas. The literary form of this article, for instance, is a prose essay. A poem is another kind of literary form, as is a novel, a short story, a sermon, or a listing of the members of a family. Each form has its own rules, special vocabulary, type of punctuation, and style of expression. Only in recent years have scholars tried to identify the various literary forms which the writers of the Bible used to convey their message.

They discovered that the biblical writers used literary forms that were in use by other writers of other books during the same period. This discovery helped scholars answer many questions about the historical accuracy of the biblical text.

Sometimes two different biblical passages by different authors described the same event, but there are obvious differences in what is said about the event. These differences no longer need to be explained on the basis of what actually happened. They can be explained by paying close attention to the nature of the particular literary form which the author used to discuss the event.

Biblical authors took full advantage of available literary resources in their efforts to share their message with others. They used appropriate language, drawing words and phrases from accepted usage, both religious and secular. However, they also drew on the broader forms of literary expression, writing in prose and poetry and expressing themselves through various types of narrative and with a wide range of other forms. In 1943, this expanded approach to understanding the Scriptures was formally endorsed by Pius XII as the right way to study the Bible (Divino Afflante Spiritu, Nos. 35—41).

This approach of studying the literary forms of the Bible has helped clarify questions of a historical nature. It has also opened the Bible to a much richer religious appreciation. The forms of biblical literature are literary "incarnations" of fundamental religious experience in the Israelite and Christian tradition. Because of this, they became the basic language of the heart and mind for all who continue to live in that tradition to express their own religious experience in ways that are true to that tradition. In this way, biblical prayers and hymns readily become our own prayers and hymns; biblical narratives become our story; its discourses address us; and its dialogues voice our own dialogue with God and the Lord Jesus. Vocation narratives continue to call us forth, and the parables of Jesus are ever-present challenges to all whose ears are truly open to hear.

Awareness of the literary forms of the Bible will help the reader to understand more accurately the ancient meaning of the text and will help release the power of this divine and human word in modern living. While special consideration is given in this article to the major forms found in the two Testaments, some of the minor forms which have been woven into their rich fabric will also be treated.

Prose and Poetry: As in all literature, the most general distinction in biblical literature is between prose and poetry. In the Old and New Testaments, both prose and poetry appear in a wide variety of forms. However, since biblical prose will be amply treated in later sections of this essay, the present section is devoted mainly to poetry.

Characteristics of biblical poetry include its concise and rhythmic expression, specialized diction, parallelism, balance of ideas, concrete imagery, and symbolic language. Poetry expresses its ideas at a high level of intensity. It is quite distinct from biblical prose, which is much closer to spoken language. However, since many elements of biblical poetry also appear in prose, it is sometimes difficult to distinguish the two. This is especially true for someone who thinks mostly of rhyme and meter when they think of poetry. Neither rhyme nor meter are found very often in biblical poetry. A good approach to the question of what is prose or poetry in the Bible is to think of placing the passage someplace along a line from pure prose to the very poetic.

Among all the features that make biblical poetry, parallelism and balance are the most distinctive. Biblical poems are divided into stanzas of two or more lines, each of which is usually subdivided into two or three parallel segments.

Sometimes a parallel segment repeats an idea in the previous segment, but using different words to do this (synonymous parallelism):

> For I acknowledge my offense,
> and my sin is before me always.
> (Ps 51, 5)

At other times, the parallel segment sets forth a contrast to the idea in the first segment (antithetic parallelism):

For the LORD watches over the way of the just,
but the way of the wicked vanishes.
(Ps 1, 6)

And sometimes the parallel segments add to the thought formed in the first segment (cumulative or "staircase" parallelism):

Give to the LORD, you sons of God,
give to the LORD glory and praise,
Give to the LORD the glory due his name;
adore the LORD in holy attire.
(Ps 29, 1-2)

By its very nature as poetry, biblical poetry communicates mainly by calling forth experiences and perceptions rather than by making direct statements about reality. This aspect of poetic communication is extremely important for grasping the purpose for which the biblical word was written. An image or symbolic statement which presents God as a rock or a shield, or which compares him to an eagle bearing its young across the sky, is true. However, to be seen as true, the statement must be understood to be an image. Only then will it call forth the picture of the firm ground of life and not just a rock, or the protective presence of God and not just a shield, or the soaring power of God's loving care and not just a bird. The author intended to convey these deeper truths by the use of imagery.

One of the most important aspects of biblical poetry is its relation to the poet's own understanding through faith of the nature of God. God exists at a level above his creation, and human life; but he nevertheless reveals himself through them. The biblical poet is thus challenged to tell about experiences of reality which human words can never adequately express. Straining at the limits of language, the writer turns to poetry and its power to call forth direct insight. Poetry is thus intimately related to the very nature of religious inspiration and the communication of that experience in the words of the Bible.

Fully one-third of the Old Testament is poetry. Although poetry can be found in the historical books, it is most often found in the prophetic and wisdom literature. And, of course, there are the many hymns, laments, and other poetic forms which were gathered into the book of Psalms. Not all the poetry in the Bible is of the same quality. It is generally agreed that Israel's highest poetic achievement is found in the books of Isaiah and Job. The widespread use of poetry in Israel's liturgy as well as in the parts of the Bible devoted to teaching accounts in part for the strong influence of poetry on Hebrew prose writing. The constant appearance of poetic prose in the Bible can also be explained by the intensity of the experience the author wants to present to his readers.

The poetic form appears far less frequently in the New Testament, where no single book can be described as primarily poetic. However, there are evidences in the New Testament of Christian hymns which were coming into being in the early Church. Many hymns are quoted in whole or part in several New Testament works. Along with Old Testament and Jewish hymns, these Christian hymns contributed to the poetic quality of New Testament prose passages.

Narrative and Direct Address: The Bible may tell its story by use of narrative and direct address, two important literary forms. In narrative the writer uses the third person ("he" or "she") to tell the story of Israel or the early Christian community. In direct address the writer uses the second person ("you," "your") to express his religious or ethical concern.

In the Old Testament, narrative is the form used by the writers of Israel's historical writings, as well as a number of short stories such as the books of Ruth, Jonah, and Judith. It is also present in a wide range of other works, however, including prophetic, wisdom, and apocalyptic literature. Direct address is not used as widely as narrative. It is found in some psalms, in prophetic books (especially Jeremiah), and in "didactic," or "instructive," wisdom literature.

In the New Testament, narrative is characteristic of the Gospels, Acts, and the book of Revelation; but narrative sections are also found in some of the letters. While direct address is the basic form of the letters, it also appears as a secondary form in the narrative literature (as in Luke 1, 1-4; Acts 1, 1-2; John 20, 30-31).

Narrative and direct address are not rigidly separate from each other. They often interpenetrate and complement one another. That they do so is quite normal, since the biblical story (narrative) was told with its implications for the religious and ethical life of the readers (direct address) made very clear. In the Bible, ethical teaching is rooted in God's showing of himself in history. The very nature and purpose of biblical literature made it easy for authors to move freely from narrative to direct address and back, depending on whether they were focusing on the subjects of the stories or on the readers being addressed.

In order to understand whether narrative or direct address is being used, the reader should look to see whether the subject or the people for whom the book was written appears uppermost in the writer's mind at any given point in the writing. In John 20, 24-29, for example, the writer's clear attention is on how Thomas the doubter became a believer.

The writer does have an eye, however, on the readers who, unlike Thomas, must believe without having seen Jesus. In these verses, the story is in sharp focus with indirect reference to the readers. In John 20, 30-31, on the other hand, the reader is brought into sharp focus when the author comments on the purpose of the entire gospel. The readers are addressed in a comment arising from the story. These two successive units show both the difference and the close relationship between the two forms as the biblical author seeks to make his message clear.

Even though narrative and direct address in the Bible are closely associated, we must carefully distinguish between them. This is especially so when we approach a literary work from the standpoint of the readers.

Narrative makes its points with the reader primarily through a process of identification. The people in the story, their characteristics and attitudes as well as their relationships to one another, act as mirrors in which the readers can see all themselves and their own life-situations. The story is told concretely, but with an openness to other times and contexts which is characteristic of all classical literature. Thus the story is read as the reader's story. Any change which takes place in the story makes possible a similar change in the reader.

In historical narrative, the entire process is made easier by the fact that the readers belong to a new moment in the same history which is being read or heard. The story of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the story of Moses, the story of Jesus and of Peter and Paul is thus more than a historical account which is able to arouse feelings in us because we are caught up in the people and events in the story. It is also a part of our very own story. Even though the event happened a long time ago, we live in a stream of history which continues to be affected by that event. We are challenged to live daily in its light.

In all such narratives, it is the story and the people in the story which inspire us. It is not the writer. His literary presence remains hidden behind the voice of the narrator. Only when the author tends to use second-person address does he surface to speak to us directly. At such moments, the story and its people recede into the background only to emerge once more when the third-person narrative starts again.

Direct address communicates with the reader by insisting on some kind of response from him or her. It discusses issues directly. It analyzes current behavior; it argues; confronts; exhorts; condemns; and commends. By these means it calls the readers to initial or renewed conversion. It shapes their attitudes. It confirms them in their faith and demands action as the outworking of their faith.

In direct address, the writer's own person is usually at the fore. To the extent that this literary form involves identification, it is with the person and attitudes of the writer that readers are called to identify. Therefore, the writer uses the first person ("I," "me") along with the second ("you," "your"). There are moments, however, when the author steps aside and turns to narrative, using the third person ("he," "she"). A good example of this shift from direct address to narrative and back again can be found in 1 Corinthians 10, 1-13. Paul begins by addressing his readers directly, "I do not want you to be unaware" (v. 1a). Then, in a narrative setting, he tells about Moses and the Israelites in the Exodus. Paul does this to call forth the reader's memory of that great event (vv. 1b-5). He then returns to the use of the first and second person in verses 6-13. This is his application of the narrative to the readers.

The minor literary forms used in narrative and direct address are quite different. Biblical narratives include the many forms found in the literary traditions of antiquity. Direct address includes the various forms used in ancient oratory.

Dialogue and discourse are two of the most important forms found in biblical narrative.

Dialogues suggest the face-to-face nature of direct communication between people. They also give the author the opportunity to put into words the readers' own searching and response to challenges by the use of spoken language. This is done as the author interprets for his readership the meaning of each life of the people who appear in the story. The questions, answers, and confessional statements of Abraham, Moses, and Christian disciples thus become those of every reader who joins in their story. When God himself or Jesus participates in the dialogue, they retain the initiative; the people addressed respond. In this context of divine address and human response in the Bible, many psalms and prayers can be understood as our human response in a dialogue for which a divine address is presupposed.

According to ancient literary custom, discourses and especially farewell discourses give writers an opportunity to speak directly to current situations. In Deuteronomy, for example, the writer through Moses' voice speaks to the Israelites of the seventh and sixth centuries B.C. He emphasizes that the covenant is not something only in the remote past. It is also a present and immediate reality. In John 13—17, Jesus' statements are used to shed light on the nature of the community which centered about the apostle John toward the end of the first century A.D.

in Ephesus. In Acts 20, 17-35, the voice of Paul addresses the Lukan churches of the mid-eighties. Narrative writers could thus speak to their contemporary readers in a manner that seemed like direct address while still telling their story.

Some of the literary forms used by biblical writers are rooted more in the significance of the history and the importance of the people whose story is told than in the literary customs of the time. Thus Israel's ancient and evolving laws were included in the story of Moses the lawgiver. Thus the prophetic oracles and messages were incorporated in the story of the prophet who uttered them. Thus Jesus' proclamation of the good news of the kingdom, his pithy sayings, and his parabolic teachings were placed in the gospel accounts of what God accomplished in and through Jesus' person. Thus apostolic teaching was presented in Acts' story of the early growth and development of the Christian communities. Biblical narratives closely reflect the spoken word and the life context of the communities from which they sprang.

In the Old Testament, direct address includes (1) the traditional styles of prophetic speech in which the prophet often says his message is a word of God to Israel, and (2) Israel's teaching tradition in which tested sayings for practical living were recorded for the education of officials and the general public. Isaiah is an example of prophetic speech, and Proverbs of teaching. The writers in both forms used vocabulary and figures of speech which were long established in many parts of the ancient world. The written word reflects the original spoken word. The prophet's function was to speak God's word to the king or the people. The wise teacher taught young Israelites by word of mouth. He had to phrase his teaching so that it could easily be remembered. He used parallelism and other devices to assist his learner's memory.

In the New Testament, the direct address form of the letters uses long-accepted patterns of letter writing. For instance, there is an address which starts with the name of the writer. This is followed by naming the person or group to whom the letter is sent. This is followed by greetings from the writer. Then the body of the letter comes, followed by final greetings from the writer. The New Testament letters combined some of the characteristics of Semitic letters with others from the Greek world. Profoundly Christian in spirit, this form was deeply influenced by the tradition of preaching of the apostles and other early church leaders. So much was this so that we must speak of a new, distinctively Christian letter form which is best described as a "Christian apostolic letter."

These letters were substitutes for a personal visit by one of the apostles and for the personally spoken word of the apostle. The letters therefore are close to the writer's spoken word. They proclaim and teach. They often contain long segments which are modeled on the oratorical methods of the day. Paul and others write in their letters in a sharp imaginary debate with people who oppose the truth of the Christian faith. Some supposed objector states his case; the writer answers the objection, and this raises another question which needs answering. The effect is similar to listening to a tight rhetorical argument. Good examples may be found in James 2, 2-4, Romans 2, 1-23, and 1 Corinthians 9 and 15, 35-36. Sometimes Paul may use methods of argumentation used by the rabbis. Good examples are found in Romans 1, 17 and Galatians 4, 21-31.

The letters were intended to be read when the people to whom they were sent gathered for the Eucharist. It is therefore understandable that they used many traditional forms of expression current in the early liturgy. For instance, there is the influence of the homily with its discussion of faith issues and its exhortation to Christian living, as in Romans 1, 16—11, 36 and 12, 1—15, 13. The letters also include many of the Christian community's prayers, creeds, hymns, liturgical greetings, and blessings.

History, the Covenant Formulary, and Myth: Most of the Old Testament is very concerned with history. This is true of the historical books and of Israel's prophetic and wisdom literature. This concern with history is closely linked to the historical nature of Israel's religious experience of God. He is ever seen as the God of Israel's Fathers, the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

This section focuses primarily on historical writing in the Pentateuch, Joshua, Judges, 1 and 2 Samuel, 1 and 2 Kings, 1 and 2 Chronicles, Ezra, and Nehemiah. Since the historical nature of these works varies considerably, they provide ample grounds for observing the forms of historical writing used in ancient Israel.

Similar to the writing of history in other ancient cultures of the Near East, Israel's history was written so that the past was always seen from the point of view of the time of writing and the need at that time to help shape the future. Historical writings summed up the meaning of Israelite life in order to express the meaning of the present at a time when events seemed to have broken the line with the past. This kind of writing is very different from modern historical writing. It is a different literary form. There is also a religious value system which underlies the account of events and gives meaning to those events.

The writers of biblical history intended to inspire their readers and to help them live purposefully within their own historical tradition. Accordingly, the focus of biblical history is on the meaning of events rather than on the "objective" description of those events. Modern historical writing is also interpretive, of course, but it emphasizes precise chronology, geography, and comprehensiveness.

The writers of Israel's history believe that God is both creator and lord of history. For Israel, God shows himself in all of creation and in every facet of history, but especially in human life and in those historical events in which life is saved from death and provided with expansive development. Biblical writers frequently refer to these events as God's signs and wonders on humankind's behalf. Modern historical writing, however, is mainly secular in orientation. It does not view events with faith in the God of history as its basic understanding of the meaning of history. It presents history in purely humanistic terms. It finds historical order in the succession and linking together of human events without reference to God's creative and saving presence.

The literary form of Israel's historical writing was greatly influenced by the wording of ancient covenants. These were treaties between nations, people, and the gods, associated especially with the Hittite people of Anatolia about 1800-1500 B.C. These treaty forms outlined the past, present, and expected future relationship between a vassal kingdom and its Hittite sovereign. They provided Israel with a good model for understanding its own life and history in relation to its divine Lord.

The form of these treaties is fairly simple. Like the Hittite or other human sovereign, God introduces himself, recalls his prior history with Israel, and sets forth the law which must govern those who enter into a covenant relationship with him. He also outlines the curses which will befall the unfaithful as well as the blessings which those who are faithful will enjoy. These elements recur at many points in Israel's historical writing. In Exodus' presentation of the decalogue, for example, the text begins with God's self-introduction, "I, the LORD, am your God," and continues with a historical statement, "who brought you out of the land of Egypt, that place of slavery" (Ex 20, 2). Then the commandments or laws of the covenant (Ex 20, 3-17) follow. Much of the book of Deuteronomy is modeled on the covenantal form. Deuteronomy provides a good example of covenantal blessings (28, 1-14) and curses (28, 15-68). The book of Joshua concludes with a covenantal renewal ceremony which sets forth the basic charter of Israelite life within the Promised Land (24, 1-28).

Given the importance of the covenantal form, it is possible to view all of Israelite historical writing as an expansion of the recitation of God's relations with his people used in the covenantal form. The religious significance of historical writing in the Bible is thus very carefully defined.

The nature of biblical history, especially when seen as an expression of the covenantal relationship between God and his people, provided scope for varying degrees of historical accuracy in matters of chronology, geography, and comprehensiveness. When the events narrated were closer to the writer's own times, personal observation and court records rendered the account far more reliable in terms of modern methods in the writing of history. This accounts for the distinctive flavor of 1 Samuel, 1 and 2 Kings, Ezra, and Nehemiah. The story of earlier periods, however, is marked by the heroic or romantic nature of epic and saga traditions. The people written about and the fundamental significance of their lives and actions are indeed historical, but the presentation emphasizes God's initiatives and purposes in forming the Israelite nation with relatively less interest in details of historical precision. Such is the case in most of the Pentateuch as well as in parts of Joshua and Judges.

The first eleven chapters of Genesis are much closer to mythical forms of writing. Myth, in this case, must not be understood to mean that the events told were fictional or untrue. A myth is a profoundly true statement which speaks to universal aspects of life and reality. It is a statement whose meaning rises above time and space. Although biblical myths were influenced by other mythical statements of the ancient world, they are used by the biblical writers to express history's relationship to God. They point to history's origins at the moment of the world's creation. They speak of the beginnings where history touches eternity, and, therefore, to moments which cannot be historically described. Myth is thus essential to biblical faith. We do the Scriptures a serious injustice if we read myth as though it were history. Such a tendency must be resisted along with the opposite tendency to read biblical history as though it were mythical. By reading the early chapters of Genesis with sensitivity to poetic symbol and imagery, we can easily avoid such temptations.

Gospel, Tradition, and Midrash: The narratives of Mark, Matthew, Luke, and John use the literary form called gospel. All four tell the story of Jesus Christ. They include the general outline of Jesus' life, but focus especially on the end of that life with Jesus' crucifixion and resurrection. Jesus' story, however, is not told for its own sake, but it is told to enable Christians to develop a self-understanding with which to face the challenges of the last third of the first century. Accordingly, the various conditions in which the early Christians lived and the situations they had to face influenced the gospel form. They affected the context, wording, and emphases of the narrative.

The Gospels were written in the historical context of the first century. Besides the contemporary situations, the tradition of preaching, teaching, and liturgy used in the growing Christian communities also influenced the gospel form. The most important source of the gospel form is thus the shape and nature of the early Christian assembly. What makes the Gospels distinctive is their origin from the traditional patterns of expression in the assembly with its gospel proclamation, teaching, eucharistic celebration, hymns, and prayers.

While all four gospel narratives have a great deal in common, they also vary considerably. Mark is the oldest gospel and is an important literary source for Matthew and Luke. It focuses chiefly on the deeds of Jesus and his urgent call to suffering discipleship. Matthew relies more heavily on formal discourses of Jesus which are appropriate for a Jewish-Christian church which has been excluded from Judaism. Writing for gentile Christians, Luke transforms Mark's minor journey theme into a major structure about which to organize his data. Viewing his work far more in the manner of a historian, Luke even wrote a second volume, Acts, which presents the missionary development of the early church. In John, Jesus speaks a long farewell discourse. More than any other, John's gospel tends to poetic prose. This characteristic is seen clearly in the opening section. It is an adaptation of an early Christian hymn used by believers in the Johannine community.

One of the characteristics of all gospel writing is reflection on the meaning of events in the light of the Scriptures. From the beginning, this kind of reflection had been the most fundamental principle in New Testament methods of arriving at theological understanding. Standing in the Jewish and biblical tradition, Jesus himself had presented his work and message in relation to the Scriptures.

To best understand the Gospels, however, one must go further and note the various ways such reflections were carried out. At times the Scriptures were cited directly and applied. A Scripture text thus illumined the meaning of later events in the life of Jesus and of the Christian community. Frequently, however, the same effect could be achieved by the simple use of well-recognized biblical language when referring to an event. The most extensive use of this procedure appears in the Jewish form called midrash. It is the retelling of a biblical story with a view to bringing out its meaning for a later generation. The Christian community developed from Jewish roots. Therefore, the early Christians and the gospel writers readily used this form of writing. However, the Christian intent was usually far more to bring out the meaning of a present event in the light of the Hebrew Scriptures than to provide a formal commentary on the ancient biblical story. The result was a kind of midrash-in-reverse.

Midrashic writing is especially prominent in Matthew's and Luke's accounts of Jesus' birth and infancy. In those accounts the meaning and implications of Jesus' life and work are set forth in highly biblical terms. Although there are frequent direct quotations from the Scriptures in these narratives, biblical language and phrases are present throughout. The infancy narratives can thus be compared to gospels in miniature in which multiple biblical references from many parts of the Old Testament form a marvelous theological tapestry. Elements in the infancy narratives which are more biblical and poetic than historical should not be considered untrue. Rather, they are meant to pierce beneath the surface of historical observation and to present the divine truth concerning the significance of Jesus for human history.

Through a better understanding of the literary forms of the Bible, today's reader can find more clearly that the Bible is truly good news for today.

BIBLICAL THEMES

CAROLYN OSIEK, R.S.C.J.
DONALD SENIOR, C.P.
CARROLL STUHLMUELLER, C.P.

The richness and scope of the Bible is far greater than any series of categories can contain. The following themes, however, are central to the Bible's reflections on God and his relationship to us. Seven themes have been selected because they are basic concepts that span the entire Bible (SALVATION, SPIRIT, COVENANT, and WORSHIP) or because they are of particular interest to the Christian reader of Scriptures (KINGDOM, CHURCH, and CHRISTOLOGY). These themes are related to each other. That fact will be noted by referring the reader to other themes at various points in the article. Numerous references to Bible passages enable the reader to trace the themes throughout the Bible itself.

SALVATION

The triumph of life over death is one of the Bible's most basic concerns. Death is seen in the biblical tradition to be the result of sin. It is part of the curse laid upon Adam as a consequence of his transgression of the command of God (Gn 2, 17; 3, 19; Rom 5, 12-14). Other actors in the drama, however, are also sometimes blamed: the devil (Wis 2, 24) or Eve (Sir 25, 23; 1 Tm 2, 14). Death is thus now ordained by God (Sir 41, 4), but it was not originally intended (Wis 1, 13-14; 2, 23).

Life was originally seen as long survival (Is 38). It quickly takes on a spiritual dimension. It is the result of keeping God's commandments (Dt 30, 15-20) and, above all, of loving him (Dt 30, 6). Life is, therefore, for all (Ez 18). In the later writings of the Old Testament, the sense of life as immortality beyond the grave begins to emerge (Wis 3, 1-5).

The experience of the Exile in Babylon and the search to return to restore the nation is symbolized by Ezekiel's vision of the dry bones restored to life by the breath of God (Ez 37). This experience caused people to think of reward and retribution based on an individual's faith and actions instead of being only the result of the sins or merits of the community or of one's ancestors (Ez 18). This faith is most strikingly expressed in the account of the martyrdom of the mother and her seven sons under the persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes. Here the reward of the martyr clearly includes a hope of bodily resurrection from the dead (2 Mc 7, 9, 11, 23, 29).

The hope of salvation as bodily resurrection is based on a strong sense of looking forward to the final Day of the Lord. It is rooted in the belief and hope that God's power and ultimate triumph will be made clear to all on the last day. (See KINGDOM.) This looking to the future for ultimate salvation is already strong in the prophetic tradition (Is 35, 4; 56, 1; 62, 1). The prophets affirm that the faithful remnant of Israel will surely be saved (Is 10, 20-21; 28, 5; Am 3, 12; 5, 15). Salvation is not limited to the people of Israel alone, however. Yahweh's saving power can extend to all the ends of the earth (Is 45, 22). (See COVENANT.)

Out of this yearning for God's future salvation comes a kind of writing that looks into the Last Days in highly symbolic language. These ideas appear in some of the later writers of the Old Testament, for example, in Ezekiel and in Daniel, and are well developed in the New Testament. In this dramatic kind of writing the account of how God will come at the Last Day to save is given to the writer in a revelation (Mk 13; Mt 24; Lk 21; Rv 1, 19; 4, 1). The future saving action of God will be accompanied by frightful cosmic signs (Mk 13, 24-25; Mt 24, 29; Lk 21, 11; 21, 25; Rv 6, 8, 12-17), but this revelation of what will occur is meant to be the consolation and encouragement of the just while they still live (Mt 10, 22; Lk 21, 28).

While 2 Maccabees suggests that bodily resurrection is part of God's act of salvation only for martyrs, or at least only for the just (2 Mc 7, 14), the New Testament seems to assume that bodily resurrection will occur both for the reward of the just in eternal life and for retribution to the wicked in eternal punishment (Mt 25, 46; Jn 11, 24). The principal focus in the New Testament, however, is still on the resurrection of the just (Jn 11, 24; Rv 20, 4).

John and the Letters of John explain salvation as eternal life in yet another way. Jesus himself is the Life (Jn 1, 4; 6, 33, 35, 51; 11, 25; 14, 19). True life is hearing and believing in him (Jn 3, 36; 5, 24), knowing the Father and Son (17, 3), and loving one another (1 Jn 3, 14).

In the Gospels, salvation is intimately connected with present bodily or mental well-being (Mk 15, 30-31; Mt 8, 25; 14, 30), yet it also is something that will come about in the future (Mk 8, 35 and parallels; Lk 13, 23; Jn 12, 47). For Paul, salvation is closely connected with being put into a right standing with God. This new standing comes not through works of the Law (Rom 3, 28) but through the saving death of Christ which reconciles us to God (Rom 5, 10, 18). We too must be dead to sin as Christ was in order to remain in that salvation (Rom 6, 3-11; Col 3, 3-5).

The prophets saw God as Savior of Israel (Is 12, 2-3; 63, 8; Jer 4, 14). The New Testament writers saw Jesus' mission in the world as that of saving his people (Mt 1, 21; Lk 2, 11; 19, 10; Jn 4, 42; Phil 3, 20; 2 Tm 1, 10; 2 Pt 1, 11). This is accomplished through his presence and deeds (Lk 7, 50; 19, 9) and through the proclamation of salvation made in his name by his ministers (Acts 4, 12; 16, 17). (See KINGDOM.)

Salvation is intended by God for all (1 Tm 2, 3-4; 4, 10) but demands a response of repentance, faith, obedience, and good deeds (2 Cor 7, 10; Acts 2, 21; Phil 2, 12; Mk 10, 17 and parallels; Mt 7, 14).

SPIRIT

The biblical theme of Spirit also deals with the penetration of God's life in the world. In the Old Testament the Hebrew word for "spirit" means a mysterious and penetrating force. It is used for what was truly strong, durable, and beyond human control. The word can be translated into English as "wind," "breath," or "spirit" (Gn 1, 2; 2 Sm 22, 16; Is 11, 4; Ez 13, 13; 27, 26). In the earliest texts the Spirit of the Lord came upon or enveloped warrior-judges (Jgs 3, 10; 6, 34; 14, 6; 19; 1 Sm 11, 6). The prophets who often spoke the word of God under the direct control of the Spirit of God were passive under this mighty force (Nm 24, 2; 1 Sm 10, 5-13). At times the Spirit settled more quietly and permanently on a person. It still gave exceptional gifts to that person: Joseph (Gn 41, 38-40), Moses with the elders (Nm 11, 17, 25), and Joshua (Nm 27, 18).

The classical prophets, those with books to their names, avoided performing external wonders, and so turned attention away from emphasizing the Spirit. A few exceptions would be Hosea 9, 7 or Isaiah 11, 1-9. During the Exile, prophets like Ezekiel and Second Isaiah reintroduced the Spirit as the powerful agent for purifying and restoring the despondent people (Ez 36, 23-28; 37, 1-14; Is 42, 1; 44, 1-4). Still later in the postexilic age, the Spirit is viewed as the principle of creation (Gn 1, 1; 2, 7; Jb 26, 13).

God's power and guidance also came through angels. At first they appear as messengers (Gn 19, 1; 28, 12; Ps 104, 4) or as members of God's heavenly court (Is 6, 2-3; 14, 13-14; 1 Kgs 22, 19-23). Called "Cherubim" or "Seraphim," statues were made of them to "protect" the ark of the covenant (Ex 37, 6-9; 1 Kgs 6, 22-28). Angels symbolized God's majesty (Ez 1).

The term "angel of the LORD" was often used to refer to God himself (Ex 3, 2; Jgs 6, 11-24). Popular devotion to the angels increased at the time of the Exile and after (Tb 12, 15-16; 15, 15-16; Jb 4, 18-19). Guardian angels are mentioned for individuals (Tb 5, 22; Ps 91, 11-12) or for nations (Dn 12, 1). They were sometimes healers (Tb 3, 17; 12, 14-15) or mediators for prayer (Zec 1, 12; Jb 5, 1).

While the doctrine of spirit and angel appeared in a vague form throughout Old Testament times, that of demons was not as clear. Witchcraft was forbidden (Lv 19, 31). At first Satan was thought to be an opponent of people, but still in God's throne room (Jb 1, 6; Zec 3, 1-5; cf. 2 Sm 24, 1 with 1 Chr 21, 1). Very late, Satan is seen also as God's enemy (Wis 2, 24). Books written in the years between the writing of the Old and New Testaments expanded the activity of spirit, angels, and demons.

In the New Testament, angels appear as messengers and agents of God to people (Lk 1, 11, 26; Mt 1, 20; 2, 13, 19; 28, 2-7; Acts 5, 19; 12, 7, 11), and as representatives of individual people to God (Mt 18, 10; Acts 12, 15). They are thought to be brilliant in appearance (Mt 28, 3; Acts 6, 15), and will accompany the Son of Man when he returns in glory (Mk 8, 38 and parallels; Mt 25, 31). In Revelation, seven spirits stand before the throne of God. They seem to represent the seven cities to whom the letters of Revelation 1—3 are addressed (Rv 1, 4; 3, 1; 4, 5), even though they are later sent out upon the whole earth (Rv 5, 6). The "angels" of the churches in the headings of the seven letters (Rv 2, 1, 8, 18; 3, 1, 7, 14) are best understood, however, as the human leaders of those communities.

Evil spirits are often spoken of as "unclean spirits" (for example, Mk 1, 23; 3, 11; 6, 7; Mt 12, 43-45; Lk 4, 33). The devil, or Satan, is their leader, just as Michael is leader of God's angels (Rv 12, 7-9). Satan tempts both Jesus (Mk 1, 13; Mt 4, 1; Lk 4, 2) and his followers (Acts 5, 3; 1 Cor 7, 5; 2 Cor 2, 11; 12, 7). The devil and his angels are subject to God, even though Jesus' disciples (Lk 10, 17-20), but not without the struggle of the cosmic battle in which they have been ultimately defeated and cast out of heaven (Jude 6; 2 Pt 2, 4; Mt 25, 41; Rv 12, 7-9). (See KINGDOM.)

God himself is Spirit (Jn 4, 24), yet the "holy Spirit" is usually spoken of as one sent by the Father, as the principal agent in the conception of Jesus (Mt 1, 18; Lk 1, 35) and in the casting out of demons (Mt 12, 28). The Spirit is a power received by believers after the resurrection of Jesus (Jn 7, 39; Acts 1, 8; 15, 8). The holy Spirit hovered over Jesus at his baptism (Mk 1, 10 and parallels; Jn 1, 32-33) and is the source of the divine power flowing from Jesus which was able to transform disciples into fearless apostles (Jn 1, 33; Acts 1, 5; 2, 4).

The holy Spirit is advocate (one who pleads on behalf of a needy person) and intercessor (Jn 14, 16-17; 15, 26; 16, 7), teacher of truth (Jn 14, 26; 16, 13; 1 Jn 4, 6), gift and pledge of future glory (2 Cor 1, 22; 5, 5). The Spirit is the inspirer of prophecy (Lk 1, 41, 67; 1 Cor 14; Rv 1, 10; 17, 3; 19, 10; 21, 10), and Christian prophecy is seen as carrying Old Testament prophecy forward in a new age (Acts 2, 16-21, 33; 4, 25; 28, 25). Indeed, it is the presence of the Spirit in the Church that guarantees and gives it validity as the assembly of God's faithful. (See CHURCH.)

COVENANT

The Greek word for "covenant" can also be translated "testament," the name often given to the entire Bible as the Old and New Testament (Heb 7—9). Covenant, therefore, brings us into the heart of the Scriptures, and also into the heartrending division between Judaism and Christianity (Rom 9, 1-5).

The idea of covenant originated with treaties between nations. As such, it was used to describe events in the secular world of the ancient patriarchs (Gn 14, 13; 21, 32; 26, 28). Among the various types of treaties between nations, the one between a strong overlord and a vassal nation gradually became the model for the covenant between God and Israel at Mount Sinai. According to this type, frequently called a "Suzerainty Treaty," the overlord had shown exceptional kindness in protecting the vassal. The vassal, in turn, pledged loyalty and obedience toward the more powerful nation. For Israel, covenant was able to transform religion and law into an expression of gratitude for God's deliverance.

Six elements of the Suzerainty Treaty, especially as it evolved in Deuteronomy, occur in the biblical covenant: (1) the preamble, with the name of the Great King (Dt 5, 6); (2) benefits bestowed by the Great King upon the vassal (Dt 5, 6); (3) laws which demand exclusive loyalty (Dt 17—21); (4) depositing the text in a sanctuary with periodic rereading (Dt 31); (5) lists of witnesses (Dt 32, 1); and (6) blessings and curses (Dt 27—28).

Covenantal laws were either "apodictic" (straightforward and self-evident), like the Ten Commandments (Ex 20, 1-17; Dt 5, 6-21); or "casuistic" (arrived at by a process of argumentation and reasoning), like the majority in Exodus 21 and 22. The apodictic laws were nonnegotiable. Still they did evolve, as a comparison between Exodus 20 and Deuteronomy 5 reveals. The casuistic laws were actually famous cases, remembered more as standards to direct future decisions than as absolute laws. Development and change can be seen as well in the liturgical celebration of the covenant. A careful reading of Exodus 19 and 24, as well as Deuteronomy 25 and 31, Joshua 24, or Psalm 68, shows that the renewal of covenant in a sanctuary setting became ever more evident; and the religious meaning became ever more at the heart of the covenant.

Covenant presumes a specially chosen people, a concept appreciated especially by Deuteronomy (Dt 4, 37; 7, 6-7; 10, 15; 14, 2). This sense of being an elect people was symbolized liturgically by the holy city of Jerusalem or its sacred temple (Dt 12; 16—17). (See WORSHIP.)

The prophets further developed the notion of covenant and election by making them refer to the inner religious and moral condition of a person. Amos stressed the idea of "remnant," meaning not all Israelites by birth but only those endowed with a true spirit (Am 3, 1-2, 12; 5, 15). Hosea compared the covenant to the marriage bond (Hos 2, 16-18) while Jeremiah and Ezekiel began to foresee a new covenant written on the heart (Jer 31, 31-34; Ez 36, 26-27), an idea inspired by Deuteronomy 6, 4-9. During the Exile, Isaiah 42, 6-7 and 49, 6 foresaw a universal covenant with the Gentiles achieved through Israel as the suffering servant. This vision can be traced to such passages as Hosea 2, 21-24 and Jeremiah 31, 35-37. Although covenant seemed to separate one elect people from all the nonelect, still it evolved in such a way as to become more of an inner disposition which God breathed into the heart of all peoples, regardless of race or nationality.

Jesus continued this development. He did restrict his apostolate "only to the lost sheep of the house of Israel" (Mt 15, 24). Nonetheless, he saw himself as the suffering servant of Isaiah 42, 49—50, and 53 (Lk 9, 21-27) and in still other ways endorsed a bond or covenant that expanded the Mosaic covenant beyond its customary interpretation (Mt 12, 1-8; 15, 1-20; Lk 19, 1-9). Jesus instructed his disciples to celebrate a new covenant in his body and blood. The Eucharist was not intended to replace the Passover sacrifice of Judaism, but to bring it to a new perfection (Mk 14, 24; Mt 26, 28; Lk 22, 20; 1 Cor 11, 25). (See WORSHIP.)

At first, the followers of Jesus worshiped at the temple as faithful Jews. They offered their Eucharistic service at home (Acts 2, 42-47). Unfortunately, many factors contributed to a rift between Jesus' disciples and their Jewish kinsfolk. The Church considered herself the true Israel, the rightful offspring of Abraham (Gal 4, 24-31; 2 Cor 3). (See CHURCH.)

Later New Testament writings reflect the ever-growing split between Christianity and Judaism. Hebrews argues that Jesus' sacrifice on the cross and his heavenly priesthood replaced the many Jewish sacrifices and the hereditary priesthood of the Levites and Aaron. The longest quotation of the Hebrew Scriptures in the New Testament (Jer 31, 31-34) concludes that "Jesus has obtained a more excellent ministry now . . . of a better covenant, founded on better promises" (Heb 8, 6). The special rights and privileges of Israel as a priestly people were now applied to all Christians (Ex 19, 5-6; 1 Pt 2, 9; Rv 5, 9-10; 21, 2-3, 9).

Covenant, then, is a political idea, which was religiously applied to Israel as God's chosen people. It was then made personal and inward as it was extended to all peoples, while still maintaining its essential mystery of God's personal, redemptive love.

WORSHIP

Biblical worship developed within "salvation history" (the history of the saving acts of God for his people). Different from all other ancient religions, Israel's story did not begin with the mighty act of first creation, but with God's compassionate response to the people's cries of oppression (Ex 3, 7). (See KINGDOM; SALVATION.) The earliest creeds of the Old or New Testament are frequently records of what God has done in the midst of human history, such as the Exodus out of Egypt or the occupation of the Promised Land, or like the public ministry of Jesus, his death, resurrection, and the sending of the Spirit (Dt 26; Jos 24; Jgs 5; Ps 68; 105; Rom 1, 1-5; Acts 2; 7; 13, 16-41). These events of themselves would have made little or no impression upon human history. Only as "salvation history," recorded in the Scriptures and celebrated in the liturgy, in other words as worship, were these actions remembered and thus able to exercise an impact eventually upon world history.

At first, during the formative age of Moses and desert wandering, Israelite worship possessed no sacred place, only a sacred object called the "ark of the covenant," a chest some 3′ 9″ long and 2′ 3″ in width and height (Ex 25, 10-22). It contained at least the two tablets of the Decalogue (Ten Commandments) (Dt 10, 1-5), perhaps the rod of Aaron, and some manna (Ex 16, 32-34; Heb 9, 4). Above the ark was a golden plate, called the "propitiatory" (or "place of meeting") (Ex 25, 10-22); and it was considered God's footstool (Ps 132, 7; 1 Chr 28, 2). The ark symbolized the Lord's continuous protection and guidance (Nm 10, 33), especially in times of war (Nm 10, 34-35; 1 Sm 4, 4-5).

David brought the ark to Jerusalem (2 Sm 6, 12-19) as a way of linking his dynasty and capital with Mosaic origins. (See KINGDOM; COVENANT.) In building a temple as a permanent abode for the ark, Solomon was responsible for a radical shift in Israel's religion. The ark no longer led the people in their journeys; rather they now journeyed in pilgrimage to the sacred place of the temple. In 587 B.C., the ark was destroyed along with the temple, city, and dynasty (Jer 3, 16-17; 7; 26), but it was thought to reappear at least symbolically at the end of time (2 Mc 2, 4-8; Rv 11, 19).

Many qualities of the ark and the temple were said to apply to Jesus, the Church, and individual Christians (Jn 2, 21; Rom 3, 25; 1 Cor 3, 10-17; 6, 19). (See CHRISTOLOGY; CHURCH.)

Israel's feastdays combined great historical moments of salvation with the cycles of the agricultural life of a farmer: the lunar cycle appeared in the Sabbath (Ex 20, 8-11) and the new moons (2 Kgs 4, 23); the solar cycle with the spring festival of Passover (Pasch) (relating the celebration of the Exodus out of Egypt and the barley harvest) and Pentecost (relating the giving of the law on Sinai and the wheat harvest), or with the fall feast of Booths (relating the ark or temple and the olive harvest). See Exodus 12 and 23, 14-17, Leviticus 23, and Deuteronomy 16. A New Year's festival (Nm 29, 1-6) and a Day of Atonement (Lv 16) probably existed very early. During the Exile, fasting took on an important religious meaning (Zec 7, 1-7). After the Exile, two new feasts became very popular: Purim (Est 9, 20-32) and Hanukkah, or Rededication of the Temple (1 Mc 4, 52-59).

The Church began to substitute Sunday for the Sabbath (Acts 20, 7; 1 Cor 16, 2; Rv 1, 10), while Passover was associated with the death and resurrection of Jesus (Lk 22, 1-20; 1 Cor 5, 7-8), Pentecost with the descent of the Holy Spirit (Acts 2), and Booths with the exaltation of the Holy Cross in the Basilica of the Holy Sepulcher at Jerusalem.

Temple worship included: the reading of the Scripture (Dt 31, 9-13, 24-29; Neh 8, 8), the psalms as adapted to many communal and individual needs, and liturgical actions such as processions (Ps 24; 68), holocausts with the gift entirely burnt in adoration (Lv 1—7), peace offerings or sacred meals such as the Passover (Ex 12; Dt 26), and the sprinkling of blood to symbolize a renewed bond of life (Ex 24, 3-8; Lv 16; 17). Another important ceremony was circumcision (Gn 17, 9-14; Lv 12, 3), which the prophets linked with purity of heart (Jer 4, 4; Dt 10, 12-22).

These ritual elements were absorbed within the Church in various ways. Baptism combined the purpose of circumcision and ceremonial washing with water with the mystery of Jesus' death and resurrection (Gal 5, 6; 1 Cor 10; Acts 2, 38-41; Rom 6, 3-4). The Eucharist united traditions about the manna and miracles in the desert with the Jewish Passover and the redemptive death and second coming of Jesus (Jn 6; Lk 22; 1 Cor 10, 16-17).

KINGDOM OF GOD

The "Kingdom of God," or Reign of God, is an important theme in the entire Scriptures, but takes on special significance in the New Testament because of the mission of Jesus.

The concept is ultimately rooted in Israel's experience of God as one upon whom the people depended for their very life and hope. (See WORSHIP.) It was Yahweh who had rescued them from slavery in Egypt and had given them their nation and their land. The rule of Yahweh directly over his people was one reason why Israel was reluctant to accept human monarchy as its form of government (cf. Jgs 8, 23). At first, the people had been content with a loose confederacy among the various clans, but the need for a more centralized government and the influence of the surrounding Canaanite cultures led Israel to establish a monarchy (cf. 1 Sm 8—9). But Israel still stoutly maintained that Yahweh alone was ruler over them; the king was merely the instrument of God's power (1 Sm 8, 22; 1 Chr 28, 5).

Israelite monarchy reached its highest point quickly. After the Hamlet-like Saul came the promising David. Under his rule, the land was united and the central government established in Jerusalem. Political consolidation went hand in hand with religious centralization. Worship at local shrines was suppressed in favor of worship at the Jerusalem Temple. (See WORSHIP.) David's ruthless misuse of his power to gain Bathsheba as his wife (2 Sm 11—12) was a preview of the flawed history that would follow. Solomon, David's brilliant son, brought further glory to Israel, but he also significantly contributed to that strange pattern of infidelity which Israel's kings would practice down to the Hasmonean dynasty only a century before Jesus.

But even if the succession of kings in Israel died out, the dream of the "kingdom of God" did not. The people still longed for the day when their true ruler, Yahweh himself, would come to claim Israel for his own. On that day, as the prophets and poets had repeatedly affirmed, justice and peace and prosperity would abound. Thus the theme of the Kingdom of God was one of the ways Israel expressed its longing for God himself. To speak of David as the ideal king and to hope for the restoration of a renewed Davidic dynasty became a way of expressing hope in future salvation. (See SALVATION.)

Although the theme of the coming of the Kingdom was only one way among many to express Israel's hope for salvation, it is the one Jesus used as the keynote of his own ministry (Mk 1, 14-15). The synoptic Gospels, in particular, organize the entire ministry of Jesus around this theme. Jesus' message about the Kingdom can be summarized under the following points:

1. The Kingdom of God Is Near. In his preaching and parables, Jesus proclaims that the Kingdom (or reign) is not merely an elusive future hope, but it is "at hand" (Mk 1, 15), "has come upon you" (Mt 12, 28). Jesus speaks, too, of a future bringing of the Kingdom to perfection when all will be accomplished, but he also says that the effects of God's reign can be experienced now by those who are open to God's grace. The presence of the Kingdom is hidden, but the harvest is sure and the seed is already growing (Mk 4, 26-29). (See SALVATION.)

2. The God of the Kingdom Is Gracious and Merciful. Contrary to the emphases taken by some of the people of his time, Jesus does not speak of the coming of God's reign primarily in terms of judgment. The God of the Kingdom is a God of forgiveness and compassion. This is reflected in Jesus' own ministry of compassion to outcasts and sinners (Lk 15, 1-32) and in his call for reconciliation and limitless forgiveness (Mt 18, 21-35). The mercy of God's reign is also transmitted through the miracles of Jesus. His healing touch, his victory over evil in all its forms, his restoration of sight and life demonstrate that the saving God of Israel is "upon you" (Lk 11, 20). The miracle activity of Jesus shows that the ultimate goal of his Kingdom ministry is the salvation of all creation. Paul reflects this view when he speaks of God's reign's being complete when the "last enemy," death itself, has been defeated (1 Cor 15, 24-28). (See SALVATION.)

3. The Presence of the Kingdom Demands Response. When Jesus announces the Kingdom, he calls for the hearer to "repent, and believe in the gospel" (Mk 1, 15). Much of Jesus' preaching is an urgent call to respond to the graciousness of his Father. The parables of the buried treasure and the valuable pearl (Mt 13, 44-46) are typical of Jesus' eloquent plea for commitment. Conversion is not just a turning away from obstacles to God's reign, but it is a pledge to follow Jesus (Mt 19, 21). The disciples are invited to take up the same ministry of proclaiming the Kingdom's presence and of healing and teaching that Jesus himself inaugurates (Mt 10, 7-8).

The Kingdom of God is one of the New Testament's most fundamental images for speaking of the nature of God as merciful, the person of Jesus as the fulfillment of Israel's hope, and the mission of the Church as continuing the work of establishing God's reign. (See COVENANT: CHRISTOLOGY: CHURCH.)

CHURCH

The early Christians' understanding of their identity and their role in history is expressed in the concept of "church." In the Hellenistic Greek world, the ekklesia ("the assembly of those who are called") was a gathering of citizens to exercise their political rights. The Septuagint often adopted the same word as a translation for two Hebrew words, each of which meant the "assembly" of Israel, brought together for religious instruction or worship (Dt 4, 10; Jgs 20, 2), though often too the word synagōgē is used in the Septuagint for those same Hebrew words (Ex 35, 1; Lv 19, 2; Nm 1, 2; in Jgs 20, 1-2, the two terms seem interchangeable). Regardless of the word used, the "assembly of Israel" is the gathering of its citizens with full awareness of their identity as the People of God. (See COVENANT; WORSHIP.)

Probably under the influence of both Greek and Jewish usage, ekklesia became the usual term for the gathering of Christians to worship or to determine together their course of action (Acts 5, 11; 9, 31; 11, 22; 12, 5; Rom 16, 1, 5; 1 Cor 1, 2). By New Testament times, a synagōgē was a local Jewish assembly for the purpose of prayer, reading of the Scriptures, and instruction. Christian writers usually restricted its use to Jewish congregations (though in Jas 2, 2, synagōgē may mean a Christian assembly, as it does in some later Christian writings). (See WORSHIP.)

The first generations of Christians looked back to Jesus as founder of the Church (Mt 16, 18), which was established on the foundation stones of the apostles and prophets (Eph 2, 20; Rv 21, 14). Responsibility for leadership was entrusted to the twelve men whom Jesus chose from among his disciples to send out as missionaries to announce the good news of the Kingdom (Mk 3, 14-19; Mt 10, 1-7; Lk 6, 13-16; Jn 6, 67-71), first to Israel but ultimately to the whole world (Mt 28, 16-20). (See KINGDOM.) The Acts of the Apostles dramatizes the missionary movement as it progresses from Jerusalem to Samaria and eventually ends with the arrival of Paul in the heart of the pagan world, Rome (Acts 1, 8).

The original group of apostles, under the leadership of Peter (Mt 16, 18; Acts 1, 15; 2, 14, 37), bore witness boldly to the resurrection of Jesus and took the lead in establishing a community of believers who were of "one heart and one mind" (Acts 4, 32-35), united in common worship and sharing of the Eucharist in their homes (Acts 2, 44-47). Even in the first days of the Church, however, human failings were present, as the dishonesty of Ananias and Sapphira (Acts 5, 1-11), the dispute between Greek-speaking and Hebrew-speaking Christians (Acts 6, 1), and the dissension between Paul and Barnabas (Acts 15, 36-41) show.

Leadership in the Church was never confined to the Twelve. Already in the Jerusalem community "James the brother of the Lord," one of its "pillars" (Gal 1, 19; 2, 9), was a prominent figure who participated in major decisions. The members of the Jerusalem Council of Acts 15 assembled to ponder the extent to which gentile converts to the Christian faith should be required to observe the Mosaic Law. The members of the Council are referred to consistently as "the apostles and presbyters" (Acts 15, 2, 4, 6, 22-23). Moreover, Paul unflinchingly considers himself an apostle with the rest (1 Cor 9, 1; 15, 9-10).

The first generation of apostles appointed elders or presbyters in the communities they established (Acts 14, 23) for the work of guiding the Church in living the gospel. Paul usually refers to "churches" in the plural (Rom 16, 4, 16; 1 Cor 11, 16; 16, 19). This expresses his way of seeing each local community of Christians as whole in itself. Yet, at the same time, he stresses communication and communion among the churches. He worked hard toward that goal. Elsewhere, the term churches is used collectively to include all local Christian communities (Rom 16, 16).

The Church is the community of believers (Acts 4, 32), the assembly of the holy People of God (1 Cor 1, 2; cf. Nm 23, 7-10) in which all discriminatory distinctions are to be dissolved in the waters of baptism (1 Cor 12, 13; Gal 3, 27-28; Col 3, 11; Eph 2, 14). It is the great mystery planned by God from all ages and revealed in Christ (Eph 1, 9-10). It is born with the outpouring of the Spirit at Pentecost.

The Church is compared to the branches that grow upon Christ the true Vine (Jn 15, 1-8) and the flock tended by the Good Shepherd (Jn 10, 1-18). The most familiar image is that of the body with many members, all of whom perform different roles but together make a smoothly functioning whole (1 Cor 12, 12-27; Rom 12, 4-5), whose head is Christ (Eph 1, 22-23; 5, 23).

The Church is the bride of Christ (Eph 5, 25-27, 32; Rv 21, 2), a building (Eph 2, 20), the Jerusalem from on high (Gal 4, 26), in its final form the new Jerusalem descending from heaven (Rv 21, 2-4).

Though the expression "new Israel" is never used in the New Testament, Christians are given new commandments (Mt 5, 21-48; Jn 13, 34); and already Paul seems to consider Christians the "Israel of God" (Gal 6, 16). The Eucharist is seen as ratification of the new Covenant in the blood of Christ (Lk 22, 20; 1 Cor 11, 25), and Paul sees himself and his co-workers as ministers of this new Covenant (2 Cor 3, 6). The letter to the Hebrews expands on this theme (Heb 8, 8-12 and 10, 16-17, quoting Jer 31, 31-34; Heb 9, 11-15). Christians are called "the temple of the living God" (2 Cor 6, 16), "a temple sacred in the Lord" (eph 2, 21-22), an "spiritual house" and "holy priesthood" which offers acceptable spiritual sacrifices (1 Pt 2, 5). Many writers in the New Testament, therefore, felt that the Church was for them not only what the Covenant had been for the Jewish people, but also the fulfillment and completion of that which the first Covenant had foreshadowed. (See COVENANT.)

CHRISTOLOGY

Christology is a technical term which means "an ordered process of reflection on the nature and meaning of Jesus." Although none of the New Testament writers are theologians in the technical sense of the word, they did reflect on the mystery of Jesus' person and mission. Therefore, they present us with a variety of christologies.

This reflection seems to have begun with the resurrection itself. (See SALVATION, SPIRIT.) Faced with Jesus' victory over death and his risen presence in the community, the early Christians looked with new understanding upon the entire life, death, and mission of Jesus. They connected this history of Jesus with the message of the Hebrew Scriptures. They pondered the meaning of Jesus for their hopes in the future. All of the New Testament books are written from this resurrection perspective. The Gospels, for example, are not a detached collection of historical information about Jesus. They present that history through the lens of the Church's understanding of Jesus as one who had been raised from the dead and who was alive in his Church.

One of the most important ways the New Testament writers expressed their reflection upon the person of Jesus was to give him special titles drawn mainly from the Old Testament, but now filled with new meaning when applied to Jesus. Some of the most important titles include the following:

1. Christ. The word Christos means "anointed one" in Greek. It was used to translate the Hebrew word Messiah. The title was first used to speak of the king who was anointed, or consecrated, for Yahweh's service (cf. the so-called royal psalms which speak of this anointment: Ps 2; 20; 21; 45; 89). David soon is thought to be the ideal example of the Lord's anointed: one who liberates, unites, and protects his people on behalf of Yahweh (2 Sm 7, 3-16). When the monarchy went into decline, the image of the ideal king was connected with Israel's hope for future salvation: a new David, a new Messiah, would be sent by God to deliver his people (Is 9, 1-6; Mi 5, 1-3). (See KINGDOM OF GOD.) It seems that Jesus himself was hesitant to accept the title of "Christ" because of the nationalistic hopes it suggested (Mk 8, 28-30). In the light of the resurrection, Jesus was clearly seen by the Christians as the expected Messiah, the leader sent by God to rescue his people. Thus Christians applied to Jesus the promises and prophecies which refer to the Messiah in the Old Testament. The frequency of this title in the New Testament gives the impression that in many passages "Christ" has become a surname rather than a title.

2. Son of God. This title, too, was first applied to the king in Israel, because he was chosen by God to rule his people (2 Sm 7, 14; Ps 2, 7). The title was also used of the faithful Israelite who obeyed God and trusted in his love (Wis 2, 13, 16-18; 5, 5). When this title is used of Jesus in the New Testament, it refers to his roles both as kingly Messiah and as obedient Israelite. It is also a way of stressing the intimate bond between Jesus and his Father (Mt 4, 1-11). In later Christian reflection, this dimension of the "Son of God" title will become even more important: Jesus is Son of God because he shares in the Father's own divine life.

3. Lord. One of the most important New Testament titles for expressing the divine power and status of Jesus was "Lord." The title may have originated as a title of respect for a dignitary, not unlike the English word "sir." But it came to be used in the Old Testament as a reference to Yahweh himself. In the New Testament, the title affirms Christian faith in Jesus as one who has been exalted through his resurrection (Phil 2, 11; Acts 2, 36) and who will come in triumph at the end of time (1 Cor 16, 22). This title seems to have been used often in the Church's prayer as an exclamation of worship and praise (Rv 22, 20; Mt 7, 21).

4. Son of Man. This is perhaps the most mysterious of the titles used of Jesus in the New Testament. In Aramaic, "Son of Man" is simply a way of referring to "man" or "human being." But "Son of Man" seems to be used in a more technical sense in Daniel (Dn 7, 13-14) where it refers to a mysterious figure (perhaps a symbol of the nation of Israel) who will be given majesty and power at the end of time. This title is used frequently of Jesus in all four Gospels. It is, in fact, the title Jesus most often uses of himself. Some scholars believe that "Son of Man" is not a technical term, but it refers simply to Jesus' share in humanity: he is the human being.

But it is more likely that the vagueness of the title allowed the early Church to give it a specific Christian meaning. Therefore, it is used to identify Jesus as the one who will come in triumph at the end of time (Mk 13, 26), who had authority even on earth to heal and forgive (Mt 9, 6), but who also had to suffer and to give his life for others (Mk 10, 45).

Many other titles are used of Jesus in the New Testament: for example, Lamb of God, High Priest, Emmanuel, Savior, Holy One, Last Adam, King of Israel, Word, and Servant. The plurality of titles illustrates the depth and richness of the early Church's faith in Jesus. No single title or any combination of them was adequate to express the overwhelming mystery of Jesus' person. Later theology would reflect on this mystery in a more organized fashion, but the ingredients for the Church's confession of Jesus as fully human and yet fully divine are already present in the New Testament itself.

SUGGESTED READINGS FOR THE LITURGICAL YEAR

PATRICK J. SENA, C.PP.S.

ADVENT

The season of Advent is a time of preparation: preparation for celebrating the birth of Christ liturgically at Christmas, preparation for the final coming of Christ at the end of time, preparation for the coming of Christ in so many ways into our lives as we travel our pilgrim way to the heavenly Jerusalem, and preparation for the coming of Christ to us at the moment of our deaths. There are four Sundays of Advent.

Scripture Readings for Advent: Isaiah 11—12; 40; 66, 1-14; Jeremiah 33; Zephaniah 3, 11-20; Numbers 24; 2 Samuel 7; Matthew 3, 1-12; Luke 1, 5-25; 1, 57-80; John 1, 19-34; Revelation 22, 6-21.

Old Testament Readings: The readings from the prophetical books (Jer; Is; Zep) look forward to the rule of God's Messiah; they speak of that glorious day when God's promises to his people will indeed be fulfilled. In the face of every obstacle, whether they are political powers, improper religious practices, or imminent danger to Jerusalem by Sennacherib or Nebuchadnezzar, the writers believe that God will still champion his people and thus turn disaster into a glorious deliverance. The readings cry out for joy at the liberation of the Israelites from Babylon during the time of Cyrus the Great. They speak eloquently of the time of restoration which is to come and of the great joy which shall be visited upon the people who dwell in Jerusalem.

The selections from Numbers and 2 Samuel tell of an individual who shall rise up out of the midst of the Israelites. This individual shall be a descendant of David. God's favor will rest upon him. These are messianic prophecies which in the fuller sense speak of the future Messiah whom Yahweh God will put forward to lead his people into the ultimate peaceful reign of God.

New Testament Readings: The passages from Matthew, Luke, and John inform us about the birth of John the Baptist and his ministry of preparing the way for Jesus, the messianic Son of God. John the Baptist is the last of the prophets to point the way to the fulfillment of Israel's hopes. He makes it clear that Jesus is that fulfillment. The reading from Revelation emphasizes the yearning of every Christian for the coming of the Savior. The prayer of each Christian during the Advent season must be the same as that of the inspired author: "Amen! Come, Lord Jesus!" (Rv 22, 20).

CHRISTMAS SEASON

The Christmas season begins with the Vigil Mass of Christmas and concludes with the Feast of the Baptism of the Lord. Included in this season are also the three masses of Christmas and the feasts of the Holy Family, the Solemnity of Mary, the Second Sunday after Christmas, and the Epiphany. The season highlights the significance of God's becoming man in the Incarnation as well as the early appearances of Jesus to his family, to the Israelites, and to the world.

Scripture Readings for the Christmas Season: Hebrews 1; Acts 10, 34-43; 1 John 5, 5-13; John 1, 1-18; 2, 1-11; Matthew 1—2; Luke 2, 1-21; 2, 41-52; 3, 1-22.

New Testament Readings: The readings from Hebrews, Acts, and 1 John tell about God's plan for us in the Incarnation. With the coming of God's Son, the final unfolding of God's plan has begun. The Son reigns and his throne will last forever and ever (Heb 1, 8). God has acted in history in many ways through the prophets, but now he speaks to us through his Incarnate Son Jesus. We have received the Good News of peace through Jesus Christ (Acts 10, 36), through his birth, his baptism in the Jordan, and the shedding of his blood upon the cross (1 Jn 5, 8), and his glorious resurrection (Acts 10, 40).

The readings from the gospel of John recall the divine preexistence of the Son of God. He is the Father's Word. "The Word became flesh and made his dwelling among us" (Jn 1, 14). Jesus, God's Word, was present at the first of many signs which he was to work, at the Wedding Feast of Cana when he turned water into wine and thus began his public ministry. "His disciples began to believe in him" (Jn 2, 11).

Matthew and Luke recount for us a history of the birth of the Messiah. They tell us that Jesus was born of the Virgin Mary who had conceived by the Holy Spirit while she was engaged to Joseph. Joseph married Mary; the child was born in Bethlehem during the reigns of Herod the Great of Israel and Emperor Augustus of Rome. After his birth, Jesus together with his mother Mary and his stepfather Joseph went to live in Nazareth in Galilee.

Matthew calls special attention in his account to the fulfillment of history by recounting the fourteen generations from Abraham to David and from David to the Babylonian captivity and from the return from Babylon to the birth of the Messiah. David had been the greatest king. The Babylonian captivity and the destruction of Jerusalem had been the lowest point in history for the Israelites. However, the highest point in the history of God's people was the birth of Jesus Christ, the Messiah. Jesus was born for all nations.

Luke emphasizes that Jesus had come for the poor and the lowly. Angels appear to shepherds informing them of the birth of the baby Jesus in Bethlehem. Luke tells us that the Holy Family lived at Nazareth, and it is he who recounts the baptism of the Lord by John the Baptist in the Jordan River (Lk 3, 21-22).

LENTEN SEASON

Lent is a time of walking with Christ on the road to the Holy City Jerusalem in which God's divine plan will be accomplished. It is a preparation season for the celebration of Easter. The catechumens, or converts, are initiated into the message and meaning of Jesus Christ; the faithful recall their own baptism and do penance in acts of self-denial, prayer, and charitable works. Lent lasts from Ash Wednesday through the Chrism Mass on Holy Thursday morning when the Bishop consecrates the sacred oils which are used for baptism, confirmation, the anointing of the sick, and sacred ordination. In addition to Passion (Palm) Sunday, there are five other Sundays in Lent.

Scripture Readings for the Lenten Season: Genesis 3; Exodus 3; Leviticus 17, 1-14; 19; Baruch 4, 5-37; Lamentations 1; Romans 4, 13-25; Philippians 2, 1-11; Hebrews 5; Matthew 6; 21, 1-16; Mark 14, 53—15, 39; Luke 15; John 4, 1-42; 9; 11, 1-54.

Old Testament Readings: The readings from the Pentateuch (Gn; Ex; Lv) speak of the disobedience of human beings in the very beginning and of their fall from God's grace. God sent them out from the garden of Eden. At the same time, the promise is given that the offspring of Eve will one day crush the head of the snake-devil and humanity will triumph over evil (Gn 3, 15). God's people are to know how to act with one another, showing respect for each other. The injunction had been given to Moses to announce to the people, "Be holy, for I, the LORD your God, am holy" (Lv 19, 2). Moses had been called by I AM, Yahweh-God (Ex 3, 14), to liberate the Israelites from the bondage of slavery in Egypt.

The passages from Lamentations and Baruch describe the destruction of Jerusalem in 586 B.C. with its devastation and the exile of its inhabitants. At the same time, Baruch gives hope for an eventual consolation since the captivity was about to end and the city would be restored and once again filled with rejoicing.

New Testament Readings: The Epistles (Rom; Phil; Heb) tell us of what Christ did for us in freeing us from sin and giving us life through his suffering-death-resurrection. Abraham is presented for our reflection as a man of living faith who did believe in what God had promised him (Rom 4, 21). At the same time, we are informed that Jesus "was handed over for our transgressions and was raised for our justification" (Rom 4, 25). Philippians and Hebrews inform us of the obedience of Christ to his Father's command in becoming a man like us in all things but sin, learning obedience through his suffering, and being exalted as the great high priest whom all acknowledge as Lord.

The synoptic Gospels (Matthew, Mark, and Luke—called "synoptic" because they present an overall similar picture of Jesus, in contrast to John's gospel) impress upon us the necessity of fasting, seeking and giving forgiveness, and praying. All of these are so vital during this season of Lent. Luke zeroes in on the lost sheep, lost coin, and lost son in his celebrated passage in chapter 15: all which is lost is found and there must indeed be great rejoicing. The Sacrament of Reconciliation (Penance) administered during Lent assists those lost in sin to be found in the grace of God. Matthew tells us of Jesus' triumphant entry into Jerusalem where the crowds shouted, "Hosanna to the Son of David; blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord; hosanna in the highest" (Mt 21, 9). Yet, it is the long reading selected from Mark which speaks of the passion and death of Christ; shouts of praise on Palm Sunday have given way to shouts of condemnation on Holy Thursday.

With the example of the Samaritan woman of chapter 4 and the man born blind of chapter 9, John gives us representatives of those who have come to believe in the person of Jesus Christ. Belief must go beyond the physical—those things we see and touch and drink—and must come to be rooted in Jesus himself. There can always be a deeper faith experience and growth in faith. With chapter 11, John gives us a good preview of what will happen to Jesus. Lazarus had died and been in the tomb for four days; at Jesus' command (Jn 11, 43), Lazarus came forth from the tomb. Because of this good work, many believed in him (Jn 11, 45), but others sought to kill him (Jn 11, 53). Jesus, in turn, after three days, would be raised from the dead in his glorious resurrection on that first Easter Sunday.

EASTER SEASON

The Easter season begins with the Mass of the Last Supper on Holy Thursday evening and concludes with the celebration of Pentecost. Included in this season are the Easter Triduum of Holy Thursday, Good Friday, the Easter Vigil, and Easter Sunday. In addition the season continues for fifty days and comprises Seven Sundays of Easter, the Ascension, and Pentecost. The Church's sacramental system is highlighted during this period, especially the duties of the newly baptized to lead the Christian life. All of this points to the need of those who have been initiated into Christ to be bearers of the evangelical witness that Christ has indeed died, that he is risen, and that he will come again.

Scripture Readings for the Season of Easter: Genesis 1, 1—2, 4; Joshua 3; Ezekiel 37, 1-14; Psalm 118; Jeremiah 31, 31-34; Ecclesiastes 3, 1-15; Luke 22, 1-23; 24; John 19, 17-30; 20, 19-31; Acts 2, 1-36; 13, 16-43; 1 Peter 2, 1-10; Ephesians 2, 11-22; Hebrews 8, 1-13; 9, 11-23; 1 Corinthians 13, 1-13; 15, 1-26; Revelation 21, 1-21.

Old Testament Readings: The readings from Genesis, Joshua, and Ezekiel outline the history of salvation from the time of Creation when "God looked at everything he had made, and he found it very good" (Gn 1, 31), to the entrance of the chosen people into the Promised Land under Joshua and the restoration of a broken people during the Babylonian captivity under the image of Ezekiel's dry bones—the kingdom of Judah would one day live again, for Yahweh-God had said, "I will put my spirit in you that you may live, and I will settle you upon your land" (Ez 37, 14).

Psalm 118, Ecclesiastes, and Jeremiah emphasize victory, God's providence, and an ultimate fulfillment of hope. The psalm is a prayer of thanksgiving and in the Easter season we apply this psalm to the risen Christ,

> "This is the day the LORD has made;
> let us be glad and rejoice in it."
> (Ps 118, 24)

We are to be thankful for we realize that "there is an appointed time for everything, and a time for every affair under the heavens" (Eccl 3, 1); we realize that Christ's resurrection was God's own choice. All in all Jeremiah tells us to look forward to the day when there shall be a "new covenant" (Jer 31, 31) with the law written on the hearts of the people. Certainly that New Covenant has been realized in the Eucharistic banquet which Jesus has given to us.

New Testament Readings: The readings from the Gospels (Luke and John) tell us about the Last Supper and the Sacrament of Reconciliation (Penance). Luke tells us of the preparation for the Last Supper and impresses upon us that in the drinking from the Eucharistic cup and the eating of the Eucharistic bread, the Kingdom of God has indeed come (Lk 22, 18). For the disciples on the road to Emmaus, Jesus is recognized in the breaking of the bread (Lk 24, 30-31). The Christian recognizes Jesus in the Eucharistic Banquet during the Sacrifice of the Mass. Luke also narrates briefly the Ascension of Christ (Lk 24, 51). John informs us of the last hours of Jesus and that final way of the cross. This is the reading for Good Friday (Jn 19). The joy of the Resurrection has brought us reconciliation: "Receive the holy Spirit. Whose sins you forgive are forgiven them, and whose sins you retain are retained" (Jn 20, 22-23). Through the resurrection, Christ lives on in the Sacrament of Reconciliation bringing peace to those who need it through the forgiveness of sins.

Acts, 1 Peter, and Ephesians emphasize the necessity to evangelize for those who have received the Holy Spirit in Baptism and Confirmation. Acts 2 recounts the Pentecost event and the outpouring of the Holy Spirit through the speech of Peter to the multitude assembled from every nation. Salvation has indeed been extended to every human being: "through him we both have access in one Spirit to the Father" (Eph 2, 18). Paul emphasizes that the history of salvation has been brought to a fulfillment in Jesus Christ by God's "raising up Jesus" (Acts 13, 33). Each Christian, because of baptism into Christ, must "proclaim the glorious works" of God (1 Pt 2, 9). The renewal of our Easter baptismal promises urges us to constantly proclaim the Good News of Jesus Christ and to share that News with our neighbors.

The selections from Hebrews emphasize Christ's priesthood; Christ the priest, before God's throne, prays to God for us his people. He "entered heaven itself, that he might now appear before God on our behalf" (Heb 9, 24). The old pattern of relating to God has been replaced; and there is now a new way of doing things, all because God has established a New Covenant in the blood of his Son Jesus.

Christians are sharers in Christ's resurrection, and as such they are to show love for one another: love which is genuine concern for others, love which is giving and not expecting a return, love which is giving to others what Christ has given to us. Love is the greatest of all the virtues (1 Cor 13, 13).

First Corinthians 15 and Revelation 21 speak about the resurrection of Christ and the ultimate resurrection of every Christian. First Corinthians 15, 3-11 is an early Christian creed affirming belief in the resurrection of Christ. Paul reminds all who follow the Lord Jesus that they shall one day also be raised with him in a "spiritual body" (1 Cor 15, 44). Revelation depicts the new Jerusalem, the heavenly city which is the abode of all who have faithfully followed the Lamb. "The wall of the city had twelve courses of stones as its foundation, on which were the inscribed twelve names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb" (Rv 21, 14). The heavenly city is God's assembly which is based upon the message and the persons of the twelve apostles. As an Easter people, each of us is on our way home to that city.

SEASON OF THE YEAR

This is the longest season of the liturgical year and runs for thirty-three Sundays culminating in the feast of Christ the King on the last Sunday. No single emphasis of the mystery of Christ is celebrated. Instead, there is a focus upon the public ministry of Christ. We follow him upon his life-long path to his coronation as our King.

Scripture Readings for the Season of the Year: Exodus 12, 1-42; Leviticus 16; 23; Deuteronomy 5, 1-21; Numbers 11, 16-25; Sirach 44, 16—45, 26; 46, 1—47, 25; 48, 1—50, 29; Joshua 24, 1-29; 1 Samuel 3, 1-18; 9, 14—10, 27; 16, 1-13; 2 Samuel 6; 1 Kings 3; 12, 1-32; 1 Maccabees 1, 1—2, 70; Ruth 1; Judges 4, 1—5, 31; Judith 15, 14—16, 25; Proverbs 31; Jeremiah 1, 4-10; Hosea 3; Zechariah 9, 9—10, 12; Ezekiel 2, 1—3, 27; Daniel 7, 9-28; Habakkuk 3; Song of Songs 1, 1—2, 17; Tobit 4, 1-19; Job 1, 1—2, 13; 42, 7-17; Psalms 148—150; Luke 9, 51—10, 24; 14; Mark 4; 15, 36—21, 14; Galatians 5, 1—6, 10; 2 Corinthians 4, 1—6, 17; 1 Thessalonians 4, 13—5, 28; 2 Timothy 2, 1—4, 5; Ephesians 4; Colossians 2, 4-23; 1 Peter 3, 8-22; James 5, 1-20; Hebrews 4, 1-16; 11—12; Revelation 1, 1—3, 22; 4, 1—5, 14; 21, 22—22, 5.

Old Testament Readings: The readings from the Pentateuch (Ex; Lv; Nm; Dt) recount the importance of worship for the people of God. Exodus tells of the preparation for the first Passover and the ritual which accompanied it. Jesus later was to become the new Passover Lamb of sacrifice by his saving death and resurrection. Leviticus explains the various religious festivals of the Jews which served as early forms and models of the feasts which we Christians observe today, e.g., Passover—Easter, feast of Weeks—Pentecost, Day of Atonement—Good Friday. The readings from Deuteronomy and Numbers inform us of Moses as the person who represented God to his people and who pleaded with God for the people. Moses could not bear the burden of total responsibility for God's people and so God had him choose seventy respected elders to assist him in governing the people. Moses and the seventy associates were filled with God's Spirit.

The readings from Sirach coming from the second century B.C. praise the famous historical figures of old, beginning with the early patriarchs and continuing down to Simon the high priest of Sirach's own day. God had always worked well in instilling wisdom into his chosen people.

The selections from the historical books (Jos; 1—2 Sm; 1 Kgs; 1 Mc) show important events in the lives of God's people. From 1 and 2 Samuel we read of Samuel's call to be a prophet in Israel; and we learn of his ready response to God, "Speak, for your servant is listening" (1 Sm 3, 10). Samuel anoints Saul as the ruler; and it is Samuel who will reject Saul and then anoint Jesse's son, David, to rule in his place (1 Sm 16, 13). The author of 1 Kings informs us of the great wisdom of Solomon, David's son. Solomon prayed for wisdom; God heard him and gave him the power of judging wisely (1 Kgs 3, 12). But with the death of Solomon, Rehoboam came to the throne; he did not govern wisely. The Kingdom was divided into two kingdoms. The reading from 1 Maccabees tells of the revolt of Mattathias and his sons against Antiochus and his pagan practices. Throughout all of the historical books, it is God who constantly champions his people and gives them the ultimate victory. The people are constantly on the move, a pilgrimage people in search of a final resting place.

The readings from Judges, Ruth, Judith, and Proverbs focus upon four different women. Deborah is a strong woman who brought peace to a troubled land with the assistance of the army of Barak (Jgs 5, 31). Ruth is an example of filial piety who follows her mother-in-law Naomi wherever she goes. Judith is a beautiful woman who sees her role as a deliverer of her people in the face of the oppression of Holofernes. The woman of Proverbs is the housewife who by her daily toil helps her family find its rightful place in God's world.

The prophets (Jer; Zec; Hos; Dn; Ez; Hb) recount an age old story: God raised up the lowly to confound those in high places. Jeremiah claimed to be too young to accept God's call, but he did accept it. Ezekiel was promised bitterness when he was called to be a servant of the Lord. Hosea's personal life was marked with tragedy for his wife was unfaithful to him. Habakkuk, in the face of impending destruction, sings aloud a faith-filled song of the greatness of God. Zechariah shouts for joy, "Shout for joy, O daughter Jerusalem! See, your king shall come to you" (Zec 9, 9). Daniel looks forward to the time when someone would come whose "dominion is an everlasting dominion that shall not be taken away" (Dn 7, 14). That someone was destined to be Christ the King.

The remaining Old Testament readings concern themselves with the people of God on the march. Tobit recounts a father's advice to his son as he sets out to seek a wife. Job informs us of a patient man who, though faithful to God, nevertheless suffered; we are reminded that God's ways are not our ways and that suffering does play a part in the lives of all the faithful. The Song of Songs recounts the ways of love between a man and a woman; we understand that love to be expressive of Christ's love for his Church and his love for us. The Psalms sing out in praise for each pilgrim as one on the way must constantly sing, "Let Israel be glad in their maker, let the children of Zion rejoice in their king" (Ps 149, 2).

New Testament Readings: The Gospels focus in upon the public ministry of Jesus in whose footsteps we follow. Luke recounts the beginning of Jesus' journey on the road to Jerusalem for the final fulfillment of his mission. Jesus commissions seventy-two disciples to evangelize in his name (Lk 10, 1), for the Lord uses his people to assist him as Moses had done with the seventy elders. The Christian has been invited to the wedding feast and must be humble in accepting Christ's call (Lk 14, 11); the call is one for service. Mark explains to us how the Kingdom of God must grow (Mk 4, 1-34), using the examples of the parables of the sower, the lamp, and the mustard seed to illustrate that growth. With a baptismal-faith commitment to Jesus Christ, the Kingdom of God begins to grow in our lives. That initial faith must continue to be nurtured for growth; we show maturity of faith when we demonstrate our love for God and neighbor by our actions and not merely our words (Mk 12, 30-31). True happiness is in following the teachings found in the Sermon on the Mount (Mt 5—7). Jesus preached about true serenity; and yet, he continued on his journey to Jerusalem where He predicted he would be put to death (Mt 20, 18).

The gospel reading for the Feast of Christ the King is taken from John. Jesus is King of Truth for he is Truth itself (Jn 18, 37). The Church's year of pilgrimage ends with that solemn proclamation.

Acts of the Apostles tells of the Council of Jerusalem (Acts 15). It was decided there that gentile Christians need not observe all of the ancient Jewish law. This chapter is pivotal in showing the definitive break between the community of Israel and the new Christian community. And in the following chapters of Acts (Acts 15, 36—21, 14), we follow Paul as he travels in the lands bordering upon the Mediterranean Sea, bringing the message and knowledge of Jesus Christ to the peoples of Asia Minor, to the Coastal Islands, and to Europe itself. Like a mustard seed planted in the ground, the faith began to grow and to spread for the faith had been planted in the fertile hearts of people. The content of that faith is found in the other readings.

"For freedom Christ set us free; so stand firm and do not submit again to the yoke of slavery" (Gal 5, 1). We are free from the slavery of sin and from everlasting death. Christ himself is a spiritual treasure who dwells within us. We are fragile, but in Christ we have all the strength we need (2 Cor 4, 7-9). Through the reconciliation brought about by Jesus, we have become friends with God (2 Cor 5, 18-19).

As members of the Body of Christ, redeemed by his blood, we await the Lord's coming again for us at the end of time and above all at the end of our present human existence (1 Thes 4, 14). This present life will issue forth into union with the glorified Savior in heaven. The steadfast person is urged to "bear your share of hardship along with me [Paul] like a good soldier of Christ Jesus" (2 Tm 2, 3). Such a one must seek consolation in God's written word: "All Scripture is inspired by God and is useful for teaching" (2 Tm 3, 16).

God gave gifts of ministry to be used: "he gave some as apostles, others as prophets, others as evangelists, others as pastors and teachers, to equip the holy ones for the work of ministry, for building up the body of Christ" (Eph 4, 11-12). All good gifts have been given for the common good and are for the building up of the body of Christ and not for its deterioration. The faithful must always live in union with Jesus (Col 2, 19), under Christ's control, acknowledging his Lordship. A person who lives under the Lordship of Christ will surely know what it is to suffer: "For it is better to suffer for doing good, if that be the will of God, than for doing evil" (1 Pt 3, 17).

The remaining readings (Heb; Jas; Rv) announce the end of the pilgrim's journey. Hebrews reminds us what the pilgrim life was like for many people whose stories are told in the Old Testament. Yet, it is only through the redemption brought by Jesus that these faith-filled people have been saved. "Yet all these, though approved because of their faith, did not receive what had been promised. God had foreseen something better for us, so that without us they should not be made perfect" (Heb 11, 39-40). The journey ends on Mount Zion united with Jesus who is the mediator of this New Covenant through his blood (Heb 12, 24). On Mount Zion, we shall be united with the saints of old and our loved ones who have gone before us and who now wondrously enjoy the sleep of peace.

We receive much help as we travel our own pilgrim paths to our permanent dwelling with the Lord. James informs us of how when we are ill we are to call for the presbyters and be anointed with oil for a healing of both body and soul. We have the Sacrament of the Anointing of the Sick to assist us as we work out our salvation on our pilgrim paths (Jas 5, 14-15).

Christ, our glorified Savior, has not left us orphans. He continues to care for us and he is constantly in our midst. We are held secure in the palm of his strong right hand (Rv 1, 16). He is a most caring, providing, guarding, and loving God-Redeemer. We have received the message; we cannot waver lest he come like a thief in the night to bring judgment (Rv 3, 3). For those who have won the fight and struggle of this life and remained in the love of Christ, there is an invitation to the heavenly throne room where we shall constantly sing the praise of the Father and the Lamb who is Christ (Rv 5, 13). In the holy city, "night will be no more, nor will they need light from lamp or sun, for the Lord God shall give them light, and they shall reign forever and ever" (Rv 22, 5). What great joy awaits those who faithfully make their yearly journey from Advent to the Feast of Christ the King. "The grace of the Lord Jesus be with you all. Amen!" (Rv 22, 21).

SOLEMNITIES OF THE LORD DURING THE SEASON OF THE YEAR

Celebrated under this heading are Trinity Sunday, the Feast of Corpus et Sanguis Christi (Body and Blood of Christ), and the Feast of the Sacred Heart. Trinity Sunday celebrates the Unity of God in the Trinity of Persons with an emphasis upon the role of each of the Persons. Corpus et Sanguis Christi commemorates the Eucharist and its importance in the life of the Church. The Sacred Heart celebrates the compassion and love that Jesus has for his followers.

Scripture Readings for the Solemnities of the Lord: John 3, 1-21; Ephesians 1, 3-14; 1 Corinthians 11, 23-33; 1 Peter 1, 3-21; Psalms 1—2; John 10, 1-39.

The Psalms speak about true happiness in following the Lord and learning to accept mercy from his hands.

New Testament Readings: John 3 recounts the work of the Trinity in baptism, and John 10 informs us of the compassion of the Good Shepherd. Ephesians 1 is an early Trinitarian liturgical hymn. First Corinthians informs us of the earliest written tradition about the Eucharistic assembly. First Peter speaks eloquently about the perfect sacrifice of Christ.

STUDY GUIDE QUESTIONS

JOHN A. SWARTZ

Genesis: What different pictures of God and man emerge in the two different creation stories in chapters 1 and 2? How do the first eleven chapters show the progress of man's sin? How is this theme in chapters 1—11 a fine introduction to the patriarchal stories in chapters 12—50? What values and virtues of Israel are celebrated in the different stories about the patriarchs in 12—50?

Exodus: How does the sequence of epic material in chapters 5—12 show Yahweh is the Lord of History? How do the origins and call of Moses in chapters 2 and 3 indicate the relationship of the Israelite hero to Yahweh? If Israel became God's people in the Exodus event recorded in chapter 12, how does the Sinai covenant indicate a response to God's love? How is this covenant a refinement of that covenant made with Abraham (Gn 17)?

Leviticus: What in this "liturgical handbook" indicates the purpose of legislation in Israel's religious life? Was the call to holiness limited to any one group within Israel (11, 41-46)?

Numbers: How does this book show that the author was concerned in showing God's providence for his people? What in the book indicates that the Sinai covenant was both conditioned by and directed at the total life of Israel?

Deuteronomy: How does this book reflect the theology that God rewards the good and punishes the evil? How is that theology reflected in the commandments (chapter 6)? What in the book indicates the author's preoccupation with extending Israel's faith tradition through education? What was built into this book to insure Israel's concern for its poor? Why would this book emphasize the importance of a central place of worship while Genesis reflects a proliferation of shrines? Why was this book often used by Israel as a tool of reform?

Joshua: How does the author of this book use the "reward theology" of Deuteronomy to interpret Israel's experience after entering the land? How is the plan of conquest described in Deuteronomy 31 executed in Joshua 1—12? What was the basic strategy used in dividing the land? How is this later distribution of land reflected in the description of the twelve tribes of Israel in Genesis 49? How does the program outlined in chapter 23 insure Israel's faithfulness to God?

Judges: If Joshua showed the continued faithfulness of God toward his people, how did the author of Judges indicate man's continued unfaithfulness to God? How does chapter 2 provide the basic theme of the book? How is this pattern of unfaithfulness, conversion, forgiveness, and recurring unfaithfulness reflected in the work of each of the judges?

Ruth: Why is this book used in the Jewish liturgy for the feast of Weeks? How does the book reflect the providence of God in continuing the Davidic line through his forefathers? Does the woman Ruth serve as a model for any significant virtues for our own age?

1 Samuel: In what way does the author show the holiness of Samuel in chapters 1—7? What was Samuel's great role in this book? How did he determine the meaning of kingship and prophecy for ages to come? Was kingship unanimously welcomed by the people of Israel? What problems did Samuel see in kingship (chapter 8)? What qualities led to the choice of Saul as first king; what weaknesses led to his demise? In chapter 12, Samuel summarizes the tragic consequences of Israel's infidelity to God: how is that summary a reflection on the plan of Joshua 23, and its implementation in Judges 2? What qualities led to David's choice by God? How did Jonathan's selfless love for David insure David's future as king?

2 Samuel: After the death of Saul and three of his sons (1 Samuel 31), how did David effect his acceptance as leader of northern and southern Israel? What function did the taking of Jerusalem and the building of the ark there play in the unification of the North and South? While David was later honored as Israel's greatest king, what in 2 Samuel indicates that he was not a "plaster saint"? What purpose did the sequence of scandals in David's family play in chapters 8—24? Why does this sequence make the pivotal messianic message of 2 Samuel 7 so important for Israel's self-understanding?

1 Kings: How does the author's commentary on the rule of different kings indicate his concern for showing God's fidelity to the covenant? What function does the prophet play in this book? Are the dying words of David to his son Solomon any clue to the theology found in the book? Why is the author forever indicating how promises were fulfilled in Israel's history? Why does the author spend so much time recalling the episodes in Elijah's life? What do these episodes reveal about the importance of the prophet and of God's word in Israel?

2 Kings: What was the purpose of the author in including the story of Elijah's conferring the Spirit on Elisha? How do the two prophets differ? Why is the author forever comparing later kings to David? Which of the kings walked in the way of David? How are the reforms of Hezekiah and Josiah an indication that the covenant had not been taken seriously?

1 Chronicles: Why does the author indicate that the Davidic covenant was more important than that of Sinai? How does the author show that David is the founder of the religion of Judaism? What stories from David's life are noticeably absent in the work of this author? How is David's position as founder of the religion established when the reader knows that Solomon built the temple? How is the book in its attitudes to Levites, priests, and prophets a "church book"?

2 Chronicles: Why is it that the author eliminates the parallel history of the northern kingdom in his work? Is there anything in the book which justifies attributing to the author a "God of war" or a "God of exclusiveness"? How can one explain the author's attitude to the northern portion of Israel which considers it "mission territory"?

Ezra: What in the book indicated Ezra's concern for teaching the religious tradition to women and children? What so motivated him? Ezra loved religion and brotherhood; how does his approach to the people facilitate his sharing this love with them? Is there anything in the book which shows Ezra's awareness that Jerusalem needs a beautifully adorned temple, and knowledge of the Law?

Nehemiah: What about Nehemiah's character can explain his ability to motivate and inspire his fellow Israelites to rebuild the temple? How does Nehemiah's concern for the poor affect his decisions when rebuilding the temple? Was the rebuilding of the temple a work without obstacle? How could the book of Deuteronomy's theology explain Nehemiah's concern for Jerusalem and the poor?

Esther: How does chapter 11 provide insights into the purpose of this book? Why is the book used in the celebration of the feast of Purim by contemporary Jews?

Job: How does this book show that the theology in which good are rewarded and bad punished cannot explain all human experience? Which characters in the book defend this theology by denying their experience? Which characters opt for a new theology when faced with contradictory experience? How are the beginning and ending of the book like the beginning and ending of a contemporary television drama? What is the purpose of God's speech in chapters 38—40? Why has history identified Job as a man of patience?

Psalms: In what ways is the book of Psalms similar to a contemporary human book? Although all the Psalms should be considered the song-prayers of the community, are there clues in any of them to indicate that these song-prayers emerged from an individual's life experience? In what way do some Psalms function as reflections of history? Are there any which indicate wisdom, or the right way to do things in life? What moods are reflected by the individual Psalms? What needs did the Psalms meet in Israel's life? What needs can they fill today?

Proverbs: How does the author show that religion is more than a segment of man's life and that it is everything man does? How does this kind of literature tend to focus on the individual rather than the community? What are the advantages and disadvantages of such an emphasis? How much is God a part of the author's vision? How does his view of woman differ in chapters 1—8 and in chapter 31? What indicates that the book is a collection of different sayings and poems? What about the style of the book indicates the manner in which wisdom is to be found?

Ecclesiastes: How is the thinking about God and man in this book a radical departure from that found in Proverbs? How is the book at times very optimistic while seeming at times most pessimistic? According to the author, in what is life's meaning to be found? If the book of Job asked the question, How does God govern his world? what is the more profound question which Ecclesiastes asks? What makes this book so forever relevant?

Song of Songs: What insights into the love relationship between man and woman does this book provide? What would have motivated early Christian writers to see in this book the symbolic relationship of God to his people?

Isaiah: What in Isaiah's calling indicated his unique insight into the meaning of God (chapter 6)? How does Isaiah understand Jerusalem's role in the missionary activity of God's people? What shows his unwillingness to tolerate Israel's abandoning trust in Yahweh for the "security" of human technology? What contributions does Isaiah make to an understanding of the Messiah? Of what wrongdoing did Isaiah accuse his people? Did he envision a radical and total conversion of these people to Yahweh? How does the author of chapters 40—55 show the loftiness and the intimacy of Yahweh? What purpose did the author have in showing that the God of this captive, exiled Israel was the God of all creation? How does he show that even pagan princes are governed by his plan (chapter 45)? In four separate "songs" (40, 1-4; 49, 1-6; 50, 4-9; 53, 12), what contribution does the author make to Israel's understanding of suffering and its dimension of service? What in chapters 56—66 indicates that the prophet needed to confront his people with their evil rather than provide hope for them in their despair? How does this section differ from chapters 40—55?

Jeremiah: How do the vignettes of King Ahaz (2 Kgs 16, 2-5), Hezekiah (2 Kgs 18, 3-8), King Manasseh (2 Kgs 21, 2-6) and King Josiah (2 Kgs 22, 2-3) help to clarify the call of Jeremiah in chapter 1? What could he be tearing down, and what would he be building up? What evil was Jeremiah attacking in chapter 7? What was the price Jeremiah had to pay for playing the prophet (chapters 11; 26; 37; 38)? While a prophet spoke God's word in words, and testified with his life, what special means of communicating did he use in chapters 13, 18, 19, and 24? What is so special about the new covenant described in chapter 31? What insights into the person of Jeremiah and his relationship with God can be found in the autobiographical pages (chapters 12; 15; 20)? What do the biographical sections in chapters 26—45 contribute to this understanding?

Lamentations: How is the theme of chapter 1 reminiscent of Jeremiah's chapter 2? Why was this book chosen for reading in the Jewish community at the times of fasts in remembrance of the destruction of Jerusalem?

Ezekiel: If the departure of God's presence from Jerusalem in the psychedelic language of chapters 1, 3, and 8—11 pointed to the failure of Israel, what in chapters 40—48 signaled hope? How does the vision of the dry bones sum up Ezekiel's message of despair and hope? If the Exile had been seen by the prophet as a rejection of God's people, why would he emphasize personal responsibility for sin (chapter 18)? If Ezekiel saw, as the other prophets did, the great sin of Jerusalem as social wrongdoing, why does his vision of the new Jerusalem in chapters 40—48 envision the great need of Jerusalem as a return to authentic worship? What does the motive attributed to Yahweh for restoring Israel (chapter 36) indicate about his concept of God? What concept of God emerges in chapter 34? Why has Ezekiel been called the first "pastor of souls"?

Daniel: How do the stories in chapters 1—6 show how God takes care of those who are faithful to him? What in those chapters would indicate that the writer is addressing an audience which was suffering persecution for its religious beliefs? How does the author use history to indicate that God's purpose will ultimately prevail? How do the endless lists of rulers and empires, the interventions of heavenly mediaries, and the remote image of God help to encourage hope in those who are suffering persecution? What purpose does the author have in describing past history with which his audience was familiar as if it were to happen in the future? What in those visions suggests this is the case?

Hosea: What in Hosea's personal life is reflected in his understanding of God's relationship with Israel (chapters 1—4)? For what sinfulness does Hosea condemn Israel? Does the author in reflecting on Israel's history (chapter 11) suggest anything about God's attitude toward Israel's past? Does the book end with despair or hope?

Joel: What in Israel's experience would cause her to see in a plague of locusts God's dissatisfaction with his people? What response does the book indicate was expected of the people? How is the whole experience used as a vehicle for hope? What could the book have meant by "day of the LORD"?

Amos: What was Amos's purpose in proclaiming judgment on all the surrounding nations before confronting Israel with her sin? How does the author indicate the inner compulsion which drove him to speak God's word? How would such a testimony help a "southerner" win acceptance by the "northerners" who were Israel? What in chapter 7 shows that the "southerner" from Judah had difficulty winning acceptance in the North, Israel? How does Amos use the different visions to reflect Israel's relationship with God?

Obadiah: How does the story in Genesis 25 help one to understand Israel's feelings toward Edom (Esau) as they are reflected in this book? What mixed meaning does the "day of the LORD" have for Israel and for her enemies?

Jonah: How does this book attempt to transform a narrow concept of God into a much larger one? Does Jonah's attempt to run away from God indicate his understanding of God? Why was Jonah reluctant to see Nineveh undergo conversion? What about the book's ending shows the greatness of God?

Micah: How is Micah's reflection in 6, 6-9 an adequate summary of the prophet's notion of God? What sins did Micah find Samaria had committed which welcomed God's wrath? Of what sins did he accuse Jerusalem and Israel (chapters 2—3)? Does the book provide any hope? If the prophecy of the destruction of the temple and Jerusalem in chapter 3 seems especially disheartening, how is this balanced by hope in chapter 4?

Nahum: How do the approaches to Nineveh differ in Jonah and Nahum? How would you explain that? What aspects of God does each present?

Habakkuk: What answer does God give to Habakkuk concerning the problem of evil?

Zephaniah: About what wrongdoing does Zephaniah accuse the foreign nations? How is the city, Jerusalem, guilty of the same? What qualities will mark the small "remnant" who will be saved?

Haggai: What motivation is given for rebuilding the temple? How does the message of chapter 1 differ from the words of God in 2 Samuel 7?

Zechariah: How does Zechariah show the importance of social concern? Does his preoccupation with angels show an exalted concept of God? How does he suggest a pattern of repentance to his people?

Malachi: How is Israel's worship unworthy in Malachi's vision? What noble insights does he have into marriage? What image of God does Malachi emphasize?

Tobit: What values and virtues in Jewish life does Tobit manifest? What does the function of Raphael in this book indicate about God's concern for his people? Is there any sense in which this book suggests how one should live religiously in a secular society? Does the book suggest separation from those who do not believe? Or is the book missionary in its purpose?

Judith: How do the crises in chapters 2—8 prepare the reader for the emergence of Judith in chapter 8? How is the reaction of the coastland people in 2, 28 different from that of the Israelites in 4, 8-13? Is there any indication in Achior's testimony concerning Israel (5, 5-20) of the outcome to be expected for Israel? What insights does Judith provide into God's working with people (chapter 8)? What qualities of Judith in chapters 8—14 show her worthy of honor? Are there any parallels of valiant women elsewhere in Israel's history?

Wisdom: How does the author answer the problem that the evil seem to prosper while the good suffer? What in the book would indicate that the author was reinforcing the faith of his people at a time when many were abandoning that faith for secular wisdom? How does he indicate that man should find God through the things which God created? What reflection is made on those who failed to find God through his works?

Sirach: What does the author mean by wisdom? In what does the good life consist? Does Sirach provide any insight into friendship (chapters 6; 8; 12; 27; 37)? What do chapters 17 and 40 have to say about the dignity of man? How does Sirach's listing of famous men (chapters 44—50) vindicate Israel's claim to a wisdom of her own? What little hints at family life are to be found in the author's counsel on raising children, honoring one's spouse, respecting parents, and being hospitable to others?

Baruch: Why would the reflections on history in this book have given hope to a community which had lost its home, its temple, and a whole way of life?

1 Maccabees: How does chapter 2 provide the theme for the whole book? What is Mattathias's role in the Jewish struggle for freedom of religion? What roles did Judas Maccabeus, Jonathan, and Simon play in this struggle? How does Mattathias use history to inspire his people (chapter 2)? What strategies are used throughout the book to bring about religious freedom? Does the use of the name "Heaven" for God say anything about their understanding of him? What function does the temple play in their struggle for freedom? And how is the Law seen as an important tool in their attainment of victory?

2 Maccabees: How does the author indicate the importance of the Law in the life of Israel (chapters 6—7)? Is the image of God in this book any different from that in 1 Maccabees? Is the author's outlook on death any different from that of the author of 1 Maccabees?

Matthew: Why does Matthew trace the ancestry of Jesus to Abraham while Luke traces it to Adam? Is there any similarity in the infancy of Moses (Ex 2) and that of Jesus? How would the placing of the teaching of Jesus on a mountain in chapter 5 have recalled Israel's Exodus experience? How would you contrast the moral demands of Jesus with those of the scribes and Pharisees (chapters 5—7)? Why did Matthew introduce the instruction of Jesus' twelve disciples (chapter 10) with two chapters of miraculous works? What is the reason given for speaking in parables (chapter 13)? Is that the same reason given in Mark 4? Why is it that the passion narratives in Matthew, Mark, and Luke are so similar while other parts are so dissimilar? What could you conclude about the Gospels when seeing the difference in details in the Resurrection stories of Matthew, Mark, and Luke?

Mark: Is there anything about the size of this gospel which indicates that it might be earliest? What is John's relationship to Jesus in the first chapter of Mark? After most of the miracles what response is given to the meaning of Jesus? How does that prepare the reader for the question asked by Jesus in chapter 8? How is the response of Peter one with which Jesus seems pleased, and yet with which he is not pleased at all? Is there any reason why Mark's passion narrative should show Jesus as one who went to his passion and death all alone? Why is the response of the Roman centurion to the death of Jesus so unique (chapter 15)? Why is it that throughout Mark Jesus had told those who had been healed or who had witnessed the healings "not to tell anyone"?

Luke: Why does Luke dwell on the comparison of John and Jesus in the infancy stories? Does that help to explain why John seems to be in prison when Jesus is baptized (chapter 3)? Why is it that Luke includes more stories about Jesus praying than any other gospel? Could one conclude anything about the audience of this gospel when he knows that Jesus taught the "Our Father" in Luke to those asking how to pray (chapter 11) while in Matthew to those needing to know how to pray better (chapter 6)? Why does this gospel include so many stories about those rejected by society: sinners, tax collectors, poor, prodigals, and thieves? Why does the author emphasize Jerusalem by beginning and ending his gospel there and by including a journey to Jerusalem narrative in chapters 9—18? How does this gospel relate to Luke's other work, the Acts of the Apostles?

John: Why does John trace Jesus' origins to the beginning of time? How does he use the light-darkness theme throughout the gospel? How does John make clear the relationship of John the Baptist to Jesus? Does John provide any new insight into the call of the disciples which the other gospels do not share? How do different people react to the seven different signs in chapters 1—12? How is John 12, 37-50 a good summary of the first part of the gospel? After gathering together his disciples in chapters 1—12, what gifts does Jesus share with them in chapters 13—15? What is John's purpose in showing that Jesus was in complete control of his passion and death (chapter 10)? What in the passion narrative shows he was in complete control? What Resurrection stories are only found in John's gospel? Why?

Acts of the Apostles: Why could one say that verse 8 in chapter 1 is a summary of the mission geography of the whole book? What events led to the mission of the Church beyond Jerusalem? beyond Judea and Samaria? What key preaching about Jesus is found in the sermons of Peter in chapters 2—5 and 10? Why are three different accounts of Paul's conversion included in this book (chapters 9; 22; 26)? How does each of the missionary journeys of Paul extend the mission of the Kingdom closer to the "ends of the earth" (Rome)? What important issues comfronting the early Church are faced in this book?

Romans: How does Paul indicate that both Jew and Gentile have received the message of salvation? What in Paul's eyes is necessary for salvation? How does he argue in chapter 4 from the experience of Abraham? How does Paul show (chapter 6) that man today can enter into the saving work of Jesus? What function does the Law serve in a Christian world (chapters 7—8)? How does Paul explain the position of Israel before Christ, after Chirst, and at the end of the world? What is expected of the relationship between Christians in chapters 12—15?

1 Corinthians: What are the divisions within the Corinthian community about which Paul speaks (chapters 1; 5—6; 11; 15)? How has the word wisdom become a means of division between Jews and Gentiles (chapter 2)? How does each of the metaphors used for the community in chapter 3 help us to understand the Church? If the Eucharist had come to divide the Corinthian community, what does Paul suggest as a remedy (chapter 11)? Does Paul's discourse on love help us to deal better with diversity in the community (chapter 13)? Why does Paul list all the appearances of the risen Christ before speaking of bodily resurrection?

2 Corinthians: What experience of Paul would explain his defending his apostolate in this book? How does he defend it? Why does Paul praise the generosity of the Macedonian community when addressing the Corinthians (chapter 8)? Why does Paul describe the many difficulties attached to his apostolate (chapters 11—12)?

Galatians: What issue of the early Christian community does Paul treat in chapter 2? How does the description of his call as apostle prepare one for his position on that issue (chapter 1)? What purpose did the Law serve in Paul's eyes (chapters 3—4)? How does Paul use the example of Abraham to present his point? What is expected of the Christian because of his newly won freedom?

Ephesians: How does Paul's summary of the Christian faith in chapter 1 relate the Christian to God's plan for history? What is the role of Jesus in this plan? What is expected of the Christian (chapters 4—5) because of the gospel preached to him by Paul (chapters 3—4)? Are there any concrete ways in which the Christian can live out that calling (chapter 6)?

Philippians: Is there any indication that Paul had deep affection for the Philippian community? What motivation does he suggest one might have for preaching Christ? How does Paul use the example of Christ to invite this community to live selfless lives (chapter 2)? Does Paul suggest that there were members of the community who were living unchristian lives? Why has this been called the "epistle of joy"?

Colossians: How does Paul show the centrality of Christ in God's plan for the world? What does Paul mean by "the mystery hidden from ages"? Are there any practices which are incompatible with the Christian's life in Christ according to Paul? Why can this epistle be called a blueprint for Christian growth?

1 Thessalonians: Is there any indication that there was expected by this early Christian community an "immediate" second coming of Christ? How does Paul relate the community of the living to that of the dead through this event? Did Paul anticipate that Jesus would return soon?

2 Thessalonians: Has there occurred any change in attitude toward the Second Coming in this second letter to the Thessalonians? What does Paul add to the theology of the Second Coming?

1 Timothy: What recommendations are made to Timothy in ministering to the Church at Ephesus? What unusual practices had crept into the community (chapter 4)? How would you contrast the true teacher with the false teacher from the words of this epistle?

2 Timothy: What counsel does Timothy receive for his ministry in this epistle? What problems seem to exist in this community? What analogies are used in chapter 2 to inspire fidelity to Christ?

Titus: What strange doctrine is Titus warned about in this letter? What is Titus told to teach the different segments of the community? Is salvation a gift of God or is it earned (chapter 3)?

Philemon: What request is Paul really making of Philemon? In what way does the message of this letter have meaning for today?

Hebrews: What problem in the Christianity of his day was the author facing? Does the comparison of Christ with personalities of the Old Testament suggest an audience with which the writer was dealing? While all of these great figures of the Old Testament lived by faith, what was missing from their lives (chapter 11)? How is the journey of the Christian rewarded (chapter 12)? How would you summarize the meaning of Jesus for this author?

James: How does this book answer the question, How does one live the Christian life? Does the author's use of Abraham in chapter 2 compare with Paul's use of Abraham in Romans 4? Which is more important, faith or works?

1 Peter: What is expected of those who have found new life through baptism into the resurrection of Jesus? How does Christ serve as the model for Christian living? Is there any indication that the community was suffering persecution? What advice is given to them?

2 Peter: What blueprint does this letter provide for Christian growth? What arguments are used against lapsing from the faith? Why does the author emphasize vigilance and preparation for the last day? Is there anything in his own life which would have inspired such thinking?

1 John: What is the fellowship suggested by this letter, and how does one find it? How does one walk in the light? What does the author mean by "the world"? How can one discern who is a true prophet or teacher?

2 John: How does John suggest that one deal with those who bring a different teaching?

3 John: How does John suggest one deal with strangers? Does he indicate that his own have been accepted well by other communities? What would 1 and 2 John suggest about the unity of the early Christian communities?

Jude: How is this letter similar to 2 Peter? Is there any indication that there was dissension in the early community? What was to be done about it?

Revelation: In the vision of John, what is each church accused of and what is each praised for (chapter 2)? How does one determine who is worthy to open the scroll (chapter 5)? Who are those worthy to stand around the throne (chapter 7)? How is the war in chapter 12 a reflection of the war in the heavenly sphere and in the earthly sphere? Who are the good powers and who are the powers of evil? How is the conflict resolved? How is chapter 21 a chapter of hope for those who were suffering persecution? Where, according to the author, is God during this conflict? What does that say about his control of history?
